New Tension Stirred In Middle East By Russia

IN RUSTON

Accident Brings Death To Three Area Teenagers

RUSTON (Special)—Three Lincoln Parish teenagers are dead after an automobile accident here late Friday night.

Killed instantly were Miss Sandra Sue Tubbs, 14-year-old ninth grade Hico High School student, and Mrs. Alice Faye Farley Myers, 18, of Hico who was a student at Union Parish Trade School in Farmerville. Fatally injured was Miss Bobby Ruth Davis, 16-year-old tenth grade Hico High School student who died in Ruston Hospital about two hours after the 11:05 p.m. crash.

Mrs. Myers was the wife of Carl W. Myers who is stationed with the U.S. Air Force on Okinawa.

The accident occurred on Farmerville Highway a short distance from its intersection with U.S Highway 80 on the eastern edge of Ruston when the 1955 model hard-top sedan owned by Mrs. Myers went out of control, overturned several times and threw out its three occupants. The accident involved the parked automobile of a Ruston resident. However officials had made no statement last night regarding who was driving.

The bodies of Miss Tubbs and Mrs. Meyers were at Kilpatrick Funeral Home in Ruston. The body of Miss Davis was transfer-

Photographer Admits Killing Young Mother

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (UP) — A baby photographer today confessed he took pictures of a little girl and then beat, strangled and stabbed her 16-year-old mother before continuing his house-to-house assignments.

Denies Sex Motive

Stacey, a father of two children, denied there was a sex motive behind the attack. "Rape wasn't on my mind at any time," he told authorities.

Thomas Todd, 19, husband of the woman, said Stacey "will get what's coming to him" when he was informed of the confession.

"He took a wife from me and a mother from the baby," Todd said, "It's the rottenest thing anyone could do."

It was Stacey's business card, confirming a picture appointment for Van Gogh Studio, his employers, which tripped him up.

Police Find Card

Police picked him up for questioning after finding the card. Although Stacey recounted his itinerary for the day, he was enable to convince police of reasons for scratches on his arm and nose, and apparent blood stains on his shoes and trousers cuffs.

Finally, confronted by a blood-stained sports shirt found in his apartment, Stacey blurted out, "I hit her," and confessed.

Stacey confessed he went to the apartment and took six pictures of the baby, six-month-old Karen Lynn, Police Capt. Herbert Barnes said. Then he began to pack and leave, when he suddenly "had an urge to hit" Mrs. Todd, Barnes said.

"I don't know why I did it," Stacey said. "I just wanted to hit her."

Attorney Says 14th Amendment Illegally Okayed

ALEXANDRIA, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—A New Orleans attorney said today that the 14th amendment to the U. S. constitution, alleged basis for the series of U. S. Supreme Court decisions on interracial issues, was illegally placed into the constitution.

Walter Suthon Jr. told the final session of the seventh annual Conference of Local Bar Associations the amendment was inserted "in flagrant violation of recognized procedures."

Suthon said the "voice of the people of the South went unheard" in the controversy over enactment of the 14th amendment by a punitive - minded Congress after the Civil War.

Southern senators and representatives were illegally restrained from taking seats, Suthon said, where they would have denied a two-thirds majority of the bill. Also, he said, when qualified state legislatures of the South refused approval of the measure, they were swiftly discharged and their seats filled by a public government that could only accept the demands of military masters.

The 14th amendment, in part,

U.S. Auditor Charges Aid Funds Wasted

Military Aid Program Rapped By GOP Official

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (UP)—Congress' chief auditor has reported to Congress that the Army and the Air Force are squandering weapons and funds for the multi-billion dollar military aid program.

The General Accounting Office (GAO) accused the Army and Air Force of sending too much military hardware to some allies and not enough to others. It called for immediate action to stop waste in the foreign aid program.

Comp roller General Joseph Campbell, chief of the GAO, sent the agency's report to Vice President Richard M. Nixon, presiding officer of the Senate, and to Speaker Sam Rayburn, presiding officer of the House.

Copy Of Report Made

A copy of the report was made available to the United Press today.

The report summed up the GAO's findings in an extensive investigation of the military aid program in nine countries — France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Korea, Pakistan, Spain, Formosa (Taiwan) and Turkey.

Three Children Burned To Death

MER ROUGE (Special)—Three small Negro children were burned beyond recognition early yesterday morning near here when a spark from an open fireplace turned their bedroom into a funeral pyre. They were the children of Primes and Deloris McClendon.

Scene of the fire was the Joe Davenport farm two and one-half miles east of here on U. S. Highway 165.

The dead were identified as Deloris, five; Janie Lee, three, and Primes, Jr., two.

The injured were Mary Alice, seven, who listed as being in painful, but not serious condition, and the father, Primes McClendon, about 35, also hospitalized at Garnier Clinic at Bastrop. His condition was reported as serious. He suffered arm and leg burns.

According to investigating authorities the older sister and the father fought to get through a wall of fire to the children. Firemen said the children probably were already dead at the time.

The mother, and a six - month - old daughter, Georgia, were not injured.

Mer Rouge and Bastrop firemen reconstructed details of the tragedy. A spark from the unscreened fire place where the children were sleeping ignited the wooden floor about 3 a.m., they said. It spread quickly.

Mary Alice, who was sleeping in one of the three bedrooms, awoke to find flames engulfing the house. She shouted, awakening other members of the family, then pounded open the door to the burning room, only to be pushed back by fire.

McClendon dashed into the flames in an attempt to get his children, but was forced back. Meanwhile, the mother had fled the burning building with the infant.

Whipple Says Red Education Is Cause

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (AP)—Dr. Fred L. Whipple, who heads America's Moonwatch on the Sputniks, today said Russian education—not spies and saboteurs—is responsible for the Soviet Union's lead in the space race.

"The important point about the satellites is the rate of progress by the Russians. Their rate of progress is greater than our rate of progress," said Dr. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass.

"You have no way in which you can blame spies and saboteurs for their advance."

Dr. Whipple told the closing session of the Associated Press Managing Editors Assn's. annual convention that Russia turns out scientists and technicians at twice our rate.

"I don't feel that we're so far behind that the immediate situation is so dangerous," the scientist said. "But it is the situation that is developing. In a short time—in a few years—the differential is going to be extremely serious."

Dr. Whipple added: "Until the time comes when the Phi Beta Kappa has the same social standing as the football player, we are going to fall behind in our technological race with the U.S.S.R."

Violence In Cuba Breaks Out Again

HAVANA, Nov. 23 (UP)— Rebels today shot and killed the Cuban army commander and his aide in Holguin, second largest city of rebellious Oriente province. The army was reported "taking reprisals."

An army communique announced "other deaths in civilian and military ranks," but did not elaborate. At least one of the attackers was believed either captured or killed.

Dispatches filtering through heavy censorship to Tavana said Col. Fermin Cowley and his aide were cut down as they were leaving their automobile. Men in two cars approaching from opposite ends of the street opened fire with automatic weapons.

Army Confirms Shootings

The army confirmed the shootings in a brief communique which reported that "order is complete in the (Holguin) region. . .and in the rest of the republic.

The reports from Holguin itself gave few details and identity of the attackers was not immediately revealed.

Holguin and Santiago de Cuba, largest city in the province, have been under heavy army guard as a result of the a'most year-old revolt by rebel chieftain Fidel Castro in the mountains of the province in southeastern Cuba.

Cowley apparently was high on the rebel's list. He was known as a relentless foe. Troops under his command wiped out a 16-man rebel force last May at Cabooni-ico.

He ruled the Holguin region with a firm hand and was accused by rebels of having ordered the "executions" of 23 persons in the Holguin area last December, shortly after Castro and his band landed near Santiago de Cuba from Mexico.

Cowley had been promoted to the rank of colonel only a few months ago. At one time he had been assigned to the post of military attache in the Cuban embassy at Washington.

Another State Flu Wave Seen; Cold Is Cited

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23—UP—The Louisiana state Health department said today another wave of flu, may hit the state during the current cold weather spell.

Dr. Ben Freedman, director of preventive medicine with the department, said influenza cases have reached their peak in north and western parts of the state and should soon begin to decline.

But he said if the usual pattern prevails, Louisiana may expect another wave of flu now that cooler weather has moved into the state.

Freedman said the number of deaths in Louisiana attributed to flu since July 31, 1957, has reached 47, much higher than in previous years. But he said a decline has been great in November.

Some deaths were caused by Asian flu, he said, but only three cases were definitely proved to be Asian flu through autopsies.

Freedman said a National Health survey, based on a sampling of households, indicated that since mid-July about 750,000 persons have had influenza in Louisiana.

He said that for the first six months of 1957 the incidence of influenza in the state was running below previous years.

Rain And Warmer Weather Forecast

The area had a high yesterday of 46 degrees and a low of 37.

Partly cloudy and warmer is the Arkansas outlook for today.

Three States' Farmers Face Dark Future

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—The financial outlook of most farmers in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, as pictured by the Agriculture Department, isn't bright.

Generally speaking, the department reported, the financial condition of farmers in the area ranges from unchanged to poorer than last year.

The financial condition of dairy and beef producers in the area, said the report, is moderately better than last year but many crop farmers suffered from unusually heavy rains during the early flowering season.

Delayed plantings, together with excessive rain in some sections during the early fall, said the report, "have increased production costs and have made harvesting of cotton and other crops late."

Heavy damage in southern Louisiana as a result of hurricane Audrey was noted.

Because of the high cost of producing the 1957 cotton crop, the department said, there was considerable demand for short-term operating credit. It added that the soil bank program, among other actors, tended to decrease the need for credit.

"Diverse factors affect the demand for farm mortgage credit but on balance, it may have de-

9 Persons Die In Rock Slide

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 23—(UP)—A canning community 400 miles north of here was almost completely cut off from the outside world today by storms and a huge rock slide that apparently killed nine persons.

One was known dead and eight others trapped in smashed houses were presumed to have been killed.

Fragmentary reports on the disaster, which happened Friday, were sent out by amateur radio operators. They reported rescuers searching for the eight missing persons were forced to stop digging because of threats of new landslides.

An avalanche of huge boulders roared down a mountainside in Prince Rupert, a town of 10,000 population, during a heavy wind and rainstorm, sweeping three houses into a creek.

City, Parish Schools To Close This Week

City and parish schools will be closed every day this week, according to school board officials here.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday classes will be recessed due to meetings of the Louisiana Teachers Convention in Shreveport. Thursday and Friday are Thanksgiving holidays.

FOR 11 PARISHES

'Disaster Area' Tag Requested

DELHI (Special) — Louisiana Delta Council has recommended that an 11-parish section in Northeast Louisiana be designated as a disaster area due to continued excessive rainfall hampering crop harvesting and resulting in heavy financial losses, it was announced yesterday.

Requests for assistance in this emergency are being forwarded to state congressional delegation, agricultural officials and Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson.

Parishes recommended for emergency federal credit assistance are: Catahoula, Caldwell, Ouachita, Morehouse, Richland, Franklin, Concordia, West Carroll, East Carroll, Madison and Tensas.

Council president Joseph Curry, St. Joseph, declared: "Without emergency assistance, a large majority of farmers are definitely going to be unable to pay off their current obligations due to one of the wettest years in our experience. The help needed is in the form of both money and commodities."

Estimated

It is estimated that this section of Louisiana has already suffered a $15 - million loss in anticipated 1957 cotton revenue alone, states Delta Council manager Harvey P. Grant, Jr., Delhi.

In emphasizing the impact of this loss, he pointed out that the area cotton allotment is 271,766 acres apportioned to 12,329 farms. There are 10,315 farms, 84 per cent of the total, which have cotton acreage allotments under 25 acres.

The emergency credit assistance requested is extended through the Farmers Home Administration and consists principally of 1958 crop loans to those farmers who

ROSE BOWL RIVALS

Oregon Falls; Ohio State Rips Michigan

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press

Oregon will play in the Rose Bowl, all right, but it won't be the way the Ducks wanted it.

They lost the final game of the season yesterday, a 10-7 decision to arch-rival Oregon State and were deprived of outright possession of the Pacific Coast Conference championship.

Oregon State, the defending titlist, tied the Ducks for the crown, but can't play in the Rose Bowl two years in a row. So that leaves it for Oregon to try to stop powerful Ohio State of the Big Ten.

The Buckeyes, who last week clinched their Rose Bowl berth, were in no mood to let up and crushed Michigan, 31-14, to conclude their third perfect conference record in four years.

The Buckeyes will rate heavy favorites when they play Oregon on Jan. 1

The other major bowls are clouded in indecision, if not confusion.

For example, North Carolina upset Duke, 21-13, and set the Atlantic Coast Conference bigwigs to rubbing their chins. Had the Blue Devils won the game, they would have been the conference champions.

But their defeat, coupled with North Carolina State's 29-26 victory over South Carolina, gave the Wolfpack the crown. NC State is

Reds Claim New 'Plots' By Israeli

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UP)—The Soviet Union stirred new tension in the Middle East today with charges that the western powers were hatching a "new imperialistic plot" with Israel against the Arabs.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said the "plot" was being planned in secret talks in Tel Aviv and the western capitals.

Israeli spokesman Saul Ramati in Tel Aviv said a tractor driver and two armed Arabs exchanged fire in the Jordan valley and that 90 minutes later another Israeli was attacked near the village of Beisan on the Jordan border.

Kill Two Hitchhikers

Israeli officials said the shootings and the killing of two Israeli hitchhickers near Petra, inside Jordan, probably were Jordan's retaliation for the alleged seizure of a Jordanian farmer Thursday.

In other Middle East developments:

—Two special royal emissaries returned to Amman from Saudi Arabia and Lebanon, where sources said they delivered messages from King Hussein to King Saud of Saudi Arabia and President Iskander Mizra of Pakistan, who is visiting Beirut. Sources said Hussein wanted a confirmation of their support in the face of continued propaganda attacks by Egypt and Syria

—Jordanian troops continued to halt Israeli convoys to the Israeli settlement of Mt. Scopus inside Jordan in a dispute over gasoline shipments to the enclave.

Begin Round Of Talks

—Four members of the U. S. House of Representatives began a round of talks with Eyptian officials in Cairo today. The three congressmen and one congresswoman met with Abdel Latif Boghdady, speaker of the national assembly, and with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi.

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UP)—Sputnik I's fellow - traveling rocket nose cone streaked towards fiery oblivion today like a shooting star. Some British scientists said it already may have disintegrated in a puff of flame.

Prof. Alfred C. B. Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank observatory, said the rocket had reached its "critical time."

He said it had become so erratic on its elliptical course, dipping towards the earth's atmosphere that experts no longer could plot its path.

Another State Flu Wave Seen; Cold Is Cited

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23—UP—The Louisiana state Health department said today another wave of flu, may hit the state during the current cold weather spell.

Dr. Ben Freedman, director of preventive medicine with the department, said influenza cases have reached their peak in north and western parts of the state and should soon begin to decline.

But he said if the usual pattern prevails, Louisiana may expect another wave of flu now that cooler weather has moved into the state.

Freedman said the number of deaths in Louisiana attributed to flu since July 31, 1957, has reached 47, much higher than in previous years. But he said a decline has been great in November.

Some deaths were caused by Asian flu, he said, but only three cases were definitely proved to be Asian flu through autopsies.

Freedman said a National Health survey, based on a sampling of households, indicated that since mid-July about 750,000 persons have had influenza in Louisiana.

He said that for the first six months of 1957 the incidence of influenza in the state was running below previous years.

Rain And Warmer Weather Forecast

The area had a high yesterday of 46 degrees and a low of 37.

Partly cloudy and warmer is the Arkansas outlook for today.

Three States' Farmers Face Dark Future

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—The financial outlook of most farmers in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, as pictured by the Agriculture Department, isn't bright.

Generally speaking, the department reported, the financial condition of farmers in the area ranges from unchanged to poorer than last year.

The financial condition of dairy and beef producers in the area, said the report, is moderately better than last year but many crop farmers suffered from unusually heavy rains during the early flowering season.

Delayed plantings, together with excessive rain in some sections during the early fall, said the report, "have increased production costs and have made harvesting of cotton and other crops late."

Heavy damage in southern Louisiana as a result of hurricane Audrey was noted.

Because of the high cost of producing the 1957 cotton crop, the department said, there was considerable demand for short-term operating credit. It added that the soil bank program, among other actors, tended to decrease the need for credit.

"Diverse factors affect the demand for farm mortgage credit but on balance, it may have de-

9 Persons Die In Rock Slide

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 23—(UP)—A canning community 400 miles north of here was almost completely cut off from the outside world today by storms and a huge rock slide that apparently killed nine persons.

One was known dead and eight others trapped in smashed houses were presumed to have been killed.

Fragmentary reports on the disaster, which happened Friday, were sent out by amateur radio operators. They reported rescuers searching for the eight missing persons were forced to stop digging because of threats of new landslides.

An avalanche of huge boulders roared down a mountainside in Prince Rupert, a town of 10,000 population, during a heavy wind and rainstorm, sweeping three houses into a creek.

City and parish schools will be closed every day this week, according to school board officials here.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday classes will be recessed due to meetings of the Louisiana Teachers Convention in Shreveport. Thursday and Friday are Thanksgiving holidays.

FOR 11 PARISHES

'Disaster Area' Tag Requested

DELHI (Special) — Louisiana Delta Council has recommended that an 11-parish section in Northeast Louisiana be designated as a disaster area due to continued excessive rainfall hampering crop harvesting and resulting in heavy financial losses, it was announced yesterday.

Requests for assistance in this emergency are being forwarded to state congressional delegation, agricultural officials and Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson.

Parishes recommended for emergency federal credit assistance are: Catahoula, Caldwell, Ouachita, Morehouse, Richland, Franklin, Concordia, West Carroll, East Carroll, Madison and Tensas.

Council president Joseph Curry, St. Joseph, declared: "Without emergency assistance, a large majority of farmers are definitely going to be unable to pay off their current obligations due to one of the wettest years in our experience. The help needed is in the form of both money and commodities."

Estimated

It is estimated that this section of Louisiana has already suffered a $15 - million loss in anticipated 1957 cotton revenue alone, states Delta Council manager Harvey P. Grant, Jr., Delhi.

In emphasizing the impact of this loss, he pointed out that the area cotton allotment is 271,766 acres apportioned to 12,329 farms. There are 10,315 farms, 84 per cent of the total, which have cotton acreage allotments under 25 acres.

The emergency credit assistance requested is extended through the Farmers Home Administration and consists principally of 1958 crop loans to those farmers who

With initial contributions of $150 the News-Star and Morning World initiates in this issue, the 1957 campaign for Good Fellows. These campaigns instituted to bring a bit of cheer into less fortunates local homes has been instituted for years here. This year, however, there is a new and highly important angle. It is the idea of the project to be ranked as a Community Enterprise and to encourage every business house in Monroe and West Monroe to make a donation.

The Jaycees joined the newspapers here last year, eager to do their bit in this project and a few days ago the West Monroe Jaycees, newly-organized, voted to carry on a Good Fellows line in West Monroe. With the same idea in its operation in Monroe both communities can be welded into one as together Jaycees of Monroe and West Monroe and the newspapers to make the undertaking one in which all will have a part of importance.

It is suggested that the Jaycees in Monroe, like those in West Monroe, will make it

ROSE BOWL RIVALS

Oregon Falls; Ohio State Rips Michigan

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press

Oregon will play in the Rose Bowl, all right, but it won't be the way the Ducks wanted it.

They lost the final game of the season yesterday, a 10-7 decision to arch-rival Oregon State and were deprived of outright possession of the Pacific Coast Conference championship.

Oregon State, the defending titlist, tied the Ducks for the crown, but can't play in the Rose Bowl two years in a row. So that leaves it for Oregon to try to stop powerful Ohio State of the Big Ten.

The Buckeyes, who last week clinched their Rose Bowl berth, were in no mood to let up and crushed Michigan, 31-14, to conclude their third perfect conference record in four years.

The Buckeyes will rate heavy favorites when they play Oregon on Jan. 1

The other major bowls are clouded in indecision, if not confusion.

For example, North Carolina upset Duke, 21-13, and set the Atlantic Coast Conference bigwigs to rubbing their chins. Had the Blue Devils won the game, they would have been the conference champions.

But their defeat, coupled with North Carolina State's 29-26 victory over South Carolina, gave the Wolfpack the crown. NC State is

Reds Claim New 'Plots' By Israeli

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UP)—The Soviet Union stirred new tension in the Middle East today with charges that the western powers were hatching a "new imperialistic plot" with Israel against the Arabs.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said the "plot" was being planned in secret talks in Tel Aviv and the western capitals.

Israeli spokesman Saul Ramati in Tel Aviv said a tractor driver and two armed Arabs exchanged fire in the Jordan valley and that 90 minutes later another Israeli was attacked near the village of Beisan on the Jordan border.

Kill Two Hitchhikers

Israeli officials said the shootings and the killing of two Israeli hitchhickers near Petra, inside Jordan, probably were Jordan's retaliation for the alleged seizure of a Jordanian farmer Thursday.

In other Middle East developments:

—Two special royal emissaries returned to Amman from Saudi Arabia and Lebanon, where sources said they delivered messages from King Hussein to King Saud of Saudi Arabia and President Iskander Mizra of Pakistan, who is visiting Beirut. Sources said Hussein wanted a confirmation of their support in the face of continued propaganda attacks by Egypt and Syria

—Jordanian troops continued to halt Israeli convoys to the Israeli settlement of Mt. Scopus inside Jordan in a dispute over gasoline shipments to the enclave.

Begin Round Of Talks

—Four members of the U. S. House of Representatives began a round of talks with Eyptian officials in Cairo today. The three congressmen and one congresswoman met with Abdel Latif Boghdady, speaker of the national assembly, and with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi.

Sputnik's Nose Cone Streaking Toward Oblivion

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UP)—Sputnik I's fellow - traveling rocket nose cone streaked towards fiery oblivion today like a shooting star. Some British scientists said it already may have disintegrated in a puff of flame.

Britain's giant radio telescope at Jodrell Bank lost track of the cylindrical-shaped rocket after 49 days of whirling about the earth on an orbit 560 miles in space.

Prof. Alfred C. B. Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank observatory, said the rocket had reached its "critical time."

He said it had become so erratic on its elliptical course, dipping towards the earth's atmosphere that experts no longer could plot its path.

Its disintegration would leave the two Sputniks still hurtling silently through the heavens at speeds around 18,000 mph. There

NE Is Sending 2 To LTA Meeting

Northeast State is sending two delegates to Shreveport for the Louisiana Teachers Association which opens today at 4 p.m. and closes Wednesday following a general convocation beginning at 9 a.m.

Elected to represent the college are A. S. Huffman, associate professor and head of health and physical education, and Charles M. Tillman, instructor and director elementary education student teaching.

Alternates are Mrs. Florence Z. Allbritton, assistant professor of music, and Lamar E. Rogers, instructor in mechanical drawing.

The 63rd annual convention will begin with a vesper service at the First Baptist Church, announced Mrs. Ione Aden Hill, of Monroe, president of the LTA.

General and group sessions are scheduled throughout the program.

Faculty Participates

Three Northeast faculty members will participate in the sessions devoted to special fields of study.

George C. Brian, assistant professor of speech, will take part i the Louisiana Speech Association section of the convention scheduled Tuesday. He will discuss audio-visual aids available to speech teachers, with special emphasis on motion picture productions in colleges.

Mrs. Allbritton will take part in the Louisiana Music Education Association section of the convention. She was invited to participate in Tuesday's piano, section which will be headed by Nena Plant Wideman oi Shreveport. Mrs. Allbritton will underscore the place of etudes in piano study. She plans to present a keyboard demonstration lecture.

Mrs. Er. Davis, instructor in home economics, will meet with other members of the executive council of the Louisiana Home Economics Association to formulate the spring program of the organization which will meet in Monroe on March 14-15 of the coming year.

Dr. Robert Fleming of New York will speak at Monday's sectional LHEA meeting of which Mrs. Davis is chairman.

Special Recognition

Northeast will receive recognition in having Philip Lisotta, president of the college chapter of Student National Education Association as a platform guest of the convention.

James W. Parkerson, vice president of the Louisiana Speech Association, was in charge of this section's program. Parkerson is assistant professor of speech at Northeast.

Public schools here will be closed this week to allow teachers to attend the convention.

Pesky Opossums Unwelcome Guests

A Monroe resident is being pestered to opossums that have lodged themselves in a small crevice between her patio roof and house eaves. The animals cause a constant racket, and she can't figure any way to get rid of them.

Mrs. Earlie Ball, 104 Vernon street, has tried everything, from spraying an aerosol bomb into the dark opening to sitting on the roof at three in the morning, waiting for the pesky opossume to come out and be executed .... but to no use.

Mrs. Barbara White, who also lives at the same address, cornered one of the animals in the garden three weeks ago and killed it - but evidently Mrs. Opossum and some young 'uns still live in their apartment section of the modern home.

"They came about five months ago. At first we used to hear footsteps on the leaves out in the yard - we'd turn on the light, and there would go a opossum, scurrying over the wall into LTI," Mrs. Ball revealed.

"At first we thought it was cute. Now I wish we'd killed them before they got into the house," she added.

The unpleasant animals have the habit of being quiet until about 3 a.m - then they start banging on the wall, scratching and biting at it.

"We almost wish they'd dig their way through the wall - at least then we could get rid of them. This way, it's just a constant nerve - wracking experience," she explained.

Until one died three weeks ago, the opossums would go out at night, evidently for food, and then come back in - and fight.

"They'd hiss at each other and bang around the place. Evidently one would get in the other's place, then the war would start. It's been slightly quieter with only one large one in there, but from the commotion that we hear through the wall, there must be some babies also," Mrs. Ball stated.

The backyard at the home is also the place where approximately 12 neighborhood cats spend their recreation time. "We'd put out poison to get rid of the varmints, but a cat would probably get into it, and I'll never be accused of hurting a cat," she mentioned, adding that she'd put out a trap - only "how do you get a opossum out of a trap?"

"I'd give anything to know how to get rid of those animals before they wreck the place," she added. Anyone have any suggestions?

their business to go to every business house in their respective cities and give opportunity for a donation, large or small. Those who donate, and doubtless all will contribute as they see the need, will have a sticker of some sort to place in their store window to show they have participated in this great community project.

We believe if all work together that this year's Good Fellows will go to far greater bounds than ever before.

Of course the Jaycee Janes will also have their duties. We anticipate they will make the investigations at the homes to see that only those who really need aid are included.

Pay-Off

At this time of the year the two banking companies of Monroe and West Monroe pay off the money paid in the past 11 months in the Christmas Savings fund. Both the Central Savings Bank and Trust company and the Ouachita National bank have had a fruitful year. Both have larger accounts paid in than usual.

The Central bank is at the time mailing out Christmas club checks and the sum this time is $245,438, which exceeds that of a year ago by $33,-438.

"May you enjoy these savings to the fullest!" is the salutation enclosed in a little note sent each depositor.

Baseball

Baseball fans will read with interest the current number of Saturday Evening Post which tells of the role played by George S. Halas who, before he ended coaching had the professional baseball record of 368 victories, 117 defeats and 27 tied games. This author and the immortals, the Chicago Bears, helped to bring the game up from back lots to big time pay. All this is told in the story.

Disaster Area Designation Is Requested

failed to repay loans in 1957 and are unable to obtain credit from other sources.

In addition to the loans, counties designated as disaster areas become eligible for assistance in the form of distribution of surplus foods. These consist chiefly of flour, cornmeal, rice, non - fat dry milk and cheese. The parish police juries distribute the free foods and pay the costs involved.

Grant said that cotton losses are reportedly running as high as 40 per cent in some sections. The portion of the crop still remaining on the stalk following high winds and heavy rains has been damaged severely in quality.

Prices Drop

He estimated that farmers have suffered a loss of 6-8 cents per pound as a result and that improved weather conditions won't help this drastic situation.

In addition, the harvesting of soybeans and corn has suffered heavy losses from continued delaying heavy rains. Farmers are far behind normal in their sowing of small grains because the soggy ground has prevented planting.

Abnormal 1957 weather resulted in a short cotton growing season influenced by a late frost in the spring and an early fall frost coupled with general unfavorable temperatures and little sunshine. Frequent record - breaking rains occurred about half the time, Grant said. Much heavier than normal rainfall has been forecast in this area for the period November 15-December 15.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture on September 1 estimated the 1957 cotton crop at 12,713,000 bales with an average yield of 446 pounds to the acre. On November 1, the estimate was reduced to 11,788,000 bales with an average acre yield of 413 pounds. The December 1 estimate will reflect a further decline, Grant says.

In Mississippi, 62 counties are reportedly being considered for designation as disaster areas. Eight counties were designated on November 20. The Mississippi House of Representatives on November 18 passed a resolution asking Secretary Benson to designate the entire state a disaster area. The resolution quoted Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture Corley as stating that adverse weather had reduced $100 - million from the state's calculated $350 - million cotton harvest since the September 1 estimate.

Science Displays Scheduled Here

The Northeast Louisiana Science Exposition will be held December 13 at Northeast State under sponsorship of the college's Science Department.

All high schools in this area have been invited to participate in the project which is scheduled from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., according to Emmett J. Foster, Department head. No registration fee is required.

Displays and demonstrations will be prepared by Northeast and numerous indistries in this section of the state. Purpose of the program is to indicate opportunities which science holds for students as a profession.

The college has featured for several years a Research for a Day in which both Northeast and industry participated for the benefit of future scientists. The forthcoming Northeast Louisiana Science Exposition will mark the first project on the campus in which industry has been asked to take such a major part, Foster said.

Guest Participants

Exhibits and demonstrations by guest participants will include displays of latest developments in telephone facilities; the production of carbon black and the extent of research on rubber qualities. There will be an exhibit on heart research and a display on public health and sanitation.

Displays and demonstrations will tell the story of medical technology, and there will be a miniature model of an atomic power plant.

Northeast's Science Department will have such exhibits as: chemistry, physics, geology, biology, and medicine.

High school students may participate in advance work in connection with several of these projects such as blood typing, running analyses in chemistry, preparing organic chemicals, identifying rocks, electroplating, and steel bluing guns for appearance and anti-rust.

Two research projects now underway on the Northeast campus will give students insight into biological research, Foster pointed out. He referred to Dr. Robert E. Gordon's problem which deals with vertebrates and Dr. Hansell F. Cross' work pertaining to parasites.

Exhibits and demonstrations will be housed in the Administration Building and the Science Building, and portable displays will be placed between buildings.

Attorney Says 14th Amendment Illegally Okayed

declares that no state shall "abridge the privileges" of citizens or deny "the equal protection of the laws."

Suthon said the high court's racial decisions "greviously violated" the constitutional rights of white persons when the justices relied on sociological concepts rather than legislative enactments.

"There is an amazing contrast between the apparent concern of the court over the danger of injury, particularly intangible injury, to Negro children by segregated schools as contrasted with the apparent lack of concern respecting possible injury to white children from the effects of enforced racial integration," Suthon said.

In cases involving amusement facilities, the attorney said, the compulsory integration orders can only be explained by the theory that "the court apparently considers that the only choice to which white persons are entitled is that between doing without the recreations and amusements to which they have become accustomed, or else sharing the mandatorily integrated facilities with Negroes."

Suthon said the equalizer being applied by the court in the interracial issues doesn't allow white children to amuse themselves under circumstances they and their parents prefer, but demands integration where Negro children and their parents are not content with separate facilities.

Foreign Model Car Is Found In Ditch

The vehicle, which fitted neatly between the embankments, was sitting in several inches of water. Police decided to leave the small auto in its resting place until the owner was found. No one was near the car when it was discovered, and evidently no injuries occurred in the mishap.

their business to go to every business house in their respective cities and give opportunity for a donation, large or small. Those who donate, and doubtless all will contribute as they see the need, will have a sticker of some sort to place in their store window to show they have participated in this great community project.

We believe if all work together that this year's Good Fellows will go to far greater bounds than ever before.

Of course the Jaycee Janes will also have their duties. We anticipate they will make the investigations at the homes to see that only those who really need aid are included.

Pay-Off

At this time of the year the two banking companies of Monroe and West Monroe pay off the money paid in the past 11 months in the Christmas Savings fund. Both the Central Savings Bank and Trust company and the Ouachita National bank have had a fruitful year. Both have larger accounts paid in than usual.

The Central bank is at the time mailing out Christmas club checks and the sum this time is $245,438, which exceeds that of a year ago by $33,438.

"May you enjoy these savings to the fullest!" is the salutation enclosed in a little note sent each depositor.

Baseball

Baseball fans will read with interest the current number of Saturday Evening Post which tells of the role played by George S. Halas who, before he ended coaching had the professional baseball record of 368 victories, 117 defeats and 27 tied games. This author and the immortals, the Chicago Bears, helped to bring the game up from back lots to big time pay. All this is told in the story.

Disaster Area Designation Is Requested

In addition to the loans, counties designated as disaster areas become eligible for assistance in the form of distribution of surplus foods. These consist chiefly of flour, cornmeal, rice, non - fat dry milk and cheese. The parish police juries distribute the free foods and pay the costs involved.

Grant said that cotton losses are reportedly running as high as 40 per cent in some sections. The portion of the crop still remaining on the stalk following high winds and heavy rains has been damaged severely in quality.

Prices Drop

He estimated that farmers have suffered a loss of 6-8 cents per pound as a result and that improved weather conditions won't help this drastic situation.

In addition, the harvesting of soybeans and corn has suffered heavy losses from continued delaying heavy rains. Farmers are far behind normal in their sowing of small grains because the soggy ground has prevented planting.

Abnormal 1957 weather resulted in a short cotton growing season influenced by a late frost in the spring and an early fall frost coupled with general unfavorable temperatures and little sunshine. Frequent record - breaking rains occurred about half the time, Grant said. Much heavier than normal rainfall has been forecast in this area for the period November 15-December 15.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture on September 1 estimated the 1957 cotton crop at 12,713,000 bales with an average yield of 446 pounds to the acre. On November 1, the estimate was reduced to 11,788,000 bales with an average acre yield of 413 pounds. The December 1 estimate will reflect a further decline, Grant says.

In Mississippi, 62 counties are reportedly being considered for designation as disaster areas. Eight counties were designated on November 20. The Mississippi House of Representatives on November 18 passed a resolution asking Secretary Benson to designate the entire state a disaster area. The resolution quoted Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture Corley as stating that adverse weather had reduced $100 - million from the state's calculated $350 - million cotton harvest since the September 1 estimate.

Auto Recovered By Texas Police

A new Lincoln auto, stolen from Monroe Friday night, was recovered by police in San Antonio, Tex., yesterday. A. L. Robitch of the San Antonio police force notified H. H. Horne of Jackson Motors that the car had been found, and two suspects apprehended.

The car was taken between 6:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday morning from the Jackson Motors car lot in Monroe. Horne notified Monroe police, who sent out an all-points bulletin on the vehicle.

ATOMIC OFFER MADE

KARACHI, Pakistan (UP)— The United States has offered Pakistan $350,000 toward the building of an atomic reactor, U.S. Ambassador J. M. Langley disclosed Thursday night. Langley, in a speech at Dacca, said American aid was intended to maintain Pakistan's internal security and to protect it against external aggression.

NEXT MONTH

Science Displays Scheduled Here

The Northeast Louisiana Science Exposition will be held December 13 at Northeast State under sponsorship of the college's Science Department.

All high schools in this area have been invited to participate in the project which is scheduled from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., according to Emmett J. Foster, Department head. No registration fee is required.

Displays and demonstrations will be prepared by Northeast and numerous indistries in this section of the state. Purpose of the program is to indicate opportunities which science holds for students as a profession.

The college has featured for several years a Research for a Day in which both Northeast and industry participated for the benefit of future scientists. The forthcoming Northeast Louisiana Science Exposition will mark the first project on the campus in which industry has been asked to take such a major part, Foster said.

Guest Participants

Exhibits and demonstrations by guest participants will include displays of latest developments in telephone facilities; the production of carbon black and the extent of research on rubber qualities. There will be an exhibit on heart research and a display on public health and sanitation.

Displays and demonstrations will tell the story of medical technology, and there will be a miniature model of an atomic power plant.

Northeast's Science Department will have such exhibits as: chemistry, physics, geology, biology, and medicine.

High school students may participate in advance work in connection with several of these projects such as blood typing, running analyses in chemistry, preparing organic chemicals, identifying rocks, electroplating, and steel bluing guns for appearance and anti-rust.

Two research projects now underway on the Northeast campus will give students insight into biological research, Foster pointed out. He referred to Dr. Robert E. Gordon's problem which deals with vertebrates and Dr. Hansell F. Cross' work pertaining to parasites.

Exhibits and demonstrations will be housed in the Administration Building and the Science Building, and portable displays will be placed between buildings.

Attorney Says 14th Amendment Illegally Okayed

declares that no state shall "abridge the privileges" of citizens or deny "the equal protection of the laws."

Suthon said the high court's racial decisions "greviously violated" the constitutional rights of white persons when the justices relied on sociological concepts rather than legislative enactments.

"There is an amazing contrast between the apparent concern of the court over the danger of injury, particularly intangible injury, to Negro children by segregated schools as contrasted with the apparent lack of concern respecting possible injury to white children from the effects of enforced racial integration," Suthon said.

In cases involving amusement facilities, the attorney said, the compulsory integration orders can only be explained by the theory that "the court apparently considers that the only choice to which white persons are entitled is that between doing without the recreations and amusements to which they have become accustomed, or else sharing the mandatorily integrated facilities with Negroes."

Suthon said the equalizer being applied by the court in the interracial issues doesn't allow white children to amuse themselves under circumstances they and their parents prefer, but demands integration where Negro children and their parents are not content with separate facilities.

Foreign Model Car Is Found In Ditch

The vehicle, which fitted neatly between the embankments, was sitting in several inches of water. Police decided to leave the small auto in its resting place until the owner was found. No one was near the car when it was discovered, and evidently no injuries occurred in the mishap.

Reasonable Doubt

When a man is accused of murder and goes to trial the judge is required to instruct the jury that the defendant must be set free unless the evidence shows, beyond all reasonable doubt, that he is guilty.

This "reasonable doubt" phase of the law is guaranteed under the American Bill of Rights. It is not restricted to murder cases but is presumed to apply in all cases in which criminal charges have been filed. Its purpose is to prevent the conviction of an innocent person, on the theory that it is far better to acquit a guilty person than to convict one who is innocent.

This is the American system. It differs from the common practice in dictator countries, where the accepted view is that the guilty person must be punished, regardless of how many innocent people may also be required to pay the penalty. Mass punishment was one of the most common practices in Germany and Italy prior to and during World War II. The mass punishment system has been and is used in Russia.

There are times when the "reasonable doubt" right is not granted in the United States. This may be particularly true when a case is tried before a judge who follows a pre-determined course. Judge Ronald Davies of North Dakota reportedly did not even bother to hear evidence when he was trying contempt cases growing out of the Little Rock, Ark., integration controversy. He was sent there to do a job and did it.

Four other cases growing out of the Little Rock controversy have just been tried. They involved four Negro youths who said they were not attending school, either at the all-Negro Horace Mann High School or at the newly-integrated Central High School. These Negro youths were not accused of creating any kind of disturbance or of participating in any violence.

When rioting in Little Rock was at its height and afterward, when authorities were clamping down, raids were conducted for the purpose of arresting anyone who might be found carrying arms.

The four Negro youths were not accused of having a bona fide weapon in their possession but an implement described as a "haying tool" reportedly was found in their possession. The youths said they did not know the tool was in the car. This may or may not have been true. Certainly it could have been true as far as two or three of the defendants were concerned, since the owner of the car might have put the tool into the car without the knowledge of the others. It might have been there for a legitimate and innocent purpose.

Despite this fact, the judge found all of the defendants guilty, imposed fines of $25 each and suspended the fines. He doubtless figured they might be guilty and might not. That could have been his reason for suspending the fines. There is e v e r y appearance that the judge acted on the assumption of guilt and not on the assumption of innocence guaranteed in the bill of rights.

Suspension of the fines, so that the defendants were not forced to pay money or serve time, could not justify a conviction in which there was certainly not only reasonable doubt but strong doubt as to the defendants' guilt.

Often the penalty is the least part of the onus of a conviction. The money fine may be soon paid and forgotten and even a short jail term does not last long. This is not true of the conviction itself, which stands permanently against the record of the defendant. He is branded a criminal and if he should ever be suspected again this record will s t a n d against him.

Conviction in even the most minor case should not be returned if there is a reasonable doubt. No one who may be innocent should have the brand of a criminal applied to him.

Balanced Budget

There was a disquieting note in the President's speech at Oklahoma City on November 13, 1957. It was when he said that Americans "will not sacrifice security worshipping a balanced budget."

Now, there is nothing wrong at all in that statement by itself. It is in the implication contained therein that the disquieting factor lies; namely, that in order to provide ourselves with security, it may be necessary to sacrifice a balanced budget.

What the president should have made clear to the American people is that that alternative just is not there. Security can be provided along with a balanced budget, if the Administration and the Congress and the American people only have the will to do it that way.

In other words, the president should never have raised the question of a possibly unbalanced budget. He should have recommended increased expenditures for defense, if he thought they were necessary, under a balanced budget—and then, if it did not turn out that way, it would be the fault of the Congress and not of the Administration.

In fact, it is to be wondered just which "Americans" and how many of them the president was speaking for when he made this statement. The likelihood is that he was falling into the common error of so many politicians who claim their own attitudes as the attitudes of the "American people," and the president probably meant that the Administration "will not sacrifice security worshipping a balanced budget." How does he—or anyone else—know what "Americans" will do?

It is entirely true, of course, that our national security must be "first of all firsts" in this country, as the president pointed out. But neither the president nor ourselves must overlook the fact that a sound economy is a most essential part of national security. What we are trying to do is to preserve a way of life in this country, from all dangers everywhere, within and without. If we allow our economy to be destroyed, either by unwise fiscal management within or by pressure for additional expenditures from without, we can be quite sure our way of life will go right along with it—and that without a shot being fired. There is surely no sense in spending ourselves into bankruptcy in order to protect ourselves militarily.

It has been the open boast of the Communists that they will eventually cause us to spend ourselves into destruction—and we should never get the idea that this is not possible, for it certainly is. Continually rising national debt, continuous unbalanced budgets, continued inflation would all work together to destroy us, and then the Communists could take over without any risk on their part whatever. We would do the job for them.

The antidote, of course, is gradual reduction of the national debt, ranking the necessity for a balanced budget as an essential part of the "first of all firsts," and a return once more to an honest dollar. If, along with all this, we find it necessary to deny ourselves certain budgetary benefits to which we have become overlong accustomed, then let us face it. That is nothing more than any individual must do under similar circumstances.

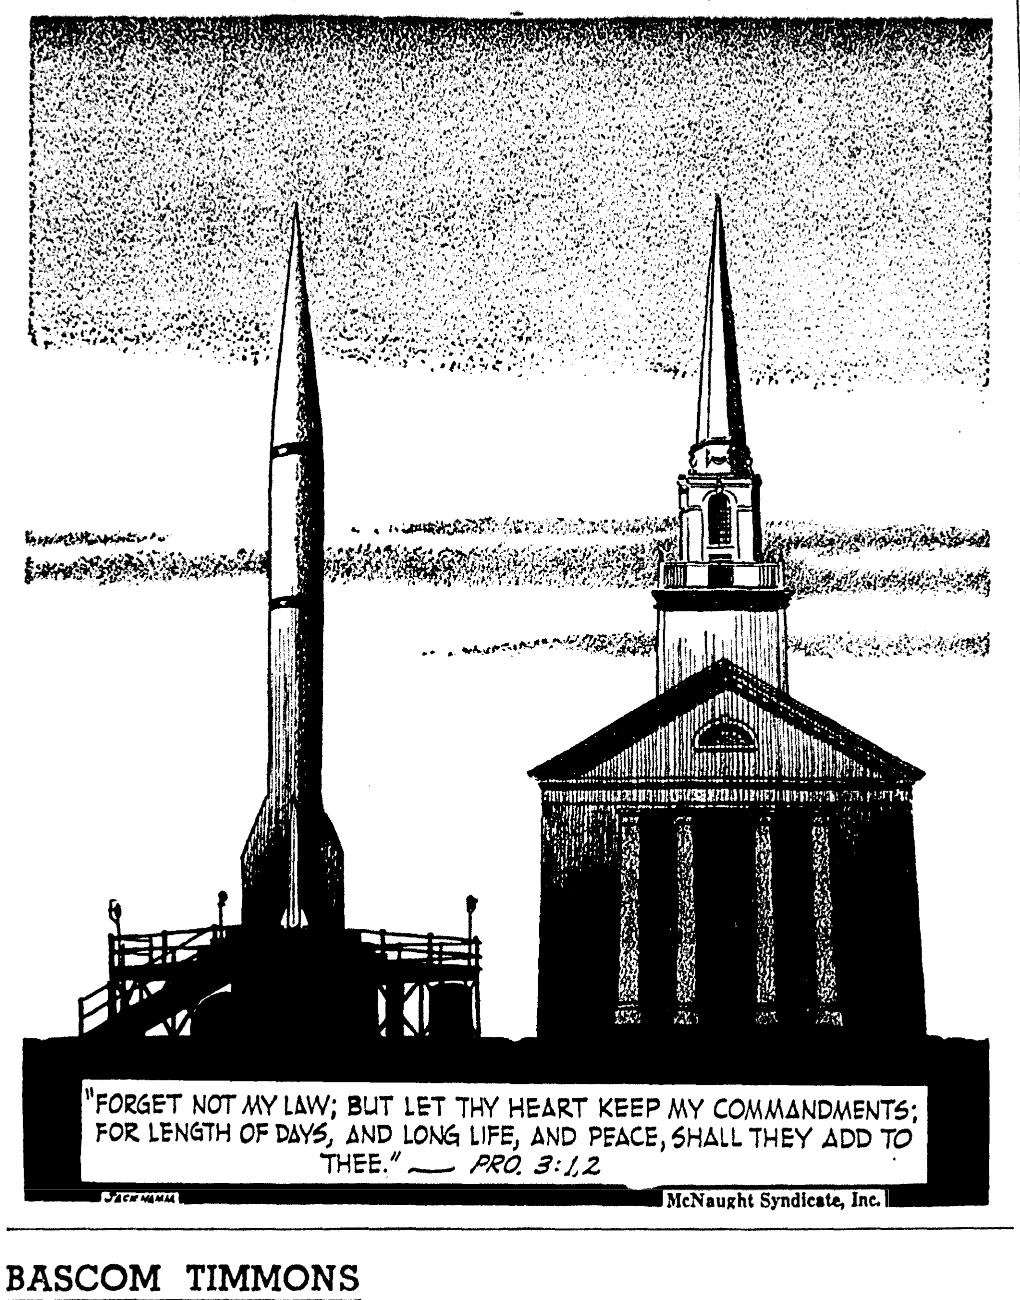
If we are presently at war with the Communists—and the president made it abundantly clear that we are—then let us recognize the fact that there can be no weakness anywhere along the front line, military, budgetary or otherwise. Let us recognize that it is a war of attrition, not to be fought and won quickly as might be the case if we were the aggressor but drawn out over m a n y years and requiring its full measure of "blood, sweat, and tears."

We can win the war if in the waging of it we observe the sound economic principles which have made us a great nation. We cannot win it if we lose our respect for a balanced budget. That respect is already to weak and has been for all too long.

President Eisenhower is, of course, correct in saying that morality can't be effected by law. One of the first set of laws established to this end are still being often and widely broken.

"Mother of Three Children Decides to Marry Their Father." —Headline. Even for a woman, it took her a long time to make up her mind.

Contending Steeples



BASCOM TIMMONS

Stevenson Is Believed Out Of Running For Nomination

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Granting that Adlai Stevenson's willingness to accept an advisory post with the Eisenhower administration is evidence of a laudable desire to serve his country, the conclusion that he has put himself out of the running for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960 is almost inescapable.

Even though his designation as consultant on NATO may be temporary, it comes at a time when Democratic leaders in Congress are preparing to be critical of the administration's international program, and even though their views and Stevenson's may not be far apart, the two - time presidential candidate is now on the Eisenhower team.

Though not sufficiently aged to be considered an elder statesman, the one time governor of Illinois can still be an important voice in his party, and his friends say that is the way he prefers it. Any man who has received 27 million votes for President has a following which cannot be ignored. His decision did not evoke the consternation in any quarter that the acceptance of Roosevelt cabinet appointments by Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox did among Republicans in 1940, but those selections were announced at the beginning of a presidential campaign and were made largely for their political effect, while the Stevenson appointment does not seem to have been.

President Eisenhower's inclination to take for granted that any one who accepts any position in his administration will do his bidding may prove presumptuous in Stevenson's case, for he is functioning as a consultant, without much authority. However, if the NATO conference backfires against the U. S., as it may, he will have to accept some of the responsibility, and it would not be like Adlai to remain silent in such a circumstance.

It has been suggested that if the next administration is Democratic, that Stevenson would be a likely Secretary of State. Then he would have a precedent in the case of the man with whom he is not working, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who functioned as a sort of "leg man" for his Democratic predecessor, Dean Acheson.

That may be a precedent which Stevenson would prefer not be mentioned because Dulles undertook a mission to South Korea just before the invasion from North Korea, and there still are some critics among career people in the State Department who think he messed it up and gave the Communists an idea that the U.S. would not back up the South Korean government. Whether that was a factor may never be known, so involved has become the history of Far Eastern diplomatic negotiations.

The transition in the Stevenson role from politician to statesman may mean more to the Democratic party than has thus far been appreciated. He could not have been overlooked as a possible nominee in 1960 if he hadn't become an Eisenhower consultant, particularly if the Democrats in 1960 found themselves deadlocked in their choice of a nominee. He would have figured in preconvention discussions — and probably still will — but the future of the Democratic party, which nobody can prophesy accurately at this point, would not seem to be sufficiently indefinite to include the possible nomination of a candidate who had attended the John Foster Dulles school of diplomacy.

His decision comes at a time when expediency seems to be the most persuasive factor in the probability that the Democrats will hang together in 1960 and agree upon a candidate who can straddle successfully the division between North and South because their chance to elect such a candidate will be so promising that it would not be political to ignore it.

As predicted here months ago, that candidate could very well be Governor Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, because he has demonstrated his vote getting power in a normally Republican state, and because New Jersey fails in the "big state" category from which, according to modern political theory in the U. S., a candidate must come in order to be selected.

What doomed Stevenson even before he joined Ike's team, in the opinion of sharper Democrats was that, although he twice received a popular vote larger than any losing candidate in presidential history, he failed each time to carry his own state of Illinois.

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

Most Governors Oppose 3rd Party

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (CQ)—Seven of 13 Southern governors polled by Congressional Quarterly have turned thumbs down on the idea of a third party movement in 1960.

Two — Georgia's Marvin Griffin and Virginia's Thomas B. Stanley indicated they were giving sympathetic consideration to the third party idea. All 13 are Democrats.

North Carolina Gov. Luther H. Hodges spoke for the majority when he said: "I strongly feel that it would be a serious mistake for the South either to sponsor or follow a third party movement. We have so much more to lose than we have to gain in a third party."

Generally echoing Hodges' sentiment were Alabama's James E. Folsom, Florida's LeRoy Collins, Kentucky's A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Oklahoma's Raymond Gary, Tennessee's Frank G. Clement and Price Daniel of Texas.

Four of the 13 governors, including Arkansas' Orval E. Faubus, declined to answer the Congressional Quarterly inquiry. Faubus told newsmen Nov. 11 he "would not rule out the possibility" of being a third party Presidential candidate in 1960.

Also remaining silent were South Carolina's George Bell Timmerman Jr., Mississippi's J. P. Coleman and Louisiana's Earl K. Long.

The strongest endorsement for the third party came from Georgia Gov. Griffin. He said: "It appears the South cannot look to the Democratic or the Republican party for redress of what I consider the gravest of grievances. Whether the differences facing this nation today can be better resolved by the formation of a third party is to me a matter of conjecture at this time."

"However," Griffin added, 'there is a great deal of growing sentiment in this part of the nation concerning such a movement."

Virginia's Gov. Stanley did not go quite that far. Stanley said: "There is no question that the conservative people of the southern states are greatly concerned by the 'liberal' trend of both national parties." But he said that "if we can revitalize the party as a truly Democratic party, we have much more to gain than by attempting to sponsor a third party movement."

"Events between now and the next national convention" will decide the issue, Stanley concluded.

Most of the governors brushed off the third party suggestion with brief comments like Folsom's "I am a Democrat and I expect to remain one" or "Daniel's "I have always been opposed to splinter groups."

Chandler and Hodges cited the danger of losing the south's influence in the Democratic party. Chandler warned that "a third party movement might possibly split the Democratic party and lessen the south's chances for representatives in the national government.

Hodges said that "as Democrats, we do have strength and influence in the Congress and I believe this influence will grow and flourish."

For Gary, the "grave error" in the arguments for a third party is that "there is nothing to be gained."

Third Party Record

The record of the recent past seems to bear out Gary's contention. In 1956, third party candidates garnered only 285,454 votes in 10 southern states where they were on the ballot. Only in South Carolina and Tennessee was the third party vote a significant factor in the outcome of the election.

In only one of the seven Presidential elections from 1932 through 1956 would the outcome have been changed if all 13 southern states had given their electoral votes to a third party candidate.

Loss of the solid south in 1948 would have thrown the election between Democrat Harry S. Truman and Republican Thomas E. Dewey into the House of Representatives by denying either of them the constitutional mapority of 266 electoral votes.

But in the other six elections, the outcome would have been the same even if the entire south had voted for its own candidate for president.

UPHOLDS STATE RIGHTS

Bastrop, La.

Editor, Morning World:

It is the unquestionable duty of every loyal, patriotic, and law-abiding citizen to co-operate with the civil authorities and civic groups in sustaining the sovereignty of our state and holding the supremacy of our state inviolate. As peace-loving, law-abiding citizens, we cannot tolerate violence or resort to unreasonable measures; while at the same time, it often becomes necessary to enforce strict laws to suppress injustices.

It is needless to mention the wave of political turmoil and strife that has been sweeping across our country for the last decade. We are now faced with the problems of finding ways and means of efficiently combatting those injustices. It has become commonly known that there are certain organizations that are exploiting the pocketbooks of unscrupulous and ignorant people for money to agitate and inflict those injustices upon us, who are not paying one dime of income tax.

In my judgment, the best way to combat those evils is by judicious legislation. Under the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the powers of the Federal Government and the States to regulate the rates of income tax are absolutely unlimited.

If the legislatures will fix the rate at 95 per cent of all the collections made by those nefariour organizations, then they will not have so much money to finance trouble, and perhaps we can have a few days' rest from turmoil and strife. I sincerely appeal to every citizen, and especially to the "White Citizens Council" to unanimously press for this legislation. Yours truly,

B. W. MORGAN.

Editor, Morning World:

The year 1960 will not be the same as 1948. There has been a lot of water under the bridges since Harry S Truman won his race for the highest executive office in the United States.

The Supreme Court gave its 1954 decision outlawing racial segregation. Then, to make matters worse, the Supreme Court gave its decision that the five convicted communists should be freed. Then, to add insult to injury, President Eisenhower sent federal troops to Little Rock Central High School to force integration against the will of the people.

If we have to face such as that in the next administration, we might as well not have any local government.

I read a column in a newspaper which said that Harry Truman urges the organization (National Democratic Party) to groom a 1960 presidential candidate who can appeal to the northern big city vote without writing off the entire South. Truman is a strong advocate for "civil rights." Truman believes the 1960 Democratic nominee must stand firmly for enforcement of the Supreme Court's school integration edict. Truman lost four Southern states to a States' Right Party in 1948, because of his stand for "civil rights" legislation. He would endorse either of two men, Governor Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey or Governor G. Mennen Williams of Michigan. These two governors would not support the tradition of the South.

Listen to me, you sovereign people, and rally behind the Citizens Council. Write to your Congressmen and Senators; express your opinions and convictions to those officers who are elected to represent you. Do not just fold your hands and give up before the battle is over.

There are some governors in the border states who would support the tradition of the South and at the same time enough votes from the northern big cities to make a successful race for the office of United States President. These are not the men that Harry Truman would select.

Do you people want better government or some more of the same that you have been getting? Wake, up, America!

Scientist Thinks Competition Good

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Prior to World War II, both the Americans and British were at work, secretly and independently, on the mysterious process called radar. One of the workers was Dr. John P. Hagen, a Canadian who had graduated from Boston University and was taking up a career in physics.

Dr. Hagen, now director of the American satellite - launching Vanguard project, is a middle-sized man with metal - rimmed glasses, a controlled sense of humor and no great interest in his personal haberdashery, e v e n though he is frequently before press conferences and television cameras. But he likes to recall the example of Anglo - American cooperation on radar and to recall that he received in 1946 a presidential certificate of merit for his part in it.

"While it is not an exact comparison," he told me, "the radar development and the satellite programs of International Geophysical Year are both examples of the same thing. In science, it is not a bad thing for two sets of scientists to make independent approaches to the same goal."

Dr. Hagen meant that the Anglo-American development of radar and the Russo - American development of satellites are additions to scientific world knowledge that might not be otherwise possible. He said that we Americans had already learned a great deal about "rate of drag" by tracking the two Sputniks. He also told an Armistice Day press conference that, although Russian scientists had not yet volunteered any scientific information gained from either Sputnik, he expected that they would reveal valuable data at their own convenience. The Russian "concern for the good opinion of the scientific community," he said, would prove greater than concern for international political matters.

Indeed, If Dr. Hagen is right, and he probably is, there is a viewpoint toward Sputnik which we Americans in our excitement have not bothered to explore. Scientifically speaking, it is better to be second and not first when it comes to launching a satellite. We already have the benefit of the Russian experiment. We may gain still more benefit if Russian scientists start to talk.

Then again, the propaganda and prestige advantages which went to the Russians are not very solid ones and these advantages are not entirely the result of Russian cleverness and our stupidity. The truth is that we "played the game" of being frank and open about the scientific event of satellite - launching. The Russians cheated a bit. Which is better in the long pull? Which is the way to scientific prestige, of which the Russians are extremely jealous?

Actually, we helped the Russians do what they did American frankness to the world and freedom of the press, Dr. Hagen was saying in his oblique academic American fashion, aided the Russians to do what they did. Dr. Hagen had to have these opionions dragged out of him; he would not volunteer any alibis or excuses and did not wish to "seem to be rationalizing" the fact that his Vanguard was bringing up the rearguard. But the fact appears to be that the United States behaved very well and deserves the plaudits of the world for acting with scientific sophistication and for conducting Vanguard according to International Geophysical Year rules. Russia for her part has behaved like a cad, and deserves the hisses of the world scientists.

Not only that, according to Dr. Hagen, but the famous dog - in-the - moon stunt was not very bright. A rat tells much more about physiological reactions to the environment of the ionosphere than a dog does. An ape tells even more that is medically important. Several years ago, our air force shot mice and monkeys into the ionosphere and returned them to earth for detailed examination. In the long run, it may be that Russia did not improve either her scientific knowledge or world relations by sending up an animal which is affectionately regarded throughout the world as "man's best friend." The only worse thing the Russians could do would be to send up a human being and illustrate their disregard for life by having him perish. This is one mistake that will not be made by American moon-launchers. If and when we send up a man, he will be equipped with something like airplane wings with which to glide home to earth.

Reasonable Doubt

When a man is accused of murder and goes to trial the judge is required to instruct the jury that the defendant must be set free unless the evidence shows, beyond all reasonable doubt, that he is guilty.

This "reasonable doubt" phase of the law is guaranteed under the American Bill of Rights. It is not restricted to murder cases but is presumed to apply in all cases in which criminal charges have been filed. Its purpose is to prevent the conviction of an innocent person, on the theory that it is far better to acquit a guilty person than to convict one who is innocent.

This is the American system. It differs from the common practice in dictator countries, where the accepted view is that the guilty person must be punished, regardless of how many innocent people may also be required to pay the penalty. Mass punishment was one of the most common practices in Germany and Italy prior to and during World War II. The mass punishment system has been and is used in Russia.

There are times when the "reasonable doubt" right is not granted in the United States. This may be particularly true when a case is tried before a judge who follows a pre-determined course. Judge Ronald Davies of North Dakota reportedly did not even bother to hear evidence when he was trying contempt cases growing out of the Little Rock, Ark., integration controversy. He was sent there to do a job and did it.

Four other cases growing out of the Little Rock controversy have just been tried. They involved four Negro youths who said they were not attending school, either at the all-Negro Horace Mann High School or at the newly-integrated Central High School. These Negro youths were not accused of creating any kind of disturbance or of participating in any violence.

When rioting in Little Rock was at its height and afterward, when authorities were clamping down, raids were conducted for the purpose of arresting anyone who might be found carrying arms.

The four Negro youths were not accused of having a bona fide weapon in their possession but an implement described as a "haying tool" reportedly was found in their possession. The youths said they did not know the tool was in the car. This may or may not have been true. Certainly it could have been true as far as two or three of the defendants were concerned, since the owner of the car might have put the tool into the car without the knowledge of the others. It might have been there for a legitimate and innocent purpose.

Despite this fact, the judge found all of the defendants guilty, imposed fines of $25 each and suspended the fines. He doubtless figured they might be guilty and might not. That could have been his reason for suspending the fines. There is every appearance that the judge acted on the assumption of guilt and not on the assumption of innocence guaranteed in the bill of rights.

Suspension of the fines, so that the defendants were not forced to pay money or serve time, could not justify a conviction in which there was certainly not only reasonable doubt but strong doubt as to the defendants' guilt.

Often the penalty is the least part of the onus of a conviction. The money fine may be soon paid and forgotten and even a short jail term does not last long. This is not true of the conviction itself, which stands permanently against the record of the defendant. He is branded a criminal and if he should ever be suspected again this record will stand against him.

Conviction in even the most minor case should not be returned if there is a reasonable doubt. No one who may be innocent should have the brand of a criminal applied to him.

Balanced Budget

There was a disquieting note in the President's speech at Oklahoma City on November 13, 1957. It was when he said that Americans "will not sacrifice security worshipping a balanced budget."

Now, there is nothing wrong at all in that statement by itself. It is in the implication contained therein that the disquieting factor lies; namely, that in order to provide ourselves with security, it may be necessary to sacrifice a balanced budget.

What the president should have made clear to the American people is that that alternative just is not there. Security can be provided along with a balanced budget, if the Administration and the Congress and the American people only have the will to do it that way.

In other words, the president should never have raised the question of a possibly unbalanced budget. He should have recommended increased expenditures for defense, if he thought they were necessary, under a balanced budget—and then, if it did not turn out that way, it would be the fault of the Congress and not of the Administration.

In fact, it is to be wondered just which "Americans" and how many of them the president was speaking for when he made this statement. The likelihood is that he was falling into the common error of so many politicians who claim their own attitudes as the attitudes of the "American people," and the president probably meant that the Administration "will not sacrifice security worshipping a balanced budget." How does he—or anyone else—know what "Americans" will do?

It is entirely true, of course, that our national security must be "first of all firsts" in this country, as the president pointed out. But neither the president nor ourselves must overlook the fact that a sound economy is a most essential part of national security. What we are trying to do is to preserve a way of life in this country, from all dangers everywhere, within and without. If we allow our economy to be destroyed, either by unwise fiscal management within or by pressure for additional expenditures from without, we can be quite sure our way of life will go right along with it—and that without a shot being fired. There is surely no sense in spending ourselves into bankruptcy in order to protect ourselves militarily.

It has been the open boast of the Communists that they will eventually cause us to spend ourselves into destruction—and we should never get the idea that this is not possible, for it certainly is. Continually rising national debt, continuous unbalanced budgets, continued inflation would all work together to destroy us, and then the Communists could take over without any risk on their part whatever. We would do the job for them.

The antidote, of course, is gradual reduction of the national debt, ranking the necessity for a balanced budget as an essential part of the "first of all firsts," and a return once more to an honest dollar. If, along with all this, we find it necessary to deny ourselves certain budgetary benefits to which we have become overlong accustomed, then let us face it. That is nothing more than any individual must do under similar circumstances.

If we are presently at war with the Communists—and the president made it abundantly clear that we are—then let us recognize the fact that there can be no weakness anywhere along the front line, military, budgetary or otherwise. Let us recognize that it is a war of attrition, not to be fought and won quickly as might be the case if we were the aggressor but drawn out over many years and requiring its full measure of "blood, sweat, and tears."

We can win the war if in the waging of it we observe the sound economic principles which have made us a great nation. We cannot win it if we lose our respect for a balanced budget. That respect is already to weak and has been for all too long.

President Eisenhower is, of course, correct in saying that morality can't be effected by law. One of the first set of laws established to this end are still being often and widely broken.

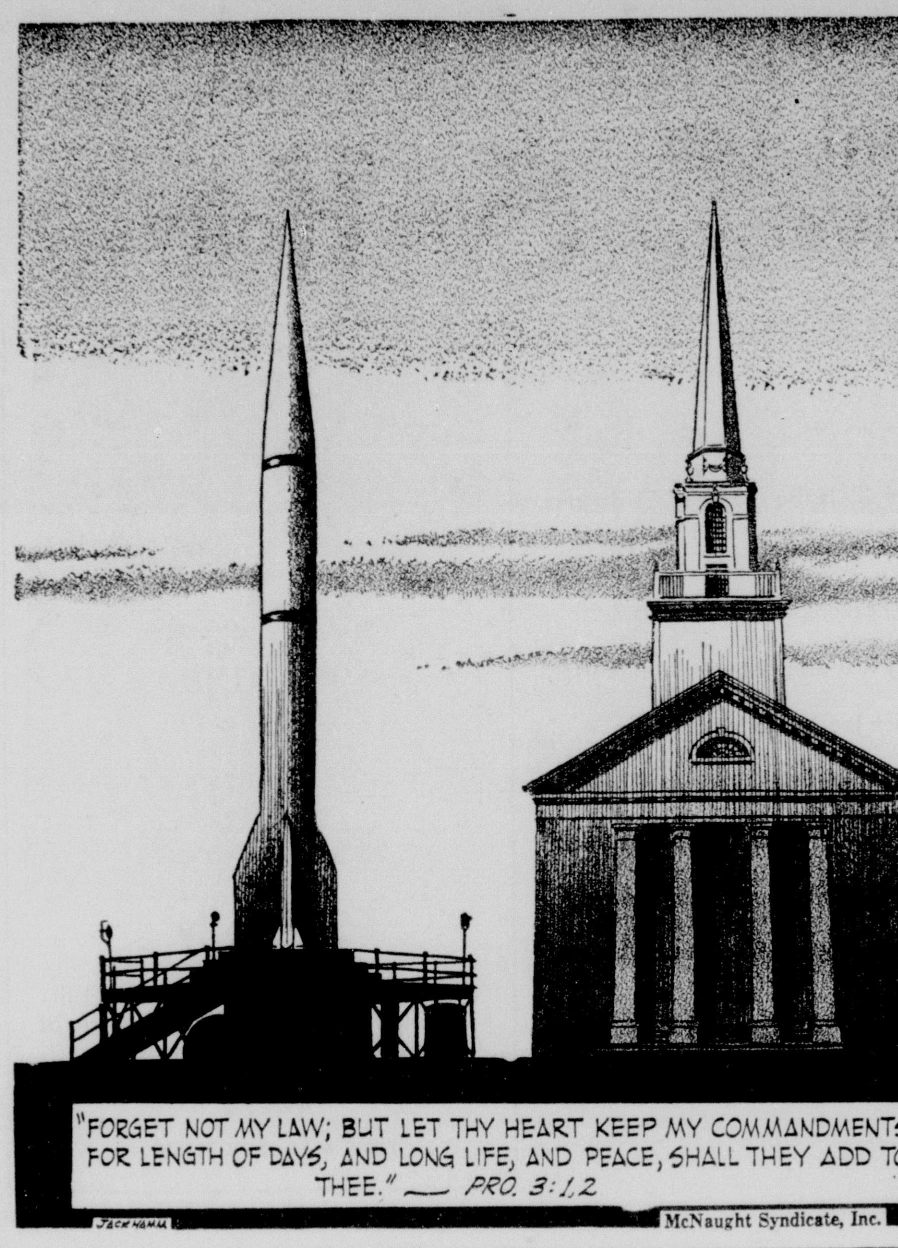
Contending Steeples



BASCOM TIMMONS

Stevenson Is Believed Out Of Running For Nomination

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Granting that Adlai Stevenson's willingness to accept an advisory post with the Eisenhower administration is evidence of a laudable desire to serve his country, the conclusion that he has put himself out of the running for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960 is almost inescapable.

Even though his designation as consultant on NATO may be temporary, it comes at a time when Democratic leaders in Congress are preparing to be critical of the administration's international program, and even though their views and Stevenson's may not be far apart, the two - time presidential candidate is now on the Eisenhower team.

Though not sufficiently aged to be considered an elder statesman, the one time governor of Illinois can still be an important voice in his party, and his friends say that is the way he prefers it. Any man who has received 27 million votes for President has a following which cannot be ignored. His decision did not evoke the consternation in any quarter that the acceptance of Roosevelt cabinet appointments by Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox did among Republicans in 1940, but those selections were announced at the beginning of a presidential campaign and were made largely for their political effect, while the Stevenson appointment does not seem to have been.

President Eisenhower's inclination to take for granted that any one who accepts any position in his administration will do his bidding may prove presumptuous in Stevenson's case, for he is functioning as a consultant, without much authority. However, if the NATO conference backfires against the U. S., as it may, he will have to accept some of the responsibility, and it would not be like Adlai to remain silent in such a circumstance.

It has been suggested that if the next administration is Democratic, that Stevenson would be a likely Secretary of State. Then he would have a precedent in the case of the man with whom he is not working, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who functioned as a sort of "leg man" for his Democratic predecessor, Dean Acheson.

That may be a precedent which Stevenson would prefer not be mentioned because Dulles undertook a mission to South Korea just before the invasion from North Korea, and there still are some critics among career people in the State Department who think he messed it up and gave the Communists an idea that the U.S. would not back up the South Korean government. Whether that was a factor may never be known, so involved has become the history of Far Eastern diplomatic negotiations.

The transition in the Stevenson role from politician to statesman may mean more to the Democratic party than has thus far been appreciated. He could not have been overlooked as a possible nominee in 1960 if he hadn't become an Eisenhower consultant, particularly if the Democrats in 1960 found themselves deadlocked in their choice of a nominee. He would have figured in preconvention discussions — and probably still will — but the future of the Democratic party, which nobody can prophesy accurately at this point, would not seem to be sufficiently indefinite to include the possible nomination of a candidate who had attended the John Foster Dulles school of diplomacy.

His decision comes at a time when expediency seems to be the most persuasive factor in the probability that the Democrats will hang together in 1960 and agree upon a candidate who can straddle successfully the division between North and South because their chance to elect such a candidate will be so promising that it would not be political to ignore it.

As predicted here months ago, that candidate could very well be Governor Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, because he has demonstrated his vote getting power in a normally Republican state, and because New Jersey fails in the "big state" category from which, according to modern political theory in the U. S., a candidate must come in order to be selected.

What doomed Stevenson even before he joined Ike's team, in the opinion of sharper Democrats was that, although he twice received a popular vote larger than any losing candidate in presidential history, he failed each time to carry his own state of Illinois.

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

Most Governors Oppose 3rd Party

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (CQ)—Seven of 13 Southern governors polled by Congressional Quarterly have turned thumbs down on the idea of a third party movement in 1960.

Two — Georgia's Marvin Griffin and Virginia's Thomas B. Stanley indicated they were giving sympathetic consideration to the third party idea. All 13 are Democrats.

North Carolina Gov. Luther H. Hodges spoke for the majority when he said: "I strongly feel that it would be a serious mistake for the South either to sponsor or follow a third party movement. We have so much more to lose than we have to gain in a third party."

Generally echoing Hodges' sentiment were Alabama's James E. Folsom, Florida's LeRoy Collins, Kentucky's A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Oklahoma's Raymond Gary, Tennessee's Frank G. Clement and Price Daniel of Texas.

Four of the 13 governors, including Arkansas' Orval E. Faubus, declined to answer the Congressional Quarterly inquiry. Faubus told newsmen Nov. 11 he "would not rule out the possibility" of being a third party Presidential candidate in 1960.

Also remaining silent were South Carolina's George Bell Timmerman Jr., Mississippi's J. P. Coleman and Louisiana's Earl K. Long.

The strongest endorsement for the third party came from Georgia Gov. Griffin. He said: "It appears the South cannot look to the Democratic or the Republican party for redress of what I consider the gravest of grievances. Whether the differences facing this nation today can be better resolved by the formation of a third party is to me a matter of conjecture at this time."

"However," Griffin added, 'there is a great deal of growing sentiment in this part of the nation concerning such a movement."

Virginia's Gov. Stanley did not go quite that far. Stanley said: "There is no question that the conservative people of the southern states are greatly concerned by the 'liberal' trend of both national parties." But he said that "if we can revitalize the party as a truly Democratic party, we have much more to gain than by attempting to sponsor a third party movement."

"Events between now and the next national convention" will decide the issue, Stanley concluded.

Most of the governors brushed off the third party suggestion with brief comments like Folsom's "I am a Democrat and I expect to remain one" or "Daniel's "I have always been opposed to splinter groups."

Chandler and Hodges cited the danger of losing the south's influence in the Democratic party. Chandler warned that "a third party movement might possibly split the Democratic party and lessen the south's chances for representatives in the national government.

Hodges said that "as Democrats, we do have strength and influence in the Congress and I believe this influence will grow and flourish."

For Gary, the "grave error" in the arguments for a third party is that "there is nothing to be gained."

Third Party Record

The record of the recent past seems to bear out Gary's contention. In 1956, third party candidates garnered only 285,454 votes in 10 southern states where they were on the ballot. Only in South Carolina and Tennessee was the third party vote a significant factor in the outcome of the election.

In only one of the seven Presidential elections from 1932 through 1956 would the outcome have been changed if all 13 southern states had giver their electoral votes to a third party candidate.

Loss of the solid south in 1948 would have thrown the election between Democrat Harry S. Truman and Republican Thomas E. Dewey into the House of Representatives by denying either of them the constitutional mapority of 266 electoral votes.

But in the other six elections, the outcome would have been the same even if the entire south had voted for its own candidate for president.

'Empire Of Terror' Recalled

'Rev. Devil' West Headed Clan In Winn

By JIMMY HATTEN
Staff Writer

"Reverend Devil" established an empire of terror in Winn Parish and surrounding areas during the dark Reconstruction following the War Between the States.

The exploits of John West, notorious murderer and cattle thief, are for the most part legend with little written history available.

But in Winn Parish, the legacy of John West and the West Clan have not been forgotten, and the black deeds attributed to him and his band are numerous — and spine-chilling.

West served for four years in the Confederate Army, and with the defeat of the South, he returned home explosive with bitterness against society.

He inaugurated a scheme of revenge — revenge against everybody. Operating under the guise of a law - abiding and respected member of his community at Atlanta, in Winn Parish, he organized the West Clan.

Spy System

He established an intricate spy system which included even some public officials of the parish.

West was one of the leading church workers of the parish, and according to many, he served for years as a minister of the Gospel.

Pioneers travelling the old Indian trail running through Louisiana from the east to the blacklands of Texas suffered innumerable tragedies at the hands of West and his band.

The band robbed, murdered and plundered the wagon trains at will. As legend has it, many of the pioneers were taken captive and placed in West's prison well.

His Negro servant, Pad West, guardian of the well, let the hapless prisoners down into the well by means of a windlass. There they were abandoned. The crys and pleas of the victims went unheeded.

Infamous Acts

As the West Clan grew bolder in their infamous acts, citizens of the parish lost cattle and horses in raids. Men, women and children were killed.

It is said that a two-year-old baby girl was captured in one of the raids. West ordered the child killed. One by one, his men refused to have any part of such an act.

Then, in a fit of rage, West grabbed the child by her feet and smashed her head against a fence post.

The Winn Parish court house was burned, and the district attorney was intercepted on a lonely road between Winnsboro and Columbia and assasinated.

A Yankee messenger returning from Monroe to Natchitoches with a payroll was shot in the back of the head as he kneeled to drink at a spring in the northern part of the parish.

The hard core of West's Clan numbered only about 12 men, but his spies and agents brought the number to approximately 150.

Terrified Citizenry

A terrified citizenry, never knowing who was a spy or informer for the Clan, would not convict any of the band for fear of reprisals. Moreover, West and his gang always provided a seemingly air-tight alibi.

Besides, who would suspect such a respected citizen as John West? He was a prosperous farmer, a church worker, and a Mason.

But West's empire was not to last. One of his own informers turned against him, and revealed the ringleaders of the clan.

A small group of persons met and selected Jim Maybin, a leading citizen to consult Gov. Henry Clay Warmoth about the situation.

The governor advised Maybin to organize a band of men and track the West Clan down, but Maybin wanted assurance that there would be no reprisals against the citizens for taking the law into their own hands.

Warmoth wanted to know how many men would be needed to rid the country of the Clan. Only about 25, replied Maybin. The governor then proceeded to sign 25 pardons in advance for the extermination of the West Clan.

'One More Card'

West had one more card up his sleeve. Upon Maybin's return, he was informed that the clan had captured a family and were holding them as hostages in the Masonic Hall in Atlanta.

But Maybin's band arrived on the scene before West could get his plans set into operation. Maybin's men stormed into the hall, apprehending West on the stairway and taking the remaining 11 men into custody.

A summary trial was held in the building, and the West Clan was ordered outside. West, aware of what was about to take place, flashed the distress Masonic sign to Maybin who was also a Mason. Maybin ignored it.

Then, in a volley of gunshots, the West Clan was executed.

One of the Clansmen, Loss Kimbrell, reportedly was wearing a metal vest and managed to escape, later to be hung as a cattle thief in Texas. Kimbrell, the story goes, as the noose was placed around his neck said "there is going to be a big banquet in hell this day."

But "Reverend Devil" was not to be forgotten. In his own manner, he provided a way that future generations would remember him The fortune that he gained by murdering and plundering, he buried under a strange horse-shaped rock formation called "Lying Horse Rock" in the Iatt Creek area near his plantation.

He put a "curse" on the rock.

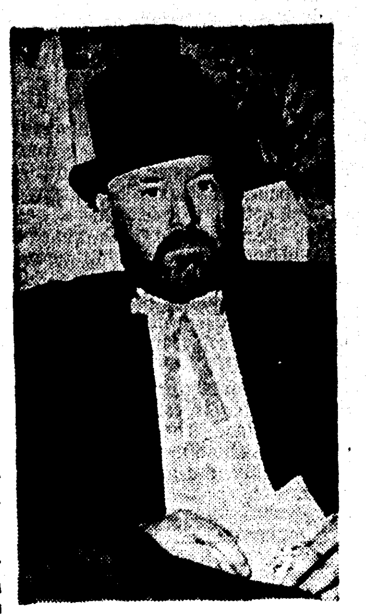
Then, one April day in 1937, three men — one a Negro who lived in the area, and two white men, Dudley Lang and Harley Bozeman, came upon the rock while looking over some timber.

The Negro, John Morgan, sat down on the rock and told the story behind it.

Then, when the three came back to the highway nearby, Morgan was struck down by a pulpwood truck. One month later, Dudley Lang died. Meanwhile, Bozeman became ill, but he recovered, and is still living in Winnfield.

Other strange incidents occurred around the area where the rock is located. Natives shied away from the region. The dense undergrowth has now made it a difficult landmark to locate.

And so, they say, the treasure is still protected by Lying Horse Rock — and Lying Horse Rock is shielded by the curse of "Reverend Devil" . . .



PORTRAYS "REVEREND DEVIL"—Henry E. Harland donned the attire of "Reverend Devil" John West to appear in a stage presentation, "Saga of Winn," during the Winn Parish Centennial celebration in 1952. Oldtimers said he was a "dead ringer" for the notorious murderer.

POST CIVIL WAR BAPTISING — A church congregation gathers at a baptising at Low Fred Creek near Atlanta shortly after the execution of the West Clan. "Reverend Devil" West is said to have baptised persons in this body of water.

Granger Denies Over-Exposure Hurts Career

By WILLIAM EWALD

NEW YORK (UP)—Aside from such curious anatomical specimens as Jayne Mansfield, Farley Granger may be the only TV performer unconcerned with over-exposure.

While other actors try to hold down their TV emoting to three or four major dramas a season, Granger capers through that many in a few weeks. Witness his recent schedule:

On Oct. 23, "Kraft Theatre." Nov. 7 — "Playhouse 90." Recently — A CBS-TV spectacular, "Beyond This Place." Dec. 4—Another "Kraft."

Not Over-exposed

"Over-exposure? As far as I'm concerned there isn't any such thing," said Granger as he worked his way through some under-exposed chopped steak. "I don't think anybody should be afraid to take on as many roles as he's offered.

"I've been careful in my choice of roles, but in this business, you can careful yourself out of existence. The only important thing is to work. There's nothing wrong with being in a flop and I don't think people remember your TV or movie flops anyway. They remember your successes.

"They remember Joan Crawford for 'Mildred Pierce' or Bette Davis for 'Jezebel.' But they don't remember all the bombs they were in and they were in plenty, just like everyone else in the business."

Granger, a by-product of San Jose, Calif., made his movie debut in 1943 in "North Star." He then threaded his way through a succession of pictures including "Rope," "Strangers on a Train" and "They ride by night." He fled Hollywood three years ago.

"Acting for pictures is a very difficult craft which I don't think I knew anything about at all," confessed Granger. "In fact, I didn't know anything about acting at all. That's why I came to New York—to learn about my craft.

"I was pretty young when I broke into pictures and I looked upon acting as something you do under the stimulus of inspiration. The trouble with that method is that most of the time you don't really feel any inspiration and you become a line reader. That's what I was.

Problem is Unlearning

"My problem has been to unlearn everything I learned in pictures. I was burdened with all sorts of acting cliches. It's something a bunch of us now in New York — Shelley Winters, Roddy McDowell, Peggy Ann Garner—have found we had to do. We left pictures so we could learn about our craft."

on probation by the NCAA and can't play in post-season games.

The AAC will decide today on what team will meet Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. Coach Bill Murray of Duke said he thinks his team is the logical choice and that North Carolina is out of it because of a couple of early-season defeats. But he also said he didn't know if his club would accept if offered the spot.

Then there is the case of the Cotton Bowl. During most of the season, Texas A&M was regarded as a certainty to win the Southwest Conference championship and act as host team. But the Aggies were beaten last week and now it's Rice that has the inside track. The Owls turned back Texas Christian, 20-0, and now all they have to do is get by Baylor next week to clinch at least a tie for the title and get the Cotton Bowl bid automatically.

If the Aggies and Rice finish in a deadlock, the Aggies must step aside because they last played in the Cotton Bowl.

The Aggies, of course, would no doubt be invited to play in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, probably against Mississippi of the Southeastern Conference.

As for Saturday's upsets — oh, yes, no Saturday goes by without an upset—Tennessee was the major victim this time. The Vols, who only a short week ago had hoped to make the Sugar Bowl, fell before Kentucky, 20-6.

Auburn, the top dog in the Southeastern Conference, but, like NC State ineligible for post season games because of NCAA sanctions licked Florida State 29-7.

Oklahoma whipped Nebraska, 32-7, for a winning streak of one, while Iowa clouted Notre Dame, 21-13. Princeton won the Ivy League championship with a 34-14 conquest of Dartmouth (the Green's first defeat, (and Yale clobbered Harvard, 54-0.

To make the project such as to appeal to every business man in the two cities, leaders in the project have suggested that all businessmen in both cities be visited and invited to make contribution to this great cause, be it large or small but a heartfelt tribute of helpfulness extended to those in need by those who are more favored with this world's goods.

Suggestion

It is suggested that Jaycees handle the visitation of all merchants in West Monroe to secure donations, and in Monroe a similar campaign will be waged by Jaycees in stores and business places on DeSiard, Louisville. Then this Christmas appeal will come through financial aid of an entire community.

A sticker or some other emblem will be affixed in the window of all stores that have donated.

While Jaycees will let loose their energies in solicitation of business houses one by one; others will make investigations of pleas for aid as they come in the mail to the News - Star and Morning World. Each must be carefully investigated to assure that need does really exist with no outlook that it will be met aside from Good Fellows.

"The future security of our country lies in your hands," he told the editors.

Dr. Whipple said newspapers would have to develop the idea that although the United States has lost its physical frontier, there is a new frontier to substitute. He called it "the frontier of the mind" and added: "Science is such a frontier."

Dr. Whipple, who described the Russian educational system as one of high quality, listed several educational changes needed in this country:

1. Higher salaries to teachers.
2. Recognition of the importance of the teacher, giving him prestige.
3. More fellowships to students.
4. A greater emphasis on high school science, insuring that the best men teach the subject.
5. More emphasis on studying foreign languages and culture so students can understand international problems.
6. The erasure of the feeling that intellectuals are "eggheads," "longhairs," or "absent-minded professors."

Dr. Whipple said the changes in attitude might take decades.

"But I think we can win the technological race with Russia," he added. "We have the ability and the intellectual resources."

Dr. Whipple also described some of the problems arising from the firing of Sputniks into space.

"I think we were as surprised as we are when a mother gives birth the Russian timing. "It is expected but we don't know when—sometimes it comes sooner than expected."

From the point of view of world history, he said, "a few months plus or minus really dosen't matter a great deal."

Dr. Whipple, classifying the satellites as a great achievement, said scientists would learn, from data aboard the object itself, more about space environments and temperatures. He added it would also be determined whether the metal had been punctured by meteorites.

From the work of Moonwatch teams on the earth, Dr. Whipple said, scientists would learn more about air density and the shape of the earth.

Services Set

Funeral services for Miss Tubbs will be held from the Hico Baptist Church at 2 o'clock this afternoon with the pastor, Rev. O. B. Odom, officiating, and burial will be in Henry Cemetery at Dubach.

Arrangements for the last rites for Mrs. Myers were incomplete pending arrival of her husband from Okinawa.

Services for Miss Davis will be conducted today at 2:30 p.m. at the Forest Baptist Church, with the Rev. H. G. Hammons and the Rev. J. E. Bailey officiating.

Interment will be in the New Forest Cemetery under the direction of Gay's Funeral Home of Oak Grove.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Davis, Dubach; two brothers, Willie and Alan, Dubach; her paternal grandmother, Mrs. H. E. Farley, Dubach, and maternal grandmother, Mrs. R. L. O'Steen, Forest.

A registered nurse whose identity was not immediately obtained was an eye-witness to the accident. She was returning to her home after going off duty when her automobile stalled near the scene of the mishap.

Another witness was A. B. Post, Jr., Ruston automobile dealer whose home is situated within a few yards of the accident scene.

Not Determined

It had not been determined last night where the three young women had been, but it was generally believed they were returning from Farmerville where Mrs. Myers maintained weekday quarters while attending the trade school.

The Myers automobile was travelling southwestward into Ruston when the driver lost control after the left wheels struck the soft eart!. shoulder. The pavement was slippery from several days of heavy rains and showers.

According to witnesses and officials who investigated, the automobile travelled about 200 feet with the left front wheel in the roadside ditch. It struck a culvert and shot up a slight incline and into the front lawns of a row of small homes bordering the highway-street.

The Myers automobile glanced into the rear of the parked automobile owned by George Slaton. His machine was twirled around in an almost 360 degree circle and thrown into the Slaton dwelling. Slaton said he was awakened by "either the screeching of tires or the screams of a woman." His automobile was reportedly badly damaged, but damage to his residence was comparatively slight.

'Out of Control'

The nurse who witnessed the accident said the automobile occupied by the victims appeared completely out of control after its wheels struck the waterlogged shoulder.

Post said he had halted for traffic before driving into his driveway when he noticed the lights of an oncoming automobile. He said he glanced in another direction momentarily, and the light had disappeared. Instead, there was a blinking front directional light, and the sound of an accident.

After striking the Slaton automobil , the victims' car travelled another 125 to 150 feet, officials said. The top had been sheared off even with the top of the seats.

The bodies of two of the girls were found at the base of a tree in whose branches parts of women's wearing apparel were found about 10 feet above the ground.

Rushed To Hospital

A Darby Funeral Home ambulance rushed the victims to Ruston Hospital where Miss Tubbs and Mrs. Myers were pronounced dead on arrival. Miss Davis lived for slightly less than two hours with specialists working desperately to save her life.

The bodies of Miss Tubbs and Mrs. Myers were removed to Kilpatrick Funeral Home here and that of Miss Davis was taken to Oak Grove yesterday afternoon.

Miss Tubbs is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Tubbs, Hico; three sisters, Mrs. David Caver, Bossier City; Mrs. Bill Jenkins, Houston; and Miss Patsy Tubbs, Hico; one brother, Curtis Tubbs, a student of Louisiana Tech, in Ruston, who is a star college baseball pitcher and former all-state cage star; her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Pearl Tubbs Dubach, and maternal grandmother, Mrs. J. A. Britt, Minden.

Miss Davis was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Davis of Route 2, Box 111, Dubach. She had two brothers, Willie Everett Davis and Audis L. Davis, both of Route 2, Dubach.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Myers is survived by her father, W. T. Farley, Sulphur, La.; her mother, Mrs. Opal Kellogg, Canasegra, N.Y.; and her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Farley, Dubach, with whom she maintained permanent residence.

Originally, it was trailing the 184-pound Sputnik I after it carried the spherical satellite into space Oct. 4 and became detached from it. It began to speed up. From a distance 620 miles behind, it passed the Sputnik and then lapped it several times.

As its speed increased, its orbit narrowed. It gradually nosed towards the relatively dense atmosphere of earth which forms a protective blanket, shielding the earth from myriad shooting stars and meteors by means of friction.

But some get through the heat barrier created by friction. And there was some belief that parts of the rocket might reach earth.

The report said that U.S. military aid objectives in many Allied countries are "unrealistic" and financially unsound. It said that this country has sent to some allies more weapons than those could or would use and has failed to "recapture" these weapons for reallocation to allies suffering from a real shortage of equipment for their troops.

"We are recommending that the secretary of defense review and re-establish the present approved force objectives after giving full consideration to recipient country capabilities, United States purposes, and the priorities of desires accomplishments," the report said.

Congress has appropriated 24 billion dollars in military aid for allies since the end of World War II.

The Mer Rouge volunteer firemen arrived first at the home located on the Davenport farm east of here. They played water over the room containing the bodies, and with the aid of the Bastrop Fire Department, brought the blaze under control.

Attending doctors at Garnier Clinic said the father suffered second and third degree burns over 50 per cent of his body. The child was less severely burned.

Funeral services for the children were tentatively scheduled for late today. Smith Funeral Home will be in charge of services.

It also noted that the trend toward buying adjoining land to increase allotment acreage is continuing.

"Possibly more important are such factors as fewer farm sales, higher interest rates, and a cautious attitude on the part of most farmers, all of which tend to decrease the use of long-term credit," said the report.

"Basic changes in agriculture, which have prevailed in this region in recent years continue. Financial pressures of low income and relatively high costs are greater on the smaller farmers. Many of them appear to be in the mood to sell. The trend is toward increased mechanization and larger farms."

The department said a survey of conditions in Mississippi county, Ark., is indicative of canditons in the Delta areas of the three states.

"For the county as a whole," it said, "the financial postion of most farmers will be unchanged from a year ago to somewhat poorer. Farmers will have less cash on hand at the beginning of 1958. Of the farmers who have 200 acres or less of cropland, possibly a third are not as well off financially as they were a year go.

"One source mentioned that quite a few were on the verge of going out of farming. The Farmers Home Administration office reported several loans paid in full from the sale of 40-acre farms which were too small.

"Most of the larger farmers, or those not affected so severely by heavy rains, believed that despite high costs their financial condition would be somewhat improved at the end of the season."

The report said farmers interviewed did not hesitate to borrow for fertilizer and insecticides but were cautions in using credit for nonessential good. It said farmers apparently are delaying purchase of new equipment and deferring normal repair and maintenance.

"Machinery and automobile dealers said that business was slow," said the report. "Sales of general farm supplies and groceries appeared to be at about the 1956 levels."

on probation by the NCAA and can't play in post-season games.

The AAC will decide today on what team will meet Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. Coach Bill Murray of Duke said he thinks his team is the logical choice and that North Carolina is out of it because of a couple of early-season defeats. But he also said he didn't know if his club would accept if offered the spot.

Then there is the case of the Cotton Bowl. During most of the season, Texas A&M was regarded as a certainty to win the Southwest Conference championship and act as host team. But the Aggies were beaten last week and now it's Rice that has the inside track. The Owls turned back Texas Christian, 20-0, and now all they have to do is get by Baylor next week to clinch at least a tie for the title and get the Cotton Bowl bid automatically.

If the Aggies and Rice finish in a deadlock, the Aggies must step aside because they last played in the Cotton Bowl.

The Aggies, of course, would no doubt be invited to play in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, probably against Mississippi of the Southeastern Conference.

As for Saturday's upsets — oh, yes, no Saturday goes by without an upset—Tennessee was the major victim this time. The Vols, who only a short week ago had hoped to make the Sugar Bowl, fell before Kentucky, 20-6.

Auburn, the top dog in the Southeastern Conference, but, like NC State ineligible for post season games because of NCAA sanctions licked Florida State 29-7.

Oklahoma whipped Nebraska, 32-7, for a winning streak of one, while Iowa clouted Notre Dame, 21-13. Princeton won the Ivy League championship with a 34-14 conquest of Dartmouth (the Green's first defeat, (and Yale clobbered Harvard, 54-0.

To make the project such as to appeal to every business man in the two cities, leaders in the project have suggested that all businessmen in both cities be visited and invited to make contribution to this great cause, be it large or small but a heartfelt tribute of helpfulness extended to those in need by those who are more favored with this world's goods.

Suggestion

It is suggested that Jaycees handle the visitation of all merchants in West Monroe to secure donations, and in Monroe a similar campaign will be waged by Jaycees in stores and business places on DeSiard, Louisville. Then this Christmas appeal will come through financial aid of an entire community.

A sticker or some other emblem will be affixed in the window of all stores that have donated.

While Jaycees will let loose their energies in solicitation of business houses one by one; others will make investigations of pleas for aid as they come in the mail to the News - Star and Morning World. Each must be carefully investigated to assure that need does really exist with no outlook that it will be met aside from Good Fellows.

Whipple Says Red Education Cause Of Lead

part to help the public change that attitude.

"The future security of our country lies in your hands," he told the editors.

Dr. Whipple said newspapers would have to develop the idea that although the United States has lost its physical frontier, there is a new frontier to substitute. He called it "the frontier of the mind" and added: "Science is such a frontier."

Dr. Whipple, who described the Russian educational system as one of high quality, listed several educational changes needed in this country:

1. Higher salaries to teachers.
2. Recognition of the importance of the teacher, giving him prestige.
3. More fellowships to students.
4. A greater emphasis on high school science, insuring that the best men teach the subject.
5. More emphasis on studying foreign languages and culture so students can understand international problems.
6. The erasure of the feeling that intellectuals are "eggheads," "longhairs," or "absent-minded professors."

Dr. Whipple said the changes in attitude might take decades.

"But I think we can win the technological race with Russia," he added. "We have the ability and the intellectual resources."

Dr. Whipple also described some of the problems arising from the firing of Sputniks into space.

"I think we were as surprised as we are when a mother gives birth the Russian timing. "It is expected but we don't know when—sometimes it comes sooner than expected."

From the point of view of world history, he said, "a few months plus or minus really dosen't matter a great deal."

Dr. Whipple, classifying the satellites as a great achievement, said scientists would learn, from data aboard the object itself, more about space environments and temperatures. He added it would also be determined whether the metal had been punctured by meteorites.

From the work of Moonwatch teams on the earth, Dr. Whipple said, scientists would learn more about air density and the shape of the earth.

By JOHN LANNAN

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Emil Nelson feels from his own experience that every man his age should have a hobby — but not necessarily his.

Emil is 69 and his hobby is driving a hopped-up 1934 Ford at speeds better than 100 m p.h. He believes he's the nation's oldest hot rodder.

"I feel like I'm 30 years old," enthuses the near-septuagenarian. "I can run races with the boys anytime."

And to prove it, Emil can show two awards won this year in the finals of the New England Hot Rod Council competition.

Emil isn't new to racing. He started speeding about two years ago after a lapse of 37 years. His last racing car in the old days was a Stanley Steamer he made himself.

Marriage and a metal working job kept him pretty close to home since the Stanley days. Lately his knowledge of metals, his love for fast cars and a convenient back yard shop, brought him back into competition, this time against men a third of his age.

He has been working on his present car for three years.

His last car was built of spare parts from the Stanley plant at Watertown, Mass., where he worked as a mechanic - assembler under Fred Marriot, who designed the famous "Torpedo" which outran the world's best cars at Ormond Beach, Fla., in the 1920s.

Emil, an immigrant from Norway, learned metal working in Massachusetts after spending two years as a mess boy aboard a tramp steamer.

At the end of every work day, Emil is out in his back yard garage, either helping his two sons and a son-in-law on their hopped-up cars or working on his own machine. One night a week, he and the boys attend meetings of the Portland Shaft Twister's club, a hot rod group.

Sign Project Approved By 4-H Council

Members of the Ouachita 4-H executive council voted in a meeting yesterday to place 4-H signs at the entrance to the parish on all main highways.

Chairman of the committee to work on this project is Alice Bower, a student at Ouachita Parish High School.

Other committee members are Linda Tolbird, an eighth grade student at West Monroe High School; Wayne Shipp, Ouachita Parish High: Jackie Van, Shady Grove, and Hal Wales, West Monroe High.

The council also voted to award a banner to the clubs who have the smallest enrollment but who score the highest at Achievement Day.

To Keep Records

Club members were urged by Mrs. Hilton Owen, Cypress 4-H leader, to keep records to enter in the parish fair for the dairy or beef calf contest sponsored by the Civitan Club of West Monroe.

Vice - president Georgia Ruth Owens and Secretary Carol Shipp presided over the meeting. Mrs. Audrey Dawson, associate home demonstration agent; W. B. Aycock, associate county agent, and Elliott Branch, agent in training, are sponsors of the 4-H work.

W. M. Jaycees Plan Christmas Parcel Project

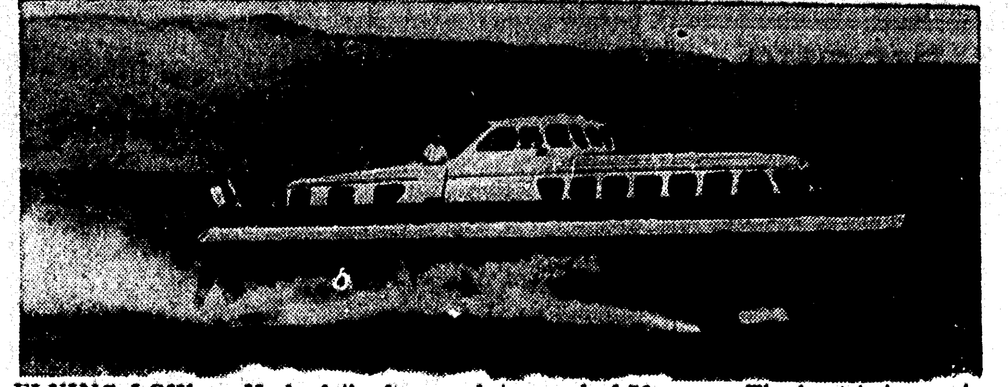
At a recent meeting, the West Monroe Junior Of Commerce unanimously adopted a project to provide food end clothing at Christmas to needy families on the west side of the river. The project has been given the name "Operation Santa Claus."

The W. M. Jaycees plan to compile a list of needy families that live on the west side of the river and survey these families to determine their needs.

Jaycee Bob Clark, chairman of "Operation Santa Clause," stated: "The W. M. Jaycees hope the merchants and people of West Monroe will give their whole - hearted support to "operation Santa Claus.'" The Jaycees hope that "Operation Santa Claus" can become an annual project.

Business firms will be contacted shortly by W. M. Jaycees to solicit their co - operation in making "Operation Santa Claus" a success. Firms that participate in the project will be given a red sticker to display.

Any individuals wishing to send a monentary contribution are asked to mail them to: "Operation Santa Claus"; West Monroe Jaycees: West Monroe, La.



FLYING LOW — Hydrofoils fore and aft and a pair of powerful engines enable this Italian ferryboat to get its hull completely out of the water at cruising speed of 50 m.p.m. The boat is in service between the Italian mainland and Sicily, and carries up to 75 passengers.

Winged Italian Ferryboat Skims Along At 50 M. P. H.

MESSINA, Sicily (AP)—A small shipyard in this Sicilian city may bring about a world revolution in ferryboats. It's turning out "winged" vessels which skim over the water at 50 m.p.h.

Two of the boats — equipped with hydrofoils — already are in regular ferry service across the strait of Messina between Italy and Sicily.

They do the six-mile trip between Messina and mainland Reggio Calabria in just 10 minutes, carrying up to 75 passengers. It used to be a 40-minute ferry ride.

South America Next

The thrill of the speedy Messina strait ride may not be long in spreading around the world. One hydrofoil ferry has started demonstration runs along the Venezuelan coast.

Venezuelans have ordered another one, a 140-passenger vessel, now under construction at Messina. It will carry twice as many passengers as the "winged" ferries now in use.

All these vessels are the work of the Omonomi Shipyards of Messina, a small concern owned by the family of Sicilian engineer Carlo Rodriguez.

The idea of the hydrofoil is old. It was tried by the Wright brothers, among others, back in 1907. The Germans built hydrofoil patrol boats during World War II. The U. S. Navy is experimenting with them.

But Rodriguez, by adapting hydrofoils to big ferryboats, has given the scheme new commercial significance.

He conceived the "winged" ferryboats back in 1952 after riding during an Alpine vacation in a small hydrofoil boat built by German Engineer Baron Hans Von Schertel.

Von Schertel built the German patrol boats of World War II. He collaborated with Rodriguez in building the ferryboats.

The hydrofoil boat works on the same principle as the airplane. The hydrofoils are fins, or wings, attached to the underside of the boat, both fore and aft.

When the boat moves along slowly, or is at anchor, it rides in the water on its hull. The hydrofoils are submerged.

But as it picks up speed, the hydrofoils act like the wings of an airplane. They lift the boat, just as wings lift the airplane.

The faster the boat goes, the higher it rises out of the water. Eventually, the hull leaves the water completely, and the boat skims on the hydrofoils, looking like a vesel on stilts.

Little Resistance

Hydrofoil vessels are fast because they encounter little water resistance. The ferryboats hit speeds of more than 60 m.p.h. in tests.

The hydrofoils also give the boats stability. The first Rodriguez ferryboat, in its tests, rode out a storm with 80 m.p.h. winds. All other boats had to run for shelter.

It cost Rodriguez $250,000 to build his first ferryboat, which boasts an aluminum hull, steel alloy hydrofoils, and power from two 1,350 horsepower Mercedes engines.

It is far from a simple vessel. It carries radar and an automatic electronic device which controls the pitch of the hydrofoils.

Sputnik Age Spurs Toyland Engineers

Toyland is geared to conquer outer space by Christmas.

It's strange, but Santa has been 'way ahead of the grown - up world in the field of such things as rockets, guided missiles and satellites, and his pack is loaded with impressive electronic playthings designed to satisfy the adventurous urge of future space pioneers.

Junior space men may practice this Christmas with complicated-looking trucks for launching playroom satellites, or with miniature versions of the navy's latest anti-aircraft atomic guns. They can experiment with rocket launchers and radar machines, and defend the home ramparts with ray guns and missile trackers.

There's a turbo jet plane complete with launching platform, which takes off with a screaming siren, in true warlike fashion, but can't really injure the small fry because the nose of the plane is resilient plastic.

There's a sky sweeper with double - barreled rocket launcher which rotates, elevates, aims and fires six missiles straight on target, while a searchlight projects the targets and switches on and off.

In addition to these space age toys, there are other exciting accessories to modern toyroom warfare, such as big army trucks loaded with cannon and soldiers and, combat engineers sets including bridge, radar tower, quonset hut, soldiers, bulldozer and Nike launcher that fires harmless missiles.

Children already have accepted the space age, and look forward calmly to imminent trips to the moon and Mars. So Santa has to keep up to the minute — and he does.

Paul J. Howard Funeral Sunday

Last rites will be conducted Sunday for Paul Jones Howard of Monroe, 33 - year - old employe of the State Highway Department, who died Friday afternoon in a Monroe hospital. He was a cousin of Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard.

Funeral services will be held from Start Baptist Church in Start, La., with Rev. A. H. Johnson, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church in Ruston, officiating. Burial will be in the church cemetery. The body will remain in state at Hall Funeral Home here until the hour of the funeral.

Howard was seriously injured in an automobile accident about one month ago.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Phoebe Howard; a daughter, Miss Wanda Howard, of Monroe; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Howard of Bastrop; a sister, Mrs. Vivian Lewis of Monroe; five brothers, Felton Howard and Elsy Howard, both of Monroe; Willie Howard and Norman Howard, both of Ruston, and Enoch Howard of Mangham.

Final Rites Set For Mrs. Hodge

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. today for Mrs. Clara Etta Hodge, 78, former schoolteacher and life - long resident of Calhoun. She died early yesterday after a short illness.

Services will be held in Hixson Brothers Funeral Home with Dr. Ben Oliphant, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, officiating. Interment will be in Calhoun Cemetery.

Mrs. Hodge was a member of the Calhoun Methodist Church and a member of the Order of Eastern Star.

Survivors include three daughters, Miss Mary Hodge, Mrs. Ray Rhymes, and Mrs. T. B. Godfrey, all of Monroe and four sons, Irvin Hodge, Monroe; Bryan Hodge, Sterlington; Jerry Hodge, Rayville, and Floyd Hodge, Shreveport.

Pallbearers will be Dr. W. Chapman, P. H. Wright, Ross Golson, R. Fuller, Frank Golson, Sam Boyd, Dr. C. B. Flinn and Berlin Heck.

By JOHN LANNAN

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Emil Nelson feels from his own experience that every man his age should have a hobby — but not necessarily his.

Emil is 69 and his hobby is driving a hopped-up 1934 Ford at speeds better than 100 m p.h. He believes he's the nation's oldest hot rodder.

"I feel like I'm 30 years old," enthuses the near-septuagenarian. "I can run races with the boys anytime."

And to prove it, Emil can show two awards won this year in the finals of the New England Hot Rod Council competition.

Emil isn't new to racing. He started speeding about two years ago after a lapse of 37 years. His last racing car in the old days was a Stanley Steamer he made himself.

Marriage and a metal working job kept him pretty close to home since the Stanley days. Lately his knowledge of metals, his love for fast cars and a convenient back yard shop, brought him back into competition, this time against men a third of his age.

He has been working on his present car for three years.

His last car was built of spare parts from the Stanley plant at Watertown, Mass., where he worked as a mechanic - assembler under Fred Marriot, who designed the famous "Torpedo" which outran the world's best cars at Ormond Beach, F.a., in the 1920s.

Emil, an immigrant from Norway, learned metal working in Massachusetts after spending two years as a mess boy aboard a tramp steamer.

At the end of every work day, Emil is out in his back yard garage, either helping his two sons and a son-in-law on their hopped-up cars or working on his own machine. One night a week, he and the boys attend meetings of the Portland Shaft Twister's club, a hot rod group.

"I CAN SEE THE LIGHT!" — Miss Betty Corstorphine, blind for 18 of her 35 years, holds a Braille book at her home in Newark, N. J. Last month she underwent a radical experimental operation in Cedars of Lebannon hospital in Los Angeles in which surgeons inserted two tiny filaments connected to a photo-electric cell into the sight centers of her brain. She told newsmen: "I saw flashes, at one time a bright flash like an electric light bulb." Dr. John C. Button, her doctor, said the test showed that brain cells did not atrophy like unsued muscle cells, but could be stimulated. (AP Wirephoto)

PSYCHIATRIC MYSTERY

Science Unable To Explain Gein

EDITORS NOTE: Ed Gein, the "butcher - ghoul" of Plainfield, Wis., has been committed to an institution for the mentally insane to discover whether he is sane enough to stand trial for one of the two murders he has confessed. In the following dispatch, one of Wisconsin's top psychologists gives an insight into the type of examination Gein will undergo.

By GEORGE ARMOUR
United Press Staff Correspondent

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 23 (UP) — Ed Gein, the butcher of Plainfield, Wis., is at present a psychiatric mystery, the chief psychologist of the Wisconsin diagnostic center said today.

Dr. Rudolph Mathis said there are clues in the lives of horror murderers such as Gein, who has confessed murdering two women and decorating his farm home with the skulls and heads of 15 more.

However, only an exhaustive examination of these "clues" by psychologists at Waupun State Hospital can provide the explanation of why Gein turned ghoul and head - hunter, Mathias said.

"We really do not know much about this man's history — his early life, vocational adjustment, personal interests and all the things that make up a personality," Mathias said.

'Organically Based'

"Only a complete medical and spychiatric examination would show the basis for his actions. It is possible that his acts are organically based. That is one of the avenues to explore."

Mathias said he believes "professionally trained individuals would be able to evaluate in children the degree of disturbance and make proper recommendations" to head off crimes such as Gein's.

Dr. Mathias said "the term oedipus complex should not be dangled before the public in a case such as this."

The term has a precise meaning to trained personnel, but to explain it to an untrained person is like "explaining television to a man who does not understand electricity," Mathias said.

It is impossible to determine without a thorough examination if such a mother fixation applies to Gein, he added.

Shock Reaction

"The public reaction to the Gein case has been one of shock and humor," Mathias said. "Humor reduces the emotional shock. We call it 'gallows humor'. It is like the jokes among soldiers who are going into battle and are tense."

He said that "whether Gein is legally responsible or not is something that in the final analysis will have to be decided in a court of law. You can not equate criminal acts, such as murder, with mental illness. Criminal behavior in itself does not occur any more often among the mentally ill than among the normal populations."

Mathias would not comment on whether a mentally well person could have committed the crimes attributed to Gein. But he conceded "anyone would be hard put to explain some of this evidence — one would have to know a great deal more about the man."

MINOR BLAZE

A broken gas line leading into a floor furnace resulted in a minor blaze at 804 N. Fourth street, West Monroe, at 8:10 last night. West Monroe fire companies three, six and eight answered the alarm, and found that the gas escaping from the broken pipe had ignited and was blazing away. The flames were extinguished before the house was damaged. Residents of the structure are the T. J. Kincaid family.

SEARCH PUSHED

West Monroe police began a search last night for the driver of a two-tone blue car which hit the back of another car and then left the scene without stopping. O. R. Gwin, Route 2, Rayville, told police that he was driving in the 2800 block of Cypress street at 5:20 last night when the other car crashed into the back of his auto. The other car continued on, and Gwin was left with damages to the entire back of his car.

JAILED

Arrested on a charge of striking his wife and now lodged in the city jail was Thagus Noble, 41, Negro of 1603 Washington street. Noble was taken into custody by Monroe police officers early yesterday, and charged with aggravated battery and use of a dangerous weapon - his fist.

SUPPER PARTY

Morocco Sultan Achieves Success By Doing Nothing

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Sidi Mohammed ben Youssef became sultan of Morocco by doing nothing.

He's been achieving remarkable success by doing nothing ever since.

The French administrators of Morocco picked him for the throne in 1927 over the heads of two elder, but supposedly less tractable, brothers.

They kicked him out in 1953 when he refused to apply the royal seal to anti - nationalist decrees handed down to him by the Paris government.

And, finally, he returned in triumph as constitutional monarch of a newly independent Morocco after two years of leisurely, do-nothing exile in Corsica and Madagascar.

While the free - spending, autocratic sultan is not exactly beloved of his people, he can afford to do nothing since he is their symbol of nationalism and independence.

Ben Youssef the lukewarm nationalist dates from World War II.

Beore that time he was content to let the French rule while he toyed with his hobbies: money, fast cars (he owned 56 at one time), tennis and women (two wives and uncounted concubines).

But after the war he was to tell the French: "The protectorate regime is a suit tailored for the Morocco of 1912. In 1945 it hardly reaches the knees."

SULTAN BEN YOUSSEF

His stubborn refusal to crack down on the istiqal (independence) movement angered the French. Resident - General Alphonse Juin is reported to have told him: "Do as I ask or abdicate." Ben Youssef wouldn't do either.

The French hustled him into exile so fast he was wearing only pajamas as he boarded the plane. Two wives, 22 concubines, three daughters and five tons of baggage followed on a later plane.

If the French thought the sultan's ouster would dampen nationalist feeling they were mistaken. As an exiled martyr, Ben Youssef became a near deity to the terrorist bands that roamed Morocco in the name of independence.

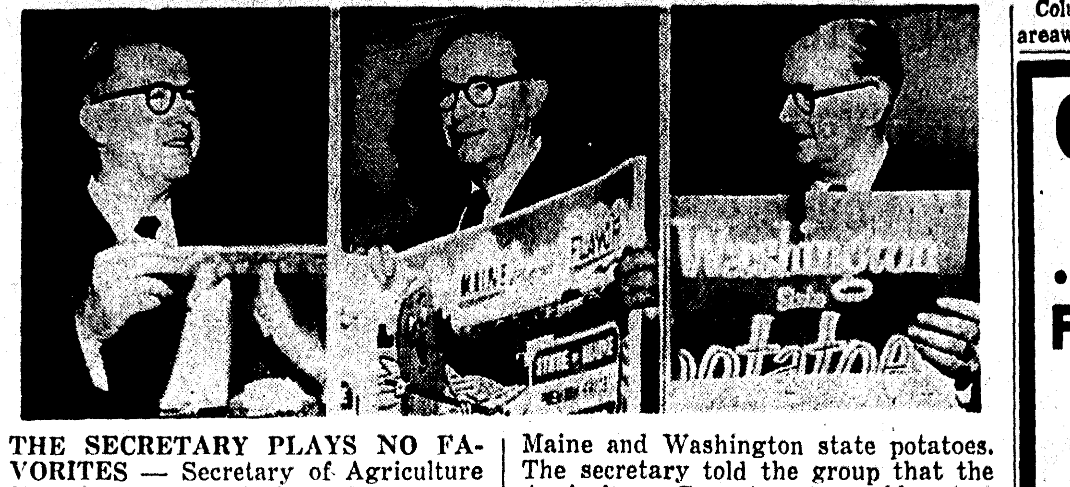
The French were forced to return him to the throne and grant independence as the easy way out. And Ben Youssef had a good word for his former protectors: Independence, he said, "does not mean breaking our bonds with France."

Ben Youssef is 48 and the 18th sultan of the Alaoui dynasty which has ruled Morocco, with or without help, since the 17th century. Like the rulers of Jordan, Iraq, Yemen and Libya, the Alaouites claim direct descent from the Prophet.

The sultan is a devout Moslem but wears an odd combination of traditional Moroccan robes and Western dress. He has never taken an alcoholic drink and reads the Koran several hours daily.

His two wives (half the allowable Moslem number) and concubines live secluded, veiled lives but his four daughters (one born during the Madagascar exile) are becoming Westernized.

The oldest, Princess Lalla Aicha, is the leader of a movement for the emancipation of Moroccan women. She has even had her picture taken in a bathing suit, a shocking departure from Moslem custom.



THE SECRETARY PLAYS NO FAVORITES — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson, principal speaker at session of the National Potato Council, in Washington took time out to pose with signs proclaiming the virtues of Idaho, Maine and Washington state potatoes. The secretary told the group that the Agriculture Department would reject any suggestions that the government pay a "bounty" to help the industry. (AP Wirephoto)

"I CAN SEE THE LIGHT!" — Miss Betty Corstorphine, blind for 18 of her 35 years, holds a Braille book at her home in Newark, N. J. Last month she underwent a radical experimental operation in Cedars of Lebannon hospital in Los Angeles in which surgeons inserted two tiny filaments connected to a photo-electric cell into the sight centers of her brain. She told newsmen: "I saw flashes, at one time a bright flash like an electric light bulb." Dr. John C. PSYCHIATRIC MYSTERY

EDITORS NOTE: Ed Gein, the "butcher - ghoul" of Plainfield, Wis., has been committed to an institution for the mentally insane to discover whether he is sane enough to stand trial for one of the two murders he has confessed. In the following dispatch, one of Wisconsin's top psychologists gives an insight into the type of examination Gein will undergo.

By GEORGE ARMOUR
United Press Staff Correspondent

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 23 (UP) — Ed Gein, the butcher of Plainfield, Wis., is at present a psychiatric mystery, the chief psychologist of the Wisconsin diagnostic center said today.

Dr. Rudolph Mathis said there are clues in the lives of horror murderers such as Gein, who has confessed murdering two women and decorating his farm home with the skulls and heads of 15 more.

However, only an exhaustive examination of these "clues" by psychologists at Waupun State Hospital can provide the explanation of why Gein turned ghoul and head - hunter, Mathias said.

"We really do not know much about this man's history — his early life, vocational adjustment, personal interests and all the things that make up a personality," Mathias said.

'Organically Based'

"Only a complete medical and spychiatric examination would show the basis for his actions. It is possible that his acts are organically based. That is one of the avenues to explore."

Mathias said he believes "professionally trained individuals would be able to evaluate in children the degree of disturbance and make proper recommendations" to head off crimes such as Gein's.

Dr. Mathias said "the term oedipus complex should not be dangled before the public in a case such as this."

The term has a precise meaning to trained personnel, but to explain it to an untrained person is like "explaining television to a man who does not understand electricity," Mathias said.

It is impossible to determine without a thorough examination if such a mother fixation applies to Gein, he added.

Shock Reaction

"The public reaction to the Gein case has been one of shock and humor," Mathias said. "Humor reduces the emotional shock. We call it 'gallows humor'. It is like the jokes among soldiers who are going into battle and are tense."

He said that "whether Gein is legally responsible or not is something that in the final analysis will have to be decided in a court of law. You can not equate criminal acts, such as murder, with mental illness. Criminal behavior in itself does not occur any more often among the mentally ill than among the normal populations."

Mathias would not comment on whether a mentally well person could have committed the crimes attributed to Gein. But he conceded "anyone would be hard put to explain some of this evidence — one would have to know a great deal more about the man."

MINOR BLAZE

A broken gas line leading into a floor furnace resulted in a minor blaze at 804 N. Fourth street, West Monroe, at 8:10 last night. West Monroe fire companies three, six and eight answered the alarm, and found that the gas escaping from the broken pipe had ignited and was blazing away. The flames were extinguished before the house was damaged. Residents of the structure are the T. J. Kincaid family.

SEARCH PUSHED

West Monroe police began a search last night for the driver of a two-tone blue car which hit the back of another car and then left the scene without stopping. O. R. Gwin, Route 2, Rayville, told police that he was driving in the 2800 block of Cypress street at 5:20 last night when the other car crashed into the back of his auto. The other car continued on, and Gwin was left with damages to the entire back of his car.

JAILED

Arrested on a charge of striking his wife and now lodged in the city jail was Thagus Noble, 41, Negro of 1603 Washington street. Noble was taken into custody by Monroe police officers early yesterday, and charged with aggravated battery and use of a dangerous weapon - his fist.

SUPPER PARTY

The Monroe Temple of the Pythian Sisters announces a covered dish supper and Thanksgiving party tomorrow evening at 7:30 in Castle Hall, 127½ St. John Street. Most Excellent Chief Ozell Thompson urged all Sisters and Knights who are members to attend and bring a covered dish.

Morocco Sultan Achieves Success By Doing Nothing

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Sidi Mohammed ben Youssef became sultan of Morocco by doing nothing.

The French administrators of Morocco picked him for the throne in 1927 over the heads of two elder, but supposedly less tractable, brothers.

They kicked him out in 1953 when he refused to apply the royal seal to anti - nationalist decrees handed down to him by the Paris government.

And, finally, he returned in triumph as constitutional monarch of a newly independent Morocco after two years of leisurely, do-nothing exile in Corsica and Madagascar.

While the free - spending, autocratic sultan is not exactly beloved of his people, he can afford to do nothing since he is their symbol of nationalism and independence.

Ben Youssef the lukewarm nationalist dates from World War II.

Beore that time he was content to let the French rule while he toyed with his hobbies: money, fast cars (he owned 56 at one time), tennis and women (two wives and uncounted concubines).

But after the war he was to tell the French: "The protectorate regime is a suit tailored for the Morocco of 1912. In 1945 it hardly reaches the knees."

SULTAN BEN YOUSSEF

His stubborn refusal to crack down on the istiqal (independence) movement angered the French. Resident - General Alphonse Juin is reported to have told him: "Do as I ask or abdicate." Ben Youssef wouldn't do either.

The French hustled him into exile so fast he was wearing only pajamas as he boarded the plane. Two wives, 22 concubines, three daughters and five tons of baggage followed on a later plane.

If the French thought the sultan's ouster would dampen nationalist feeling they were mistaken. As an exiled martyr, Ben Youssef became a near deity to the terrorist bands that roamed Morocco in the name of independence.

The French were forced to return him to the throne and grant independence as the easy way out. And Ben Youssef had a good word for his former protectors: Independence, he said, "does not mean breaking our bonds with France."

Program Gives Boost To Budding Science Known As Photogrammetry

By CHARLES L. STAFFORD

In the rear seat, Aubrey Patterson Jr. methodically triggered an aerial camera.

This flight shortly after noon one day last winter was civil engineering on the wing. The photography was step one in the job of planning a new highway by air.

With increasing frequency these flights are being made throughout the United States.

One Maryland road builder says the huge scope of the multi-billion-dollar federal highway program is dictating wider and wider use of this relatively new science called photogrammetry.

Simply stated, one phase of photogrammetry is the transformation of aerial photographs into accurate contour maps.

Essential to Planning

Without such maps a highway planner might run his road into a mountain or over a cliff. To know the lay of the land, he must have contour lines on his map.

Patterson's flight was the beginning of a project which proved to the satisfaction of the Maryland state roads commission that a new highway can be planned in its entirety by photogrammetry

The flight was made at 6,000 feet to give a plotting scale of one inch to 200 feet Patterson fired his camera every 3,600 feet — three pictures every two miles. The pictures were taken at a slight angle.

Back in the firm's laboratory at Harbor Field, the 200-foot roll drawing table. Each picture lapped over the next, like a deck of cards spread in a straight line.

Then a team of field men went into the area on foot. They picked out control points — a house here, a railroad signal there — and measured their exact location and elevation.

Back in the laboratory, these known locations were plotted on a five-foot square skeleton grid map spread on the work table of a weird looking machine called a Kelsh plotter.

The portions of two aerial photographs which overlapped were projected onto the plotting table from above, one from a projector with a red lamp and the other from a projector using a bluish bulb.

Three-Dimensional Effect

The map-maker put on glasses with red and blue lenses, just like the plastic glasses given patrons of the early 3D movies. These permitted him to see the blended picture of the terrain in depth.

He set the drawing arm of the plotter for the elevation of one of the known points and, beginning at that point, moved the attached pen point along the exact ground surface of the stereoscopic image. He drew the first contour line.

He raised the elevation two feet and began drawing the next line. This was done again and again until the contour map was finished.

Other flights were made — some as low as 1,500 feet and others up to 15,000 — and other maps drawn These included cross-section maps for estimating the amount of excavation and fill needed to build the road. This is the principal item considered by the contractor bidding on the project.

A photographic geologist — a new breed of scientist — studied the aerial photographs and test borings and produced a geologic report on the type of soil beneath the road's route.

Thus the road was planned.

Aerial photography and photogrammetry did the work which formerly would have been assigned many field teams of hard to find civil engineers. And they did it with accuracy in only one-third the time which would have been required by ground crews. Only a fraction of the test borings usually made were necessary to prepare the geologic report.

ALL-SEEING EYE: Flying cameraman Aubrey Patterson Jr. heads for the darkroom with his big camera after shooting the pictures necessary for plotting a contour map.

AT BALL GAME

Ole Miss Bandsmen Scuffle With Cops

MEMPHIS, Nov. 23 (AP) — Two University of Mississippi band members were fined $26 each in city court today, the result of a scuffle with police just before halftime of the Mississippi-Tennessee game last Saturday.

After the hearing, Robert J. Farley, dean of the Mississippi law school, told newsmen that the future of Ole Miss football games in Memphis has been jeopardized because of the incident.

Farley, member of the Ole Miss Athletic Committee and attorney for the band members, said:

"I am going to report to the Southeastern Conference on the violation of the Ole Miss contract with the (Memphis) park commission by the police department to see if other Southeastern teams might want to play elsewhere than in Memphis until this situation is straightened out.

"We don't care to have another game in Memphis until the situation is cleared up. The action of the police at the game was calculated to invoke a riot and not in the interest of protecting anybody."

Memphis is usually the site of one or two SEC games a year. Ole Miss has played here twice this year.

Robert Hand, 18-year-old Philadelphis, Miss., freshman was fined $26 for assault and battery. James Thomas Speed, 18, Carthage, Miss., was also fined $26. He was charged with disorderly conduct.

Police Lt. W. W. Davis testified that some of the Mississippi band members, lined up just off the field in preparation for halftime ceremonies, were blocking the view of spectators.

The lieutenant said he tapped Hand on the shoulder and said "Mac, you'll have to move back. . .We had some words and I got him by the sleeve to lead him back." Davis said Hand then hit him in the eye with his fist, blacking the eye.

Hand said he was already kneeling and that he told the officer "my name isn't Mac. He said he didn't care what my name was or about the University of Mississippi. I told him I didn't care about him. He had hold of my sleeve and I tried to brush his hand off and he caught me with the other hand and started pushing, and then I hit him. It was sort of a reflex action. Two other officers grabbed me."

Police said Speed raised his trumpet as though to hit an officer after Hand was taken into custody. Speed said he was merely trying to keep the trumpet from getting damaged as police and bandsmen came running up.

Police took the two students to headquarters where they posted bond. They missed the halftime performance.

Farley said the police had no authority over the bandsmen because of the contract Mississippi had with the park commission. The commission operates Crump Stadium, where the game was played.

"We have never been treated like this in any other city," Farley said. "We have never had any policeman to tell our band where they should stand because they didn't have that authority. No policeman in the world can remove a band member on complaint of a spectator. They were lawfully where they should have been.

"The Memphis police department showed an arrogance no other police force in the country has shown where Ole Miss has played."

Assistant city attorney Jesse Vinyard represented the police department. He asked that Hand be held to the grand jury on the assault and battery charge. Judge Beverly Boushe declined.

Met Singer Turned Bounce Into Boost

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't peanut chews that got Leonard Warren into the Metropolitan Opera, and it wasn't the fact that he was practically bounced from a music-hall chorus.

He has been singing at the Met almost two decades because he has perhaps the richest, most touching baritone voice of our time.

But just the same the peanut candy (and what can be worse for a singer's throat than scratchy peanuts?) helped him on his way.

And the bounce he got from the Woman who bossed the chorus was really a boost.

A tall, sturdy man who holds himself as straight as a soldier, Warren has a swarthy complexion, a high forehead, hair that is graying a bit and receding a bit more.

He is as dramatic offstage as on. He rolls his eyes, he smiles, leers, scowls, looks at you with affection, and glares with hatred.

"This is Iago," he says, and his fingers clench, he bares his teeth, he freezes you with dread, the waiters fall away from his table as if Othello's fiend was after them.

A native New Yorker — unlike so many Met singers from Rome, Naples, Florence, and Vienna— Warren comes from a family of better than average means. After working a time in the family business and deciding he didn't like it, he took music lessons on his own and, during the depression, felt he ought to cash in on them. So he got a job in the 24-man glee club at Radio City Music Hall.

"Imagine," he exclaims, ducking his head, and going through the motions, "me with a tall hat, and a cane, and doing dance steps!"

No Future

He continued: "After about three years I went to Erno Rapee, the big boss, and asked for some solo parts. He answered bluntly that I would stay in the chorus for keeps unless I picked up some reputation as a singer outside his hall.

"That was a blow. Wandering back along 50th Street on my way home, I passed my favorite candy store where I usually bought peanut chews. I didn't have much money, they were cheap, I liked them — I still like them. There in the window was a large sign: 'Have confidence.'

"That was how it began. And it went on to advise the passer-by to have confidence in the candy bought there. I made my regular purchase, and noticed small circulars or blotters with the same words. I asked for some, and was told to help myself. Back at the music hall I cut out the word Confidence and put it on the lid of my makeup box where I saw it several times a day."

That did something to him, Warren said. "Three months later a fellow in the chorus nagged me: 'If you think you're so good, why don't you try for the Metropolitan Opera auditions?'

I asked the woman in charge of the glee club for two weeks off to work up some numbers to sing for the audition, and she told me, sure, take a couple of weeks and don't come back!

"Well, I was ready to quit anyway. But I took the auditions and —"

And the rest is operatic history. There were 700 entered that year, 1938, and he was the last, or about 75th, the day he sang his little pieces. Met conductor Wilfrid Pelletier, in charge, listened from the control room. When he heard this baritone voice come out of the speaker he was so sure some one on the staff was kidding him and playing the record of some famed master's voice that he went to stand beside the piano and hear it straight.

That settled it. Warren, who did not know a single operatic role, sailed off for Italy and a summer of hard study that laid the groundwork for his spectacular career at the Met and in opera houses and on the concert platforms of the Western world.

Verdi has provided Warren with perhaps his best parts, and the one for which he is known before all others is Rigoletto. But in many other operas in which the public expects to be thrilled by the featured lead, a soprano or tenor for instance, it finds itself most thrilled by Warren's voice and artistry — as in his moving interpretation of the father, Giorgio Germont, as against the more popular roles of Violetta and Alfredo in "Traviata."

How big a part in all this does acting play?

"It is 60 per cent of it," he answered. "When I studied Scarpia, I worked with Riccardo Picozzi in Italy, and while he was ill in the hospital, too. He told me that the secret of Scarpia, ruthless police chief, was the right kind of walk. He tapped out the rhythm, with a pencil on an ashtray, while for hours I walked up and down by his bed. Finally the body and the mind were so closely knit in their understanding of this tyrant that without my singing or saying a word an audience could tell what kind of man I interpreted."

Warren and Mrs. Warren have a New York apartment and a home on the Connecticut shore. He is a boating enthusiast, with a new 26-foot motor cruiser with intercom, ship-to-shore radio and a regular galley. He is a camera fan, a fisherman, and a cook.

His cooking can be serious. He can make "chicken supreme," and he shows how, too, at the edge of the lunch table, rolling imaginary chicken up with make-believe batter as graphically and dramatically, with as many grimaces, as when he fingers the jester's wand or Gilda's handkerchief on the great Met stage.

Tech Downs Northeast, 15-6

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

There's a movement underway, however small at this time, toward organization of an Amateur Athletic Union basketball club for Monroe, something the Twin Cities haven't been able to boast in nearly 25 years—since the Brown Paper Mill's Brownies were the scourge of the south and once runner-up for the national title.

Talk of an A.A.U. representative here is in the discussion stage. There's nothing definite. Not even a sponsor. There's no club personnel, but there are a lot of good players, not long out of college, who would probably enjoy stretching their basketball careers into A.A.U. competition.

The talent is here—Bob Bennett, Mel Gibson, Lloyd Crocker, Herschel McConathy, Jerry Lovett, L. V. Norris, among others—to assure a good start. These Northeast State-Louisiana Tech-Northwestern State products are former All-Gulf States players. Cary Phillips, now a West Monroe businessman, had little better talent to start with when the ex-Ole Miss All-America began building the Brown Paper Mill team to a powerhouse in the early 1930's.

The last A.A.U. team representative from this area was the West Monroe Volley Ball club that won the state championship two years running for player-manager Ralph "Red" Sims in 1950-51, including one divisional championship at Memphis, Tenn. Sims is the police juror who also coaches Monroe's American Legion Junior baseball team that currently is state champion, and Bob Bennett, the tall native son of West Monroe that we have listed as a possible for the discussed A.A.U. basketball team, was a member of Sims' championship volley ball club.

A big reason for the A.A.U. basketball movement is the growth of the same program in other Louisiana cities, assuring a Monroe team competition in its own class and possibility of the organization of an A.A.U. league for the state, and maybe include neighboring states.

Last year the McDonald Scots organized at Lake Charles. There's already the Baton Rouge Teamsters. Talk of an A.A.U. club here is being matched at Shreveport, New Orleans, and Alexandria.

The nearest thing to the same type of team here was the Nichols Motors clubs sponsored by Curtis Nichols a few seasons ago. Just one thing could make the Monroe movement steamroller—some person or business ready to sponsor such a club.

A.A.U. basketball interest isn't the only thing being stimulated here. There's the Ouachita Lion Booster Club that has been known as the Ouachita Dad's Club until recently when the dads of Lion athletes decided to expand their organization, permitting membership to anybody with their interests at Ouachita.

The Boosters have two December meetings scheduled, December 2 and December 16, and Ouachita supporters are being invited to attend these sessions, help the club grow, and pour concrete supports for Ouachita's athletic programs.

If you are a parent of Ouachita students you probably got your invitation to the meetings yesterday, or will be invited this week to join the Ouachita Boosters whose "present aim is to build attendance, stimulate school spirit, and create publicity."

The invitation challenges "if you feel that we can become strong again, that our youngsters have a good future program at Ouachita, please, we urge you to attend December meetings on the second and sixteenth."

32-7 ROUT

Oklahoma Blasts Hapless Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 23 (UP)—Oklahoma started a new victory string today by blasting hapless Nebraska, 32-7, in a Big Eight conference game.

Oklahoma, intent on regaining the prestige it lost in its 7-0 loss to Notre Dame a week ago, kept intact Coach Bud Wilkinson's records of never having lost a conference game in his 11 seasons at Oklahoma. The win stretched the Sooners' unbeaten string in conference play to 65. They have been tied twice.

The Huskers, with a 1-9 season record and 1-6 in conference play, finished for the first time in the conference cellar and hung up the worst won-loss record in the school's history. The only win was 14-7 at Kansas State.

However, the Huskers did enjoy one of their rare moments of glory this season by scoring first. They did it on a 37-yard, nine-play march the first time they got the ball. The payoff came on a six-yard pitch from halfback Larry Naviaux to Doug Thomas in the end zone with five minutes gone.

Denied touchdowns after moving to the six-inch line and again to the nine yard line in the first period, they scored three touchdowns in the second period for an 18-7 halftime lead.

The fourth Sooner touchdown came on the second half kickoff when Joe Rector fell on the ball, which had rolled through the whole Nebraska team into the Husker end zone.

The second touchdown drive the first half covered 14, 57, and 38 yards. The last was set up by a fumble recovery. The scoring came on 12-yard sprints by quarterback Dave Baker and left halfback Jakie Sandefer and a six-yard burst by fullback Dave Rolle.

The fifth Sooner touchdown came when Brewster Hobby smashed over from a yard out to cap a 65-yard march.

Score by periods:

Nebraska	7	0	0	0	—7
Oklahoma	0	18	14	0	—32

Oklahoma scoring: Touchdowns, Baker (12, run; Hobby 2 (6, 1, runs; Sandefer (13, run; Rector (fell on kicked off in end zone. Conversions, Dodd, Rolle.

Kallio Places Fight Tickets On Early Sale

Promoter Gus Kallio yesterday said tickets for his December 3 fight program, featuring Clarence Cook vs. Jimmy Leach and Johnny McKoin vs. Curt Woolwine, are now on sale at his residence office, 1101 Jackson street, and Fink's Men's Store here, and at City C. and A. Club in Bastrop.

The tickets are scaled at $2.50 for the first four ringside rows and the first row in each of two balcony sections. All other seats in the house will go for $1.50, except that children under 12 years of age will be admitted for 50 cents to general admission seats.

Kallio, who will be busy arranging his preliminary card this week, will be presenting his first fight card in several weeks and will be returning Cook to action for the first time in several months.

NATS IN SECOND

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Syracuse Nationals overcame a 16-point deficit and behind the sharpshooting of Johnny Kerr and Ed Conlin defeated the New York Knickerbockers 119-115 tonight to move into sole possession of second place in the eastern division of the National Basketball Association.

Bulldogs End Season Atop GS Conference

By BOB ANDERSON (Assistant Sports Editor, The Morning World.)

RUSTON, La. —Louisiana Tech settled a year-old vendetta and claimed at least a tie for the Gulf States championship as they plowed past Northeast State, 15-6, here yesterday under cold, cloudy skies.

Coach Joe Aillet's Bulldogs thus avenged a 7-0 loss to Devone Payne's Indians last year that knocked them out of sole leadership of the conference. Yesterday's victory was the fourth for Tech in the five games of the young but fierce rivalry.

STATISTICS

	Tech	Northeast
First downs	13	9
Yards rushing	248	173
Yards passing	33	33
Passes	3-6	2-5
Passes int. by	0	0
Fumbles lost	3	2
Punts-average	2-43	4-32
Yards penalized	3-25	6-60

The Techmen threatened often but scored only once in the first half on a one-yard plunge by freshman flash Paul Hynes. They counted next in the third quarter when Doyan Foster and Allen Stough tackled Indian Terry Head in the end zone for a safety. Minutes later Max Rudd ran 16 yards and he kicked the PAT.

Underdog Northeast scored its only touchdown in the fourth quarter of the muddy contest when little quarterback Nathan Zametto pushed over from the one-foot line on fourth down to cap a 61-yard march. Jim Laudadio was pulled down on the one when he tried to run for the extra point.

The victory was the sixth of the season for Tech against four losses. Their conference record of 4-1 is good enough for at least a tie for the conference crown. The defeat was Northeast's sixth of the year against two wins. The Indians lost all five of their loop games to finish in the league cellar.

Tempers flared on occasion in the game and two players were put out of the game in the early minutes for mixing up too enthusiastically but the game ended harmoniously with handshakes all around.

The entire first quarter was played in Northeast territory. On the first play from scrimmage one of the Indian backs missed connections on a handoff and fumbled. The ball ended up on the 41 where Bond got it for Tech.

The Tech men went as deep as the 18 on the running of Jerry Fraser and Bond. However, David Williamson lost two and Bond made only one after trying to pass on fourth down and the Indians took over.

A few plays later, the Bulldogs took an almost - blocked punt by Head on the 48 and went to the 13 with a 25-yard dash around left by Williamson eating up most of the yardage. The Techmen came up with a fumble of their own and Gerald Elkins recovered it on the 14 to end the threat.

Northeast reached the 20 before being forced to punt and Hynes took Head's boot on his 49 and sailed back to the 36. He made one more before Bond tossed to Jim Orton to the 24. Rudd went to the 23, Orton to the 19 for a first. Orton reached the 16 and Bond the 11 as the quarter ended.

Rudd went to the 7 on the first play of the second period and Hynes ran to the one and then over for the touchdown. Rudd's kick was no good on fourth down the extra point and it was 6-0.

The Indians reached the Tech 33 before the half but two incomplete passes ended the drive. Bond almost got loose before being brought down on the NE 39 as the half ended.

Midway of the third quarter, Tech stalled on the Northeast 48 and punted. Freshman halfback Head took it on the six, fumbled it, picked it up and ran behind the goal line as he tried to reverse his field and shake loose. He almost reached the goal line before Foster and Stough hit him and Tech had two more points.

Northeast kicked off from the 20 to Bond at the 40 and he lugged it back to the Indian 44. It took Tech five plays to score. Rudd went for five, Hynes to the 31 for a first, Orton to the 22 and Hynes to the 16 before Rudd went over. Half a dozen men had good shots at him and one almost threw him for no gain but the Minden frosh got away and the score was 14-0. Rudd added the PAT to make it 15-0.

Early in the fourth quarter, Northeast started the trip to its TD after taking a Hynes punt on their 41. Jim Laudadio went to the 46, McGough for one and an offside rap against Tech gave the Redskins five more for a first. Everett reached the 45, then Laudadio to the 36 after which another offside penalty moved it to the 31.

Laudadio took a pitchout from Zametto and passed to Keith Amos on the 25 and the halfback rambled on to the 5. It took the Indians four downs to go the five yards for the score and they worked for all the mileage.

McGough reached the one-foot line in three carries before Zametto, with the rest of the backfield pushing, sneaked over. Laudadio faked a kick and tried to run for the extra point, but couldn't make it.

Nothing much happened in the 8 minutes and 20 seconds left in the game although Northeast reached the Tech 20 before being shoved back.

The lineups:

Buckeyes Storm Wolverines, 31-14

The Wolverines surprised Ohio States, second ranked in the nation, and the sellout crowd of 101,001 fans by taking the lead twice in the first half.

But the overwhelming power of the Ohio State ground attack, paced by 212-pound sophomore fullback Bob White, produced two touchdowns in the third period and another in the fourth period to wrap up the game in easy fashion.

Although White failed to figure in the scoring, even eight and nine-man Michigan lines couldn't stop him as he piled up well over 163 yards rushing with his tank-like thrusts.

White, who was a one-man gang in Ohio States's conquest of Iowa a week ago, carried on nearly half of the plays in the Buckeyes' pair of third period scoring drives and set up the second one by recovering a Michigan fumble deep in his own territory.

Jim Pace, Michigan's only offensive threat, danced 16 yards with the game hardly six minutes old for the first touchdown. But Dick le Beau matched that marker with the first of his two touchdowns late in the period to tie the score.

Dor Sutherin kicked a field goal from the 30 in the second period to give the Buckeyes a short-lived 10-7 lead. Jim van Pelt passed to Brad Myers at the Ohio State 10 and Myers ran into the end zone to give Michigan a 14-10 halftime lead.

Score by periods:

Michigan	7	7	0	0	—14
Ohio State	7	3	14	7	—31

Michigan scoring: Touchdowns, Pace (16, run); Myers (25, pass-run from van Pelt); Conversions, van Pelt 2.

Ohio State scoring: Touchdowns, Le Beau 2 (5, run); 8, run); Kremblas (16, run); Cannavino (13, run). Conversions, Sutherlin 1, Kremblas 3. Field Goal, Sutherlin (30).

Marr, Weaver In Tie At West Palm

WEST PALM BEACh, Fla., Nov. 23 (UP)— Dave Marr, a youthful first cousin of Jackie Burke Jr., turned in a five-under par 67 today to tie Bert Weaver for the second round lead in the $10,000 West Palm Beach Open Golf tournament.

Veteran Pete Cooper of Lakeland, Fla, who likes the difficult West Palm Beach country club course just fine, moved into contention with a 140 total. Cooper won the Florida State Open here in 1948.

The field of 144 was trimmed to 64 professionals and 10 amateurs for Sunday's final round.

The 23-year-old Marr achieved his 67, only one stroke over the competitive course record, with fine approach shots to the green. He ran down a short putt for an eagle on the first hole, a 490-yard par-five test, and just missed eagles on two other holes.

The young protege of veteran Calude Harmon missed a one-foot putt to take a bogey on the fifth hole but made up for it later with 18 and 10-footers for birdies.

The 25-year-old Weaver appeared to be protecting his opening round lead of two strokes by playing it safe today.

Both Weaver and Marr are fighting for their first major tourney victory on the professional trail. Weaver has picked up over $4,000 in close finishes this year but Marr has been able to play tournament golf infrequently and has banked only $1,900.

The winner Sunday will collect $1,200.

Stein Sparkles As St. Aloysius Tops De La Salle

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (AP)—Lenny Stein scored two touchdowns today to pace St. Aloysius to a 27-0 victory over De La Salle.

Stein's first touchdown, made on an eight yard run, climaxed an 80 yard drive. He scored again in the third period, going 10 yards up the middle to end a 70-yard march.

George Oeschner and Bobby Fore made the other touchdowns and August Balser made three conversions.

13-0 VICTORY EARNS TITLE

Delhi Wins Over Mangham Team

DELHI, La. (Special —Delhi's Bears downed the class B state champions of Mangham, 13-0, here last night to win the district 2-B championship.

Delhi will play the district 1B winner, Coushatta, Friday night, DeDecember 2, a (Delhi in their first playoff game

Both teams entered the contest undefeated in conference play. Delhi now has a 5-0 conference record of Mangham's 4-1 mark. Delhi's season mark is 9-1-1. They lost to Tallulah and were tied by Ferriday.

This marks the fifth time in Coach Raymond Richards' eight years at Delhi that the Bears have earned the right to compete in the championship playoffs.

Protected by superlative blocking by Bobby Leach and other Bruins, quarterback Charles Simmons dashed 49 yards for the first Delhi score midway of the second quarter.

Billy Ray Newton scored the second touchdown of the game in the fourth period from 10 yards out. Leach's conversion was good.

Mangham, losers of only one other game this season, did not make a serious threat in the game. Delhi rang up five downs in a row early in the game and were threatening until they lost the ball on a fumble around the 10-yard line.

The winners had 12 first downs in the game to five for Mangham.

McNeese Tags SLI, 13 To 0; Shares Title

LAFAYETTE, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—McNeese earned one-third of the Gulf States Conference title with a 13-0 victory over Southwestern Louisiana Institute tonight before 2,500 chilled fans.

McNeese started rolling in the second period, going 75 yards in 11 plays with halfback Rogers Hampton making the final six yards over tackle. Cleo Cooper converted.

Early in the third period SLI safety man Steve Gossen fumbled a McNeese punt which McNeese recovered on the SLI 35. McNeese scored in five plays. Halfback Paul Smith went three yards on the final play.

SLI penetrated to the McNeese five in the first period and reached the McNeese 16 in the fourth period. McNeese held each time and took over on downs.

Reward Leads All The Way In Pimlico

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 23 (AP)—With the 2-year-old championship and the most money ever won in the first year of racing for a thoroughbred waiting for him, Jewel's Reward went out and led all the way today to win the Pimlico Futurity.

Montpelier stable's Nala came storming up from sixth and last place near the end to try to snatch it all away, but failed by a length. Christiana stable's Slaysail was third and the favored Misty Flight of Wheatley stable came in next. The trailers were John A. Swiatek's Beau Priam and Pine Tree stable's Amber Tide.

It was the fifth victory in 12 races for Jewel's Reward who was almost sold as a yearling by Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham. But no one topped her own bid of $3,300 for the son of Jet Jewel and Belle Jeep, so she kept him.

The $115,347 which Jewel's Reward won boosted his earnings to $349,642. The previous leading bankroll by a 2-year-old was $277,132 by Hasty Road in 1953.

Whipped frequently by jockey Willie Shoemaker and ridden throughout by four of the field, Jewel's Reward went around the mile and sixteenth in the good time of 1:44 1-5 on a track left damp by earlier snow.

His $2 mutuel payoffs were $5.60, $4.20 and $5.20.

Wildlife Unit Holding Final Meet Of Year

The Ouachita unit of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation holds its last meeting of the year here Tuesday, and the session has been scheduled as "presidents' night" with all past unit presidents as special guests of the organization.

Ken Beegle, the famed firearms expert, also is scheduled to appear as a guest of the organization, and it's possible that Lamar Clements, Wildlife and Fisheries commissioner, will be on hand, according to unit president Arthur "Bud" Tidwell.

Some hunting and fishing resolutions may be acted upon by the unit, Tidwell said, and the usual door prizes will be given.

"With Mr. Beegle and possible Mr. Clements to attend our meeting, we are inviting all sportsmen of this area to attend our meeting," Tidwell said.

Oak Grove, Central Teams Win At Epps

EPPS, La. (Special) — Championship trophies were awarded the Oak Grove High School boys and the Central girls of Delhi at the close of the second annual Epps High School Invitational Basketball Tournament here last night Oak Grove shaded Kilbourne in the boys' final, 48-45, and the Central girls nipped Winnsboro, 44-42, in their title scrap.

Bradley, Oak Grove, and Hammack, Kilbourne, tied for scoring honors in the boys' final with 15 points apiece. Loftin, with 36 points for Central, led the girls' final, while Watson of Winnsboro's sextet hooped 24.

In the day's semi-finals the Central girls beat Pioneer, 49-31; the Winnsboro girls beat Forest, 44-35; the Oak Grove boys beat Forest, 41-39; and the Kilbourne boys stopped Bonita, 45-40.

NSC Defeats Southeastern To Split Title

NATCHITOCHES, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Northwestern State split the Gulf States Conference title with McNeese and Louisiana Tech by beating Southeastern Louisiana 13-7 tonight.

The three co-champions ended the season with 4-1 GSC records. Tech wound up its season by defeating Northeast 15-6 and McNeese blanked SLI 13-0.

NSC mounted two long scoring drives in the first half to beat SLC for the first time since 1948.

Charles Toler ran 25 yards to climax a 62 yard drive in the first quarter. Charles Johnson converted. Dale Hoffpauir plunged over from one yard out to end a 96 yard second period drive.

SLC followed by making its only touchdown on a three yard run by Ralph Zeringue. The 67-yard march took 18 plays. Ken Bailey converted.

SLC went to the NSC 31 and 23 during the third period, losing the ball each time on downs.

WALKER SPARKLES

Arkansas Romps Over Texas Tech

By BRUCE B. MILLER

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 23 (UP)—Steady George Walker, Arkansas' sharp - shooting quarterback, flipped two touchdown passes today leading the Razorbacks to a lopsided 47-26 victory over the Red Raiders from Texas Tech in the season's finale at War Memorial stadium.

It was quite a switch for the 19,000 fans who shivered in 40-degree temperature and watched Arkansas exchange its normally conservative ball control game to a home-run type of passing attack.

With Walker on the pitching end of a near-perfect combination, the Razorbacks snapped a three-game losing streak as well as a three-year hex that had plagued them in their final game of the year.

Arkansas struck in the first three minutes on a 34-yard touchdown pass from Walker to end Bob Childress. It was the first play from scrimmage after a Tech fumble and set the pattern for the rest of the game.

Score by periods:

Arkansas	6	27	7	7	—47
Texas Tech	0	6	7	13	—26

Arkansas scoring: Touchdowns, Nesbitt 2 (1, run; 1, run); Childress (34, pass from Walker); Kyser 2 (3, run; 19, pass from Walker); Wetherington (44, lateral from Tranum who took pass from Christian); Stone (7, run). Conversions, Nesbitt 2, Ritchell, Akers, Perry.

Tech Downs Northeast, 15-6

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

There's a movement underway, however small at this time, toward organization of an Amateur Athletic Union basketball club for Monroe, something the Twin Cities haven't been able to boast in nearly 25 years—since the Brown Paper Mill's Brownies were the scourge of the south and once runner-up for the national title.

Talk of an A.A.U. representative here is in the discussion stage. There's nothing definite. Not even a sponsor. There's no club personnel, but there are a lot of good players, not long out of college, who would probably enjoy stretching their basketball careers into A.A.U. competition.

The talent is here—Bob Bennett, Mel Gibson, Lloyd Crocker, Herschel McConathy, Jerry Lovett, L. V. Norris, among others—to assure a good start. These Northeast State-Louisiana Tech-Northwestern State products are former All-Gulf States players. Cary Phillips, now a West Monroe businessman, had little better talent to start with when the ex-Ole Miss All-America began building the Brown Paper Mill team to a powerhouse in the early 1930's.

The last A.A.U. team representative from this area was the West Monroe Volley Ball club that won the state championship two years running for player-manager Ralph "Red" Sims in 1950-51, including one divisional championship at Memphis, Tenn. Sims is the police juror who also coaches Monroe's American Legion Junior baseball team that currently is state champion, and Bob Bennett, the tall native son of West Monroe that we have listed as a possible for the discussed A.A.U. basketball team, was a member of Sims' championship volley ball club.

A big reason for the A.A.U. basketball movement is the growth of the same program in other Louisiana cities, assuring a Monroe team competition in its own class and possibility of the organization of an A.A.U. league for the state, and maybe include neighboring states.

Last year the McDonald Scots organized at Lake Charles. There's already the Baton Rouge Teamsters. Talk of an A.A.U. club here is being matched at Shreveport, New Orleans, and Alexandria.

The nearest thing to the same type of team here was the Nichols Motors clubs sponsored by Curtis Nichols a few seasons ago. Just one thing could make the Monroe movement steamroller—some person or business ready to sponsor such a club.

* * *

A.A.U. basketball interest isn't the only thing being stimulated here. There's the Ouachita Lion Booster Club that has been known as the Ouachita Dad's Club until recently when the dads of Lion athletes decided to expand their organization, permitting membership to anybody with their interests at Ouachita.

The Boosters have two December meetings scheduled, December 2 and December 16, and Ouachita supporters are being invited to attend these sessions, help the club grow, and pour concrete supports for Ouachita's athletic programs.

If you are a parent of Ouachita students you probably got your invitation to the meetings yesterday, or will be invited this week to join the Ouachita Boosters whose "present aim is to build attendance, stimulate school spirit, and create publicity."

The invitation challenges "if you feel that we can become strong again, that our youngsters have a good future program at Ouachita, please, we urge you to attend December meetings on the second and sixteenth."

32-7 ROUT

Oklahoma Blasts Hapless Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 23 (UP)—Oklahoma started a new victory string today by blasting hapless Nebraska, 32-7, in a Big Eight conference game.

Oklahoma, intent on regaining the prestige it lost in its 7-0 loss to Notre Dame a week ago, kept intact Coach Bud Wilkinson's records of never having lost a conference game in his 11 seasons at Oklahoma. The win stretched the Sooners' unbeaten string in conference play to 65. They have been tied twice.

The Huskers, with a 1-9 season record and 1-6 in conference play, finished for the first time in the conference cellar and hung up the worst won-loss record in the school's history. The only win was 14-7 at Kansas State.

However, the Huskers did enjoy one of their rare moments of glory this sason by scoring first. They did it on a 37-yard, nine-play march the first time they got the ball. The payoff came on a six-yard pitch from halfback Larry Naviaux to Doug Thomas in the end zone with five minutes gone.

Denied touchdowns after moving to the six-inch line and again to the nine yard line in the first period, they scored three touchdowns in the second period for an 18-7 halftime lead.

The fourth Sooner touchdown came on the second half kickoff when Joe Rector fell on the ball, which had rolled through the whole Nebraska team into the Husker end zone.

Sooner touchdown drive the first half covered 14, 57, and 38 yards. The last was set up by a fumble recovery. The scoring came on 12-yard sprints by quarterback Dave Baker and left halfback Jakie Sandefer and a six-yard burst by fullback Dave Rolle.

The fifth Sooner touchdown came when Brewster Hobby smashed over from a yard out to cap a 65-yard march.

Score by periods:

Nebraska	7	0	0	0—7
Oklahoma	0	18	14	0—32

Kallio Places Fight Tickets On Early Sale

Promoter Gus Kallio yesterday said tickets for his December 3 fight program, featuring Clarence Cook vs. Jimmy Leach and Johnny McKoin vs. Curt Woolwine, are now on sale at his residence office, 1101 Jackson street, and Fink's Men's Store here, and at City C. and A. Club in Bastrop.

The tickets are scaled at $2.50 for the first four ringside rows and the first row in each of two balcony sections. All other seats in the house will go for $1.50, except that children under 12 years of age will be admitted for 50 cents to general admission seats.

Kallio, who will be busy arranging his preliminary card this week, will be presenting his first fght card in several weeks and will be returning Cook to action for the first time in several months.

NATS IN SECOND

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Syracuse Nationals overcame a 16-point deficit and behind the sharpshooting of Johnny Kerr and Ed Conlin defeated the New York Knickerbockers 119-115 tonight to move into sole possession of second place in the eastern division of the National Basketball Association.

Bulldogs End Season Atop GS Conference

By BOB ANDERSON
(Assistant Sports Editor, The Morning World.)

RUSTON, La. —Louisiana Tech settled a year-old vendetta and claimed at least a tie for the Gulf States championship as they plowed past Northeast State, 15-6, here yesterday under cold, cloudy skies.

Coach Joe Aillet's Bulldogs thus avenged a 7-0 loss to Devone Payne's Indians last year that knocked them out of sole leadership of the conference. Yesterday's victory was the fourth for Tech in the five games of the young but fierce rivalry.

STATISTICS

	Tech	Northeast
First downs	13	9
Yards rushing	248	173
Yards passing	33	33
Passes	3-6	2-5
Passes int. by	0	0
Fumbles lost	3	2
Punts-average	2-43	4-32
Yards penalized	3-25	6-60

The Techmen threatened often but scored only once in the first half on a one-yard plunge by freshman flash Paul Hynes. They counted next in the third quarter when Doyan Foster and Allen Stough tackled Indian Terry Head in the end zone for a safety. Minutes later Max Rudd ran 16 yards and he kicked the PAT.

Underdog Northeast scored its only touchdown in the fourth quarter of the muddy contest when little quarterback Nathan Zametto pushed over from the one-foot line on fourth down to cap a 61-yard march. Jim Laudadio was pulled down on the one when he tried to run for the extra point.

The victory was the sixth of the season for Tech against four losses. Their conference record of 4-1 is good enough for at least a tie for the conference crown. The defeat was Northeast's sixth of the year against two wins. The Indians lost all five of their loop games to finish in the league cellar.

Tempers flared on occasion in the game and two players were put out of the game in the early minutes for mixing up too enthusiastically but the game ended harmiously with handshakes all around.

The entire first quarter was played in Northeast territory. On the first play from scrimmage one of the Indian backs missed connections on a handoff and fumbled. The ball ended up on the 41 where Bond got it for Tech.

The Tech men went as deep as the 18 on the running of Jerry Fraser and Bond. However, David Williamson lost two and Bond made only one after trying to pass on fourth down and the Indians took over.

A few plays later, the Bulldogs took an almost - blocked punt by Head on the 48 and went to the 13 with a 25-yard dash around left by Williamson eating up most of the yardage. The Techmen came up with a fumble of their own and Gerald Elkins recovered it on the 14 to end the threat.

Northeast reached the 20 before being forced to punt and Hynes took Head's boot on his 49 and sailed back to the 36. He made one more before Bond tossed to Jim Orton to the 24. Rudd went to the 23, Orton to the 19 for a first. Orton reached the 16 and Bond the 11 as the quarter ended.

Rudd went to the 7 on the first play of the second period and Hynes ran to the one and then over for the touchdown. Rudd's kick was no good for the extra point and it was 6-0.

The Indians reached the Tech 33 before the half but two imcomplete passes ended the drive. Bond almost got loose before being brought down on the NE 39 as the half ended.

Midway of the third quarter, Tech stalled on the Northeast 48 and punted. Freshman halfback Head took it on the six, fumbled it, picked it up and ran behind the goal line as he tried to reverse his field and shake loose. He almost reached the goal line before Foster and Stough hit him and Tech had two more points.

Northeast kicked off from the 20 to Bond at the 40 and he legged it back to the Indian 44. It took Tech five plays to score. Rudd went for five, Hynes to the 31 for a first, Orton to the 22 and Hynes to the 16 before Rudd went over. Half a dozen men had good shots at him and one almost threw him for no gain but the Minden frosh got away and the score was 14-0. Rudd added the PAT to make it 15-0.

Early in the fourth quarter, Northeast started the trip to its TD after taking a Hynes punt on their 41. Jim Laudadio went to the 46, McGough for one and an offside rap against Tech gave the Redskins five more for a first. Everett reached the 45, then Laudadio to the 36 after which another offside penalty moved it to the 31.

Laudadio took a pitchout from Zametto and passed to Keith Amos on the 25 and the halfback rambled on to the 5. It took the Indians four downs to go the five yards for the score and they worked for all the mileage.

McGough reached the one-foot line in three carries before Zametto, with the rest of the backfield pushing, sneaked over. Laudadio faked a kick and tried to run for the extra point but couldn't make it.

Buckeyes Storm Wolverines, 31-14

The Wolverines surprised Ohio States, second ranked in the nation, and the sellout crowd of 101,001 fans by taking the lead twice in the first half.

But the overwhelming power of the Ohio State ground attack, paced by 212-pound sophomore fullback Bob White, produced two touchdowns in the third period and another in the fourth period to wrap up the game in easy fashion.

Although White failed to figure in the scoring, even eight and nine-man Michigan lines couldn't stop him as he piled up well over 163 yards rushing with his tank-like thrusts.

White, who was a one-man gang in Ohio States's conquest of Iowa a week ago, carried on nearly half of the plays in the Buckeyes' pair of third period scoring drives and set up the second one by recovering a Michigan fumble deep in his own territory.

Jim Pace, Michigan's only offensive threat, danced 16 yards with the game hardly six minutes old for the first touchdown. But Dick le Beau matched that marker with the first of his two touchdowns late in the period to tie the score.

Dor Sutherin kicked a field goal from the 30 in the second period to give the Buckeyes a short-lived 10-7 lead. Jim van Pelt passed to Brad Myers at the Ohio State 10 and Myers ran into the end zone to give Michigan a 14-10 halftime lead.

Score by periods:

Michigan	7	7	0	0—14
Ohio State	7	3	14	7—31

Marr, Weaver In Tie At West Palm

WEST PALM BEACh, Fla., Nov. 23 (UP)— Dave Marr, a youthful first cousin of Jackie Burke Jr., turned in a five-under par 67 today to tie Bert Weaver for the second round lead in the $10,000 West Palm Beach Open Golf tournament.

Veteran Pete Cooper of Lakeland, Fla., who likes the difficult West Palm Beach country club course just fine, moved into contention with a 140 total. Cooper won the Florida State Open here in 1948.

The field of 144 was trimmed to 64 professionals and 10 amateurs for Sunday's final round.

The 23-year-old Marr achieved his 67, only one stroke over the competitive course record, with fine approach shots to the green. He ran down a short putt for an eagle on the first hole, a 490-yard par-five test, and just missed eagles on two other holes.

The young protege of veteran Calude Harmon missed a one-foot putt to take a bogey on the fifth hole but made up for it later with 18 and 10-footers for birdies.

The 25-year-old Weaver appeared to be protecting his opening round lead of two strokes by playing it safe today.

Both Weaver and Marr are fighting for their first major tourney victory on the professional trail. Weaver has picked up over $4,000 in close finishes this year but Marr has been able to play tournament golf infrequently and has banked only $1,900.

The winner Sunday will collect $1,200.

Stein Sparkles As St. Aloysius Tops De La Salle

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (AP)—Lenny Stein scored two touchdowns today to pace St. Aloysius to a 27-0 victory over De La Salle.

Stein's first touchdown, made on an eight yard run, climaxed an 80 yard drive. He scored again in the third period, going 10 yards up the middle to end a 70-yard march.

George Oeschner and Bobby Foret made the other touchdowns and August Balser made three conversions.

13-0 VICTORY EARNS TITLE

Delhi Wins Over Mangham Team

DELHI, La. (Special —Delhi's Bears downed the class B state champions of Mangham, 13-0, here last night to win the district 2-B championship.

Both teams entered the contest undefeated in conference play. Delhi now has a 5-0 conference record of Mangham's 4-1 mark. Delhi's season mark is 9-1-1. They lost to Tallulah and were tied by Ferriday.

This marks the fifth time in Coach Raymond Richards' eight years at Delhi that the Bears have earned the right to compete in the championship playoffs.

Protected by superlative blocking by Bobby Leach and other Bruins, quarterback Charles Simmons dashed 49 yards for the first Delhi score midway of the second quarter.

Billy Ray Newton scored the second touchdown of the game in the fourth period from 10 yards out. Leach's conversion was good.

Mangham, losers of only one other game this season, did not make a serious threat in the game. Delhi rang up five downs in a row early in the game and were threatening until they lost the ball on a fumble around the 10-yard line.

The winners had 12 first downs in the game to five for Mangham.

McNeese Tags SLI, 13 To 0; Shares Title

LAFAYETTE, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—McNeese earned one-third of the Gulf States Conference title with a 13-0 victory over Southwestern Louisiana Institute tonight before 2,500 chilled fans.

McNeese started rolling in the second period, going 75 yards in 11 plays with halfback Rogers Hampton making the final six yards over tackle. Cleo Cooper converted.

Early in the third period SLI safety man Steve Gossen fumbled a McNeese punt which McNeese recovered on the SLI 35. McNeese scored in five plays. Halfback Paul Smith went three yards on the final play.

SLI penetrated to the McNeese five in the first period and reached the McNeese 16 in the fourth period. McNeese held each time and took over on downs.

Reward Leads All The Way In Pimlico

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 23 (AP)—With the 2-year-old championship and the most money ever won in the first year of racing for a thoroughbred waiting for him, Jewel's Reward went out and led all the way today to win the Pimlico Futurity.

Montpelier stable's Nala came storming up from sixth and last place near the end to try to snatch it all away, but failed by a length. Christiana stable's Staysail was third and the favored Misty Flight of Wheatley stable came in next. The trailers were John A. Swiatek's Beau Priam and Pine Tree stable's Amber Tide.

It was the fifth victory in 12 races for Jewel's Reward who was almost sold as a yearling by Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham. But no one topped her own bid of $3,500 for the son of Jet Jewel and Belle Jeep, so she kept him.

The $115,347 which Jewel's Reward won boosted his earnings to $349,642. The previous leading bankroll by a 2-year-old was $277,-132 by Hasty Road in 1953.

Whipped frequently by jockey Willie Shoemaker and pushed throughout by four of the field, Jewel's Reward went around the mile and sixteenth in the good time of 1:44 1-5 on a track left damp by earlier snow.

His $2 mutuel payoffs were $5.60, $4.20 and $5.20.

NSC Defeats Southeastern To Split Title

NATCHITOCHES, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Northwestern State split the Gulf States Conference title with McNeese and Louisiana Tech by beating Southeastern Louisiana 13-7 tonight.

The three co-champions ended the season with 4-1 GSC records. Tech wound up its season by defeating Northeast 15-6 and McNeese blanked SLI 13-0.

NSC mounted two long scoring drives in the first half to beat SLC for the first time since 1948.

Charles Toler ran 25 yards to climax a 62 yard drive in the first quarter. Charles Johnson converted. Dale Hoffpauir plunged over from one yard out to end a 96 yard second period drive.

SLC followed by making its only touchdown on a three yard run by Ralph Zeringue. The 67-yard march took 18 plays. Ken Bailey converted.

SLC went to the NSC 31 and 23 during the third period, losing the ball each time on downs.

WALKER SPARKLES

Arkansas Romps Over Texas Tech

By BRUCE B. MILLER

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 23 (UP)—Steady George Walker, Arkansas' sharp - shooting quarterback, flipped two touchdown passes today leading the Razorbacks to a lopside- 47-26 victory over the Red Raiders from Texas Tech in the season's finale at War Memorial stadium.

It was quite a switch for the 19,000 fans who shivered in 40-degree temperature and watched Arkansas exchange its normally conservative ball control game to a home-run type of passing attack.

With Walker on the pitching end of a near-perfect combination, the Razorbacks snapped a three-game losing streak as well as a three-year hex that had plagued them in their final game of the year.

Arkansas struck in the first three minutes on a 34-yard touchdown pass from Walker to end Bob Childress. It was the first play from scrimmage after a Tech fumble and set the pattern for the rest of the game.

Score by periods:

Arkansas	6	27	7	7—47
Texas Tech	0	6	7	13—26

Arkansas scoring: Touchdowns, Nesbitt 2 (1, run; 1, run); Childress (34, pass from Walker); Kyser 2 (3, run; 19, pass from Walker); Wetherington (44, lateral from Tranum who took pass from Christian); Stone (7, run). Conversions, Nesbitt 2, Ritchell, Akers, Perry.

Wildlife Unit Holding Final Meet Of Year

The Ouachita unit of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation holds its last meeting of the year here Tuesday, and the session has been scheduled as "presidents' night" with all past unit presidents as special guests of the organization.

Ken Beegle, the famed firearms expert, also is scheduled to appear as a guest of the organization, and it's possible that Lamar Clements, Wildlife and Fisheries commissioner, will be on hand, according to unit president Arthur "Bud" Tidwell.

Some hunting and fishing resolutions may be acted upon by the unit, Tidwell said, and the usual door prizes will be given.

"With Mr. Beegle and possible Mr. Clements to attend our meeting, we are inviting all sportsmen of this area to attend our meeting," Tidwell said.

Unsung Grid Heroes—The Officials

By BOB ANDERSON

We are now entering the season of the "all" teams in football. A large number of talented young men and some others not so talented will make all - district or all - state or even all - America. The coaches are not forgotten either. Some of them will receive "coach of the year" awards for a job well done.

Despite their weak points, recognition of this type is, on the whole, good for football. Its shoves a little more incentive into the game and pats some backs that deserve it.

Strangely enough however, with all the bouquets flying around, one very deserving group of hardy souls rarely receive anything but brick bats, verbal and sometimes literal. We refer to that much - maligned but very, very necessary clan known as football officials.

Clothed in bright black and white stripes appropiately some fans believe, football officials spend their working hours on one of the hottest spots in the world, the gridiron, before some of the severest critics in the world. Their reward for a good job is usually either a cold shoulder or abuse.

Physical violence to officials is rare nowadays although recently a high school ref over in Mississippi spent three days in a hospital after an irate chain bearer beat him. Most of the abuse directed at the men in stripes is of the vocal variety. Sports fans have never been famed for their detachment under stress. They must vent their wrath on someone and who is more deserving than that blind so-and-so that just penalized our side?

However, the roar of the man in the stands can be ignored if one puts his mind to it and good strong fence protects the official from those of a more violent nature. Officiating is definitely no bed of roses but it does have its compensations.

First of a. there's the money. For working a big time game such as a Southeastern Conference contest, it is considerable, $100 a game plus mileage. For a Gulf States Conference game, there's a $50 maximum and a $45 minumum on the fee and mileage. The pay for a Class AAA high school game in the state is $25 with the rate tapering on down to $12.50 for a Cass B affair.

It is safe to say, however, that nobody becomes a football official for the money. There are easier ways of making a buck, about a million of them to be exact. Most men don the striped shirt because officiating makes them a part of a game they are crazy about — football.

Dr. W. L. Bendel of Monroe is a good exampe of this type of man. He has been refereeing football games longer than he cares to remember, since back in the days when the officials were picked from the crowd just before the game started and you got the momentous sum of $2.50 for working a contest. Now in his sixties, Dr. Bendel was forced to give up refereeing fives years ago but stays in action as a clock operator. Why? He hardly needs the money. He does it because, like millions of other people, he is nuts about football.

Dr. Bendel is president of an organization that, like others of its kind all over the state and country, have made today's football officials more competant and more respected than ever before, the Northeast Louisiana Football Officials Association. Composed of 47 officials, this group is one of nine throughout the state that regulate and assign high school officials in their area.

The local association meets once a week during the grid season and once a month out of season to discuss the rules, new developments and assignments. The group's board of directors meet every Sunday afternoon during the season to assign officials for the week's games.

The NELFOA is the outgrowth of an informal group of officials that began meeting together on Dr. Bendel's front porch in 1923. Men like Dr. DeWitt Milam, Percy Brown, Lefty Haynes, Barney Wilson and George Riser got together to talk over officiating problems and football in general.

By 1950 this group had been organized into the Northeast Louisiana Football Officials Association with around 18 to 20 members. Now having 47 members, the group is led by Dr. Bendel with J. M. McBeth the vice president, Harold Hill the treasurer and Jerald Sugar the secretary.

Several of the NELFOA members do college officiating as well as high school. Five are active Gulf States Conference officials and one of them, Hoyt Moncrief, is a member of the Southeastern Conference Officials Association. Dan Willensky, Kermit Youngblood Sugar, and Bendel are, along with Moncrief, GSC officials.

To become a Gulf States official, a prospect must have his name turned in by a coach or athletic director of one of the member schools at the loop's annual meeting. If any of the coaches don't want the man, they can blackball him completely or for certain games.

The system of selecting high school refs is somewhat similar. The association submits a list of names to area coaches for approval or disapproval. Coaches also send in a rating sheet after every season on which they grade the officials used in their games. The scale goes from superior to poor with such things as knowledge of the rules, impartiality, consistency, quickness and sureness of decisions and the extent to which his work is affected by the comments of spectators, players and coaches being considered in grading.

A few weeks ago, Sports Editor Paul Martin devoted his column to some of the questions that appeared on the 1957 football examinations given officials by the state High School Athletic Association. It's a rugged test and the average fan would have trouble understanding the questions, much less answering them. When an official has made a passing grade (70 or above) on this exam, he is not likely to make many mistakes such as inventing a 10-yard penalty as a free-lance ref did a few years ago

Forty-five of the 47 Association members passed the LHSAA exam, twelve making 90 or above. The two who failed did so by only one point. The men who make below 70 on the test are used when more officials are needed in the area than can be supplied from the 45 who passed.

It's hard enough to keep up with one set of football rules but the men who officiate both high school and college games risk double jeopardy. There are many differences in college and high school rules well known to most fans such as in substitution and pass interference and plenty of others not so readily apparent. The official who calls a prep. game on Friday night and a college affair on Saturday can get himself in plenty of hot water if he doesn't brush up on both set of rules every so often. However, like the soldier that learns to keep his gun ready or else, the two-way officials stay prepared and do their usual capable job whatever the game.

Don't get the idea officials are infallible. They're not, as they are the first to admit. No coach has ever won all of his games, no passer has completed all his passes, no lineman never misses a block and no official calls a perfect game. Some of the wrong calls are anything but funny to the referee or the players but a few are hilarious.

Take the case of the unfortunate field judge. When there is no scoreboard clock, the field judge is charged with keeping the time. During a particularly long first quarter, our friend was asked by a player how much time remained in the period. The poor gent looked blank for a minute and then sprinted off the field. He had left his watch in the dressing room.

Football officiating has improved immensely in the last decade, according to the officials themselves. They give a variety of reasons, better pay, rules clinics, the fine work of LHSAA commissioner, T. H. "Muddy" Waters, etc. The real reason lies in the officials themselves. They take pride in their work and they're in the business because they like it and not to make some easy money

They get a kick, too, out of the battle of wits that sometimes goes on in a football game. They've got to be on their toes to keep up with some of the kids that play football. Like the lad in the recent Holly Ridge-Mangham game. The contest was played in a sea of mud and the officials were hustling a set of balls on and off the field, trying to keep a clean ball in play. One of the defensive linemen stealthily scooped up a handful of mud and liberally applied it to the nice, clean football.

The officials caught him. They usually do.

Kentucky Stuns Tennessee, 20-6

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 23 (AP)—Magnificent Lou Michaels picked up underdog Kentucky and had a direct hand in all the Wildcat scoring in a stunning 20-6 surprise victory over Tennessee today.

The powerful 235-pound senior tackle boosted his All-America stock by recovering a fumble for a touchdown and either caused or latched onto Vols' miscues that led to inspired Kentucky's early touchdowns.

Kentucky, previously winless in Southeastern Conference play, all but erased favored Tennessee's last shot at a possible bowl bid with two quick touchdown strikes in the first period and another in the fourth.

The Vols, outside of a 76-yard scoring march in the second period, never threatened critically. Bobby Gordon, Tennessee's classy tailback, scored on an end run of two yards.

The mighty Michaels pounced on a fumble charged to Gordon in the end zone for the first touchdown and it was his jarring tackle of Gordon that caused another fumble and set in motion Kentucky's 39-yard drive for its second tally a little more than a minute later.

Big Lou didn't stop until he recovered Tommy Bronson's fumble in the fourth that led to a 37-yard scoring march. Halfback Bobby Cravens got two of Kentucky's scores.

Tennessee	0	6	0	0—	6
Kentucky	14	0	0	6—	20

Tennessee scoring—touchdowns: Gordon (2-run).

Kentucky scoring—Touchdowns: Michaels (recovered fumble in end zone), Cravens 2 (4-run, 12-run. Conversions: Michaels 2.

BRUMMETT, LAYE INVOLVED

Tag Team Match Tops Kallio Card

Brummett will team with hero Earl Guess against Laye and his partner, Jim Scarbo of Meridian, Mississippi in a 90 - minute limit two falls to win affair that heads a three match program. A couple of 15-minute preliminary matches involving the main event wrestlers will lead off the night's show.

Naughty Phil lost his week - old Louisiana heavyweight championship to Laye last Monday night in a dramatic two - out - of - three fall bout at the local arena and promptly demanded a chance to win the prized championship belt back. Laye, however, haughtily declined, saying "Brummett gets title matches too easily. He can wait for a while."

Needless to say, this made bad boy Brummett simply furious and he is threatening to tear Laye's. bleached blond locks from their roots tommorrow night.

Laye, who tried to play hero in the match with Brummett but looked like a villain of the first rank in his earlier match with Bill Barney, is just as determined to prove that his victory over Brummett was no fluke. The Knoxville, Tennessee grappler, a former world's light heavyweight champion, will be going all out to give Phil such a licking that he won't want another title match.

Laye made a dramatic last minute recovery to capture the state title. With the count evened at one fall each, Brummett had Laye reeling with some fast flying tackles and slams but the Tennessean caught Phil in an upside down surf board hold and held him for the count. The winning hold is obtained by locking arms with your opponent, back to back, and leaning forward until your foe's shoulders touch the mat.

Scarbo and Guess are a couple of Mississippians with totally different wrestling styles. Guess, a tall, lanky grappler, is a high class type of fellow that plays the game strictly according to the rules unless somebody tries some dirty stuff on him. Then Earl can dish out the punches as effectively as anybody. He hails from Jackson and has appeared here often, mostly with one of the Curtis brothers. He hasn't worked here lately however, and his many fans will doubtless be glad to see him.

Scarbo is a big fellow with a big bay window and a bag full of tricks. He'll beat you anyway he can and doesn't let the rules stand in his way. He too is a veteran performer on the local mat but has been absent for several weeks.

The tag match is unusual in that there is only one genuine hero in the bunch, Guess. Brummett and Scarbo are always bad boys and Laye didn't make many friends with his rough stuff against Bill Barney two weeks ago.

Georgia Tech, Florida Scrap Ends In Draw

ATLANTA, Nov. 23 (AP)—Florida and Georgia Tech batted to a 0-0 football tie today in a game featuring pin-point punting by Gator quarterback Jimmy Dunn and Tech's puncture-proof goal line defense.

The Gators would have won—and the statistics looked like they did—except for an ineligible receiver penalty which nullified a 22-yard pass from Bernie Parrish to Jim Rountree in the end zone in the second quarter.

This was not one of those dull, listless scoreless ties. Frequent Florida threats on a slick field, numerous fumbles and several long runs and passes kept the capacity crowd of 40,000 yelling all the way.

About three minutes before the final gun the 140-pound Dunn worked the keeper play for a 34-yard gain to the Tech 19. The gritty little junior started out to his left, zipped through the line and cut back to his right. He bobbed and weaved past half a dozen Techsters before finally going down. But on the next play Tech quarterback Fred Braselton intercepted Dunn's pass on the goal and ran it out to the 20.

Dunn's punting was not spectacular for distance but time and again his accuracy put Tech back on its goal.

Cougars Claw Washington For 27-7 Decision

SEATTLE, Nov. 23 (UP)—Bobby Newman completed 14 passes for 195 yards and two touchdowns today to lead fired up Washington State to a 27-7 victory over Washington before 47,500 fans.

It was the most lop-sided score the Cougars ever rolled up against their traditional cross-state rival.

NO CAPTAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Black Hawks have no captain. However, they list four alternate captains in Gus Mortson, Jimmy Thomson, Ted Lindsay and Glen Skov. Mortson formerly was Chicago captain. As long as one of the alternates are on the ice the team meets National Hockey League regulations.

Dobson, Former Coach Of Byrd Jackets, Dies

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Lee M. Dobson, 54, former head coach at Byrd High School who saw six of his football teams win state titles, died at a local hospital today after an illness of several years.

A native and lifelong resident of Shreveport, Dobson attended local schools, where he gained letters in football, track, basketball and baseball. He starred in football at Oklahoma City University, where he was graduated.

Dobson became assistant coach at Byrd in 1927 and served as head coach in 1935-46, when his health failed. He taught at Fair Park High School afterward.

Survivors include his widow, one daughter, one sister, and four brothers.

BOWLING

With Tommy Higgins

Beginning this weekend, ten Monroe bowling teams will be traveling to New Orleans and the Sugar Bowl Lanes. Yes, its the 13th annual Men's Louisiana State Bowling Tournament conducted by the New Orleans Bowling Association of the American Bowling Congress.

Schlitz Beer, Tom Spatafora's Grocery, Roi-Tan Cigar, Montgomery Insurance, and Lennon Motors will swing into action the first weekend, while Bowling Center, Royal Feed and Seed, Neon Sign Service, Ballard's, and Continental Laboratories will make the trip at later dates.

The Louisiana Bowling Proprietors announce their first annual state Husband and Wife Tournament, and it's to be held in Monroe. Using a 70 per cent handicap, the tournament will begin Saturday, January 18, and end the following day, Sunday, January 19.

Four games on one pair of lanes and you can enter up to three times.

For reservations on any particular shift, write W. H. Durham, tournament manager, 425 Pargoud Drive, Monroe, La. See Keith Moore, manager of Monroe Bowling Center, for your entry blank.

The ladies' annual City Tournament last Sunday was a big success. New bowlers replaced last year's champions. In the team event, J. R. White posted 2,951 to win. Holiday Inn finished second.

The doubles championship went to Hazel Higgins and Anna Danna (1,220). Patsy Moore replaced Edith Yarbrough as singles champ, rolling a mighty 674 series.

All-events was won by B. B. Stron (handicap) and Norma Brown (scratch).

* * *

Dovie Holley, bowling in her very first tournament, was an inspiraion to all new keglers. Dovie, a member of the winning J. R. White team, finished fourth in singles, was on the sixth place doubles combination, and was runner-up for the all-events handicap title.

I wonder if her husband has been giving her lessons? If so, he'd better start listening to her.

Congratulations are in order for Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Moore on the birth of their new son, David Robert. Weight: Nine pounds, nine and a half ounces.

Erma Peddy, secretary of the Ladies League, reports that the Spatafora Pharmacy women's team boasts the highest keglerette team average in Monroe—Bennie Mallery, 151; Totsie Shoemaker, 144; Daisy Creighton, 150; Ora Lee Johnston, 157; and Myrtel Draughn, 169. That's a big 771. Nice going girls, keep it up!

Unsung Grid Heroes—The Officials

By BOB ANDERSON

We are now entering the season of the "all" teams in football. A large number of talented young men and some others not so talented will make all - district or all - state or even all - America. The coaches are not forgotten either. Some of them will receive "coach of the year" awards for a job well done.

Despite their weak points, recognition of this type is, on the whole, good for football. Its shoves a little more incentive into the game and pats some backs that deserve it.

Strangely enough however, with all the bouquets flying around, one very deserving group of hardy souls rarely receive anything but brick bats, verbal and sometimes literal. We refer to that much - maligned but very, very necessary clan known as football officials.

Physical violence to officials is rare nowadays although recently a high school ref over in Mississippi spent three days in a hospital after an irate chain bearer beat him. Most of the abuse directed at the men in stripes is of the vocal variety. Sports fans have never been famed for their detachment under stress. They must vent their wrath on someone and who is more deserving than that blind so-and-so that just penalized our side?

However, the roar of the man in the stands can be ignored if one puts his mind to it and good strong fence protects the official from those of a more violent nature. Officiating is definitely no bed of roses but it does have its compensations.

First of a, there's the money. For working a big time game such as a Southeastern Conference contest, it is considerable, $100 a game plus mileage. For a Gulf States Conference game, there's a $60 maximum and a $45 minumum on the fee and mileage. The pay for a Class AAA high school game in the state is $25 with the rate tapering on down to $12.50 for a Cass B affair.

It is safe to say, however, that nobody becomes a football official for the money. There are easier ways of making a buck, about a million of them to be exact. Most men don the striped shirt because officiating makes them a part of a game they are crazy about — football.

Dr. W. L. Bendel of Monroe is a good exampe of this type of man. He has been refereeing football games longer than he cares to remember, since back in the days when the officials were picked from the crowd just before the game started and you got the momentous sum of $2.50 for working a contest. Now in his sixties, Dr. Bendel was forced to give up refereeing fives years ago but stays in action as a clock operator. Why? He hardly needs the money. He does it because, like millions of other people, he is nuts about football.

Dr. Bendel is president of an organization that, like others of its kind all over the state and country, have made today's football officials more competant and more respected than ever before, the Northeast Louisiana Football Officials Association. Composed of 47 officials, this group is one of nine throughout the state that regulate and assign high school officials in their area.

The local association meets once a week during the grid season and once a month out of season to discuss the rules, new developments and assignments. The group's board of directors meet every Sunday afternoon during the season to assign officials for the week's games.

The NELFOA is the outgrowth of an informal group of officials that began meeting together on Dr. Bendel's front porch in 1923. Men like Dr. DeWitt Milam, Percy Brown, Lefty Haynes, Barney Wilson and George Riser got together to talk over officiating problems and football in general.

By 1950 this group had been organized into the Northeast Louisiana Football Officials Association with around 18 to 20 members. Now having 47 members, the group is led by Dr. Bendel with J. M. McBeth the vice president, Harold Hill the treasurer and Jerald Sugar the secretary.

Several of the NELFOA members do college officiating as well as high school. Five are active Gulf States Conference officials and one of them, Hoyt Moncrief, is a member of the Southeastern Conference Officials Association. Dan Willensky, Kermit Youngblood Sugar, and Bendel are, along with Moncrief, GSC officials.

To become a Gulf States official, a prospect must have his name turned in by a coach or athletic director of one of the member schools at the loop's annual meeting. If any of the coaches don't want the man, they can blackball him completely or for certain games.

The system of selecting high school refs is somewhat similar. The association submits a list of names to area coaches for approval or disapproval. Coaches also send in a rating sheet after every season on which they grade the officials used in their games. The scale goes from superior to poor with such things as knowledge of the rules, impartiality, consistency, quickness and sureness of decisions and the extent to which his work is affected by the comments of spectators, players and coaches being considered in grading.

A few weeks ago, Sports Editor Paul Martin devoted his column to some of the questions that appeared on the 1957 football examinations given officials by the state High School Athletic Association. It's a rugged test and the average fan would have trouble understanding the questions, much less answering them. When an official has made a passing grade (70 or above) on this exam, he is not likely to make many mistakes such as inventing a 10-yard penalty as a free-lance ref did a few years ago

Forty-five of the 47 Association members passed the LHSAA exam, twelve making 90 or above. The two who failed did so by only one point. The men who make below 70 on the test are used when more officials are needed in the area than can be supplied from the 45 who passed.

It's hard enough to keep up with one set of football rules but the men who officiate both high school and college games risk double jeopardy. There are many differences in college and high school rules well known to most fans such as in substitution and pass interference and plenty of others not so readily apparent. The official who calls a prep. game on Friday night and a college affair on Saturday can get himself in plenty of hot water if he doesn't brush up on both set of rules every so often. However, like the soldier that learns to keep his gun ready or else, the two-way officials stay prepared and do their usual capable job whatever the game.

Don't get the idea officials are infallible. They're not, as they are the first to admit. No coach has ever won all of his games, no passer has completed all his passes, no lineman never misses a block and no official calls a perfect game. Some of the wrong calls are anything but funny to the referee or the players but a few are hilarious.

Take the case of the unfortunate field judge. When there is no scoreboard clock, the field judge is charged with keeping the time. During a particularly long first quarter, our friend was asked by a player how much time remained in the period. The poor gent looked blank for a minute and then sprinted off the field. He had left his watch in the dressing room.

Football officiating has improved immensely in the last decade ,according to the officials themselves. They give a variety of reasons, better pay, rules clinics, the fine work of LHSAA commissioner, T. H. "Muddy" Waters, etc. The real reason lies in the officials themselves. They take pride in their work and they're in the business because they like it and not to make some easy money

They get a kick, too, out of the battle of wits that sometimes goes on in a football game. They've got to be on their toes to keep up with some of the kids that play football. Like the lad in the recent Holly Ridge-Mangham game. The contest was played in a sea of mud and the officials were hustling a set of balls on and off the field, trying to keep a clean ball in play. One of the defensive linemen stealthily scooped up a handful of mud and liberally applied it to the nice, clean football.

The officials caught him. They usually do.

Kentucky Stuns Tennessee, 20-6

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 23 (AP)—Magnificent Lou Michaels picked up underdog Kentucky and had a direct hand in all the Wildcat scoring in a stunning 20-6 surprise victory over Tennessee today.

The powerful 235-pound senior tackle boosted his All-America stock by recovering a fumble for a touchdown and either caused or latched onto Vols' miscues that led to inspired Kentucky's early touchdowns.

Kentucky, previously winless in Southeastern Conference play, all but erased favored Tennessee's last shot at a possible bowl bid with two quick touchdown strikes in the first period and another in the fourth.

The Vols, outside of a 76-yard scoring march in the second period, never threatened critically. Bobby Gordon, Tennessee's classy tailback, scored on an end run of two yards.

The mighty Michaels pounced on a fumble charged to Gordon in the end zone for the first touchdown and it was his jarring tackle of Gordon that caused another fumble and set in motion Kentucky's 39-yard drive for its second tally a little more than a minute later.

Big Lou didn't stop until he recovered Tommy Bronson's fumble in the fourth that led to a 37-yard scoring march. Halfback Bobby Cravens got two of Kentucky's scores.

Tennessee	0	6	0	0—	6
Kentucky	14	0	0	6—	20

Tennessee scoring—touchdowns: Gordon (2-run).

Kentucky scoring—Touchdowns: Michaels (recovered fumble in end zone), Cravens 2 (4-run, 12-run. Conversions: Michaels 2.

BRUMMETT, LAYE INVOLVED

Tag Team Match Tops Kallio Card

Brummett will team with hero Earl Guess against Laye and his partner, Jim Scarbo of Meridian, Mississippi in a 90 - minute limit two falls to win affair that heads a three match program. A couple of 15-minute preliminary matches involving the main event wrestlers will lead off the night's show.

Naughty Phil lost his week - old Louisiana heavyweight championship to Laye last Monday night in a dramatic two - out - of - three fall bout at the local arena and promptly demanded a chance to win the prized championship belt back. Laye, however, haughtily declined, saying "Brummett gets title matches too easily. He can wait for a while."

Needless to say, this made bad boy Brummett simply furious and he is threatening to tear Laye's. bleached blond locks from their roots tommorrow night.

Laye, who tried to play hero in the match with Brummett but looked like a villain of the first rank in his earlier match with Bill Barney, is just as determined to prove that his victory over Brummett was no fluke. The Knoxville, Tennessee grappler, a former world's light heavyweight champion, will be going all out to give Phil such a licking that he won't want another title match.

Laye made a dramatic last minute recovery to capture the state title. With the count evened at one fall each, Brummett had Laye reeling with some fast flying tackles and slams but the Tennessean caught Phil in an upside down surf board hold and held him for the count. The winning hold is obtained by locking arms with your opponent, back to back, and leaning forward until your foe's shoulders touch the mat.

Scarbo and Guess are a couple of Mississippians with totally different wrestling styles. Guess, a tall, lanky grappler, is a high class type of fellow that plays the game strictly according to the rules unless somebody tries some dirty stuff on him. Then Earl can dish out the punches as effectively as anybody. He hails from Jackson and has appeared here often, mostly with one of the Curtis brothers. He hasn't worked here lately however, and his many fans will doubtless be glad to see him.

Scarbo is a big fellow with a big bay window and a bag full of tricks. He'll beat you anyway he can and doesn't let the rules stand in his way. He too is a veteran performer on the local mat but has been absent for several weeks.

The tag match is unusual in that there is only one genuine hero in the bunch, Guess. Brummett and Scarbo are always bad boys and Laye didn't make many friends with his rough stuff against Bill Barney two weeks ago.

ATKINS STARS

Auburn Tops Florida State

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 23 (AP)—Billy Atkins powered the Auburn football juggernaut to a 29-7 win over undermanned Florida State today that gave the Tigers a big push toward the national championship.

It was the ninth win of the year for the unbeaten, untied Auburn team which ranked No. 2 this week, a bare nine points behind Michigan State in The Associated Press poll.

Atkins plunged for two touchdowns and kicked two extra points to set an all time Auburn seasonal scoring record of 66 points. The old record of 65 had stood since 1952.

Florida State, unable to move on the ground, filled the air with passes and clicked on a beautiful 34-yard toss in the fourth quarter from lanky Joe Majors to his roommate, end Bill Kimber, for its touchdown. It was only the fourth touchdown of the year to be scored against the Tigers.

Auburn, capitalizing on a couple of poor kicks by Bobby Renn, moved methodically for two touchdowns in the first quarter. Atkins knifed off right tackle from one yard out after a 41-yard drive. The Tigers came back four minutes later and rolled 37 yards for the second score. Lamar Rawson plunged over from the 1 and Ronnie Robbs converted.

Auburn	13	7	7	2—29
FSU	0	0	0	7—7

Auburn scoring: Touchdowns — Atkins (1, plunge); Rawson (1, plunge; Atkins (5, plunge); Lorino (2, plunge). Safety - Majors (tackled by Wilson and Phill in end zone). Conversions: Robbs, Atkins 2.

COMPLETES 17 OF 20 PASSES

Meredith Guides SMU Over Bears

By LLOYD LARRABEE

WACO, Tex., Nov. 23 (UP—Lanky Don Meredith guided Southern Methodist's spread formation passing attack today to 14-7 victory over Baylor in a Southwest Conference clash before 15,000 dad's day fans.

The sensational sophomore completed 17 of 20 passes for 198 yards, passed for one touchdown and sparked a 67-yard drive which gave Southern Methodist its victory margin with 2:55 left in the game.

The victory was Southern Methodist's third Southwest Conference win against two losses, while winless Baylor was embedded in the cellar with four defeats and one tie.

Meredith's pinpoint passing to sophomore halfback Jim Welch and Lon Saughter drove SMU to the Baylor 3 and two plays later Welch plunged over from the 1 for the game-winning marker.

Meredith, passing from deep position in the spread formation, struck five straight times to lead Southern Methodist to a late-second period touchdown, connecting for five yards to end Boyd Waggoner for the score.

The phenomenal 19-year-old sophomore from Mount Vernon, Tex., accounted for all of SMU's 58 yards in the scoring drive, highlighted by a 34-yard aerial to Welch.

Meredith had passed to Frank Smith for 14 yards, to Waggoner for 16 yards, and to Welch for six yards in the march.

The game turned into a battle of spread formations as Baylor came up with its own spread.

However, the Baylor offensive paid off only in the third period, when the Bears drove 75 yards in 12 plays and sophomore halfback Austin Gonsoulin bounced over from the 4.

Quarterback Doyle Traylor spearheaded the Baylor march, connecting with successive 15-yard passes to halfback Farrell Fisher and end Earl Miller. The drive also featured the hard running of fullback Larry Hickman.

Defensive standouts included Baylor guard Clyde Ledbetter, a constant threat to SMU backs, and guard Clayton Burt. Top SMU defenders included end Henry Christopher, guard Tom Koenig, and guard Garry Webber.

Score by periods:

Baylor	0	0	7	0—7
SMU	0	7	0	7—14

Baylor scoring: Touchdowns, Gonsoulin (4, plunge, Conversion, Beall.

Commodores Sputter Past Citadel, 27-0

The fighting Tigers, 20-point underdog at kickoff time, held their Southeastern Conference opponents to a skimpy 7-0 halftime lead. But Vanderbilt opened the scoring gates with a pair of third quarter touchdowns and another in the final period.

The Commodores failed on at least half a dozen occasional to cash in on scoring opportunities. The Citadel threatened seriously only once, when the Tigers bogged down on the Vandy 9, on a pass interception.

The victory gave Vanderbilt a 5-2-2 record for the season and Citadel a 5-4-1 mark.

Vanderbilt	0	7	13	7—27

Vanderbilt scoring — Touchdowns: Taylor (12, pass from Smith), J. Ray (44, run), Hilley (recovered fumble in end zone), McCall, (35, pass from McKee. Conversions: Travis 3.

Fair Grounds Opens 85th Season Nov. 28

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Fair Grounds, born during Reconstruction Days and a reeling survivor of the depression two decades ago, opens its 85th winter racing season Thursday with nothing but prosperity in sight.

The traditional $7,500 Thanksgiving Day Handicap is the top offering of the inaugural program, expected to lure about 20,000 lovers of the running horse and pari-mutue's away from their Thanksgiving Day dinners.

The one-mile track, first to offer a glass-enclosed grandstand and queen among thoroughbred courses when winter racing was practically unknown, shattered records by the hatful last season. The 83-day card attracted more than 773,000 fans and wagering totaled better than 39 million dollars, a jump of more than a million over the previous season.

While he wouldn't predict the track would top last years figures, general manager Gar Moore was quick to point out improvements and big increases in purse distribution. The track will offer a $10,000 handicap event each Saturday, more than double the number races in the $10,000 category last season.

While Bold Ruler, Gallant Man or Round Table aren't expected to race at the meeting, a number of outstanding racers are slated to appear These include Clearwater Stables' Portersville and Cavort; J. Graham Brown's Bornastar; T. Alie Grissom's Shan Pac and Rosping Right; Steve Ippolito's Sir Tribal; and Ralph Lowe's Kentucky Roman, just to name a few.

Most of the headliners won't race until the latter part of the season and the blue ribbon events, such as the $50,000-added New Orleans Handicap, are offered.

The Turkey Day field probably will draw eight or ten starters, topped by L. H. Thompson's Ezgo, fresh from a brilliant victory in the $25,000-added Clark Handicap at Churchill Downs. The son of Olympia broke on top and stayed there to post a three-length victory with such contenders as E. Gay Drake's consistent Dogoon in his wake. Ezgo has won eight of 23 starts this year.

Another probable nominee for the Thanksgiving Day 'Cap is J.E. Robertson's Aurecolt, the Devil Diver colt who was given as top prize in a tobacco company's contest three years ago. Aurecolt has won eight of 20 races this year and set an American record of 1:29 for seven and one-half furlongs during the fall meeting at Louisville's Churchill Downs.

The Fair Grounds saw some bad days in the late 1930's and came close to being cut up into real estate lots before it was rescued by a group of local sportsmen. But with betting almost doubled in the past five years, it has proven a worthy successor to the old Metairie course where Lexington and LeCompte waged their stirring duels a century ago.

Oregon State Beats Oregon On Field Goal

EUGENE, Ore., Nov. 23 (UP)—Quarterback Ted Searle kicked 17-yard field goal today to give Oregon State a 10-7 victory over Oregon and a tie with the Rose Bowl-bound Webfoots for the Pacific Coast Conference football championship in the 61st renewal of the West's oldest football rivalry.

Searle's left footed kick came with slightly less than four minutes left in the third period. Oregon, trying for its second PCC title in history, lost a chance to win the game in the final quarter when halfback Jim Shanley fumbled on the two yard line.

Searle and his Hawaiian helpmate, All-America candidate Joe Francis, along with a rugged Oregon State line were the Beaver heroes.

Francis scored the Oregon State touchdown and Searle added the conversion and put Oregon State into a 7-0 lead at the outset of the game. Francis made 33 yards on a 60-yard Oregon State drive and scored from three yards out.

Oregon got its touchdown right back when Searle tried an onside kick and barely touched the ball. Oregon took over on the Oregon State 40 and the Webfoots drove to their touchdown with quarterback Jack Crabtree hitting Shanley on a fourth down scoring pass from the one. Jack Morris, whose converting this season was a major factor in Oregon's drive to the Rose Bowl, kicked the extra point.

But the Beavers came bouncing back with the second half kickoff and Francis, who had sat out 20 minutes of the first half after being knocked unconscious, paced a drive that carried deep down field from where Searle kicked his all-important field goal.

Score by periods:

Oregon	7	0	0	0—7
Oregon State	7	0	3	0—10

Oregon scoring: Touchdown, Shanley (1, pass from Crabtree). Conversion, Morris.

Tar Heels Rally To Defeat Duke, 21-13

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 23 (UP)—North Carolina ended seven years of famine against arch-rival Duke 21-13 today by turning Blue Devil fumbles into touchdowns in the rifle-passes of sophomore quarterback Jack Cummings, with quick-kicks and even surprise single-wing plays.

The fired-up Tar Heels staked themselves a claim to the Orange Bowl by overcoming a two-touchdown Duke lead, more than 100 yards in penalties and one-man scoring show by Blue Devil ace Wray Carlton.

Carlton scored all of Duke's points before the Tar Heels began sizzling just before half time in the annual classic watched by 40,000 rain-splattered fans and a regional television audience.

The jubilant Tar Heel fans who pulled down the goal posts after the game saw North Carolina spring a single-wing formation from split-T master Jim Tatum's secret practices to set up a first half touchdown.

It came in a 49-yard march accented by Cummings' passes, and it sent halfback Emil de Cantis barrelling seven yards to the Duke three. Fullback Giles Gaca smashed for the score.

The Tar Heels turned two Duke fumbles into third period touchdowns. A'l conference end Buddy Payne jarred the ball loose from Duke half-back George Dutrow and guard Fred Swearingen recovered on the Duke 42.

Halfback Daley Goff, who had blocked Carlton's first extra point try, passed 12 yards to Payne, and an interference penalty gave Carolina a first down on the 26. From there a single wing play sent halfback Jim Schuler for five yards and Cummings passed to Payne on a 21-yard scoring play.

Carlton, whe gained 117 of Duke's 193 rushing total, gave Duke a 13-point early lead. He took the opening kickoff back 25 yards, crashed for two first downs and took a 15-yard pass from Dutrow for another, then bulled four yards for the touchdown after a 20-yard Dutrow scamper.

Duke	6	7	0	0—13
North Carolina	0	7	14	0—21

Duke scoring: Touchdowns, Carlton 2 (4, run, 20, run). Conversion, Carlton.

North Carolina scoring: Touchdowns, Gaca (3, run) Payne (21, pass from Cummings): Cummings (1, run). Conversions, Blazer 3.

Jena Forfeits Game, Title To Pineville

PINEVILLE, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Pineville High School won the district 3 double-A championship today when Jena forfeited the final game of the season.

The game, originally scheduled for last night, was postponed by rain. It then was rescheduled for Tuesday night.

Jena coach Billy Jarrell today asked that the game either be played tonight or canceled. When he was advised that the field at Pineville was still covered by water, he forfeited the game.

Pineville's opponent in the state playoffs will be district 1 champion, Homer. The game will be played Dec. 6 at a site to be selected later.

GOOD IOWA SEASON

Hawkeyes Slug Irish, 21-13

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 23 (UP)— Iowa's rugged football team bounced Notre Dame, 21-13, today in a bitter defensive battle which closed the Hawkeyes' season with seven wins, one tie and only one defeat.

The difference in score didn't represent the difference between teams since Iowa three times lost the ball on fumbles and five times was thrown back when inside the Notre Dame 21 yard line.

One Iowa bobble set up Notre Dame's second touchdown when Billy Gravel's fumble was recovered by Ron Toth on the Hawkeye 15, and Toth then sped the distance on the next play.

Iowa had a break, though, for one of its scores. Randy Duncan pulled in the only pass attempted by Notre Dame's Frank Reynolds and ran 24 yards into the end zone. Fred Nocera rambled 36 yards for the first Hawkeye score, and Duncan completed a lucky pass to Don Norton for the other. The ball was deflected by the Irish's George Izo into Norton's hands. Bob Prescott converted after each touchdown.

On other scoring attempts, Iowa missed a first down by a yard on the Irish 14, had three straight passes knocked down after another first down on Notre Dame's 14, lost 14 yards in three plays from the Irish 15, failed to make one yard on another attempt from the 13, and was thrown back another time on the Irish 21.

Score by periods:

Notre Dame	0	6	7	0—13
Iowa	7	7	0	7—21

Notre Dame scoring: Touchdowns, Stickles (55, pass-run from Izo), Toth (15, run). Conversions, Stickles.

Grambling's Tigers Down M.V., 19-12

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — The Grambling Tigers defeated the Mississippi Vocational Delta Devils, 19-12, here at Tiger Stadium yesterday.

Twenty seniors had dedicated the game to Coach Robinson and they and their teammates played some hard single wing ball in the damp, gray Saturday afternoon.

Yhe first quarter was scoreless. But an alert Grambling team recovered the first of three enemy fumbles on the M. V. 25 Edward Murray ran for 15 to the 10 and three plays later; Paul Green passed to left end Woody Miles for the touchdown. Murray added the conversion and that was the first half scoring.

In the second half Tommie Allen blocked Curtis Cotton's punt, on the Grambling 28, picked up the ball on the 20 and ran in for the score.

Grambling took the kickoff with Murray returning from the 10 to the Grambling 45. On third down, pass interference was called against M. V. quarterback Walter Taylor on his 35. Grambling used five plays to cover the distance with 220 - pound fullback, Willie Garner scoring from 11 yards out. The third quarter ended 13-6.

In the early minutes of the fourth quarter, Grambling used a pass interception to get moving. Don Stephenson raced 21 yards to the M.V. 9. Preston Powell, freshman fullback, scored on the next play.

The final M.V. score came when Grambling fumbled on the 15. Coleman Lindsey punged in from the five and the scoring was over for the day.

This game closed a 4-4 season for Grambling.

West Virginia Takes 7-0 Win Over Syracuse

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 23 (UP)—Fullback Larry (Stubby) Krutko sparked a 54-yard second quarter touchdown drive for West Virginia today as the Mountaineers closed their season with a 7-0 victory over Syracuse.

Krutko, playing his final college game, carried the ball five times in the game's only scoring march and gained 25 of the 54 yards. Quarterback Mickey Trimarki carried the ball over from the one and Paul (Whitey) Mikanik converted.

Syracuse, also closing its season, gave 26,000 West Virginia homecoming fans a scare in the third quarter when it marched 67 yards to the Mountaineer two only to fumble on a first and goal situation.

Illinois Romps Over Winless Northwestern

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 23 (UP)—Fullback Ray Nitschke scored two touchdowns and got an "assist" on another today to pace Illinois to a 27-0 victory over Northwestern, which closed its season without a win.

The loss was the ninth straight and climaxed Northwestern's first winless season in history. It also marked the Illini's first home triumph over their Big Ten cross-town rivals in 29 years.

Northwestern's light and depthless line proved a soft touch for Illinois assaults, and the Wildcats' offense could penetrate no farther than the enemy 20-yard line. Overall, the hapless losers were held to 92 yards on the ground to 339 for the winners.

Princeton Hands Defeat To Dartmouth

PRINCETON, N.J., Nov. 23 (UP)—Sophomore tailback Dan Sachs, scampering to three touchdowns and passing for another on a snow blanketed field, led Princeton to the Ivy League championship today with a 34-14 victory over previously unbeaten Dartmouth

It was Princeton's first official Ivy League crown since the league was formalized two years ago but its 19th son or shared since the Ivy group first got together in 1872. Princeton's only league defeat was t oYale, which earlier had tied Dartmouth.

Snow fell for three periods today but Sachs was red hot to the delight of the Princeton partisans in the sellout crowd of 46,000.

He passed 20 yards to end Bob Shepardson for one touchdown, ran four yards for another, dashed 38 yards with an intercepted pass to score and then climaxed his superb performance with a 60-yard touchdown gallop on a punt return early in the fourth period.

ATKINS STARS

Auburn Tops Florida State

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 23 (AP)—Billy Atkins powered the Auburn football juggernaut to a 29-7 win over undermanned Florida State today that gave the Tigers a big push toward the national championship.

It was the ninth win of the year for the unbeaten, untied Auburn team which ranked No. 2 this week, a bare nine points behind Michigan State in The Associated Press poll.

Atkins plunged for two touchdowns and kicked two extra points to set an all time Auburn seasonal scoring record of 66 points. The old record of 65 had stood since 1952.

Florida State, unable to move on the ground, filled the air with passes and clicked on a beautiful 34-yard toss in the fourth quarter from lanky Joe Majors to his roommate, end Bill Kimber, for its touchdown. It was only the fourth touchdown of the year to be scored against the Tigers.

Auburn, capitalizing on a couple of poor kicks by Bobby Renn, moved methodically for two touchdowns in the first quarter. Atkins knifed off right tackle from one yard out after a 41-yard drive. The Tigers came back four minutes later and rolled 37 yards for the second score. Lamar Rawson plunged over from the 1 and Ronnie Robbs converted.

Auburn	13	7	7	2—29
FSU	0	0	0	7— 7

Auburn scoring: Touchdowns — Atkins (1, plunge); Rawson (1, plunge; Atkins (5, plunge); Lorino (2, plunge). Safety - Majors (tackled by Wilson and Phill in end zone). Conversions: Robbs, Atkins 2.

COMPLETES 17 OF 20 PASSES

Meredith Guides SMU Over Bears

By LLOYD LARRABEE

WACO, Tex., Nov. 23 (UP—Lanky Don Meredith guided Southern Methodist's spread formation passing attack today to 14-7 victory over Baylor in a Southwest Conference clash before 15,000 dad's day fans.

The sensational sophomore completed 17 of 20 passes for 198 yards, passed for one touchdown and sparked a 67-yard drive which gave Southern Methodist its victory margin with 2:55 left in the game.

The victory was Southern Methodist's third Southwest Conference win against two losses, while winless Baylor was embedded in the cellar with four defeats and one tie.

Meredith's pinpoint passing to sophomore halfback Jim Welch and Lon Salughter drove SMU to the Baylor 3 and two plays later Welch plunged over from the 1 for the game-winning marker.

Meredith, passing from deep position in the spread formation, struck five straight times to lead Southern Methodist to a late-second period touchdown, connecting for five yards to end Boyd Waggoner for the score.

The phenomenal 19-year-old sophomore from Mount Vernon, Tex., accounted for all of SMU's 58 yards in the scoring drive, highlighted by a 34-yard aerial to Welch.

Meredith had passed to Frank Smith for 14 yards, to Waggoner for 16 yards, and to Welch for six yards in the march.

The game turned into a battle of spread formations as Baylor came up with its own spread.

However, the Baylor offensive paid off only in the third period, when the Bears drove 75 yards in 12 plays and sophomore halfback Austin Gonsoulin bounced over from the 4.

Quarterback Doyle Traylor spearheaded the Baylor march, connecting with successive 15-yard passes to halfback Farrell Fisher and end Earl Miller. The drive also featured the hard running of fullback Larry Hickman.

Defensive standouts included Baylor guard Clyde Ledbetter, a constant threat to SMU backs, and guard Clayton Burt. Top SMU defenders included end Henry Christopher, guard Tom Koenig, and guard Garry Webber.

Score by periods:

Baylor	0	0	7	0— 7
SMU	0	7	0	7—14

Baylor scoring: Touchdowns, Gonsoulin (4, plunge, Conversion, Beall.

Commodores Sputter Past Citadel, 27-0

The fighting Tigers, 20-point underdog at kickoff time, held their Southeastern Conference opponents to a skimpy 7-0 halftime lead. But Vanderbilt opened the scoring gates with a pair of third quarter touchdowns and another in the final period.

The Commodores failed on at least half a dozen occasional to cash in on scoring opportunities.

The Citadel threatened seriously only once, when the Tigers bogged down on the Vandy 9, on a pass interception.

The victory gave Vanderbilt a 5-2-2 record for the season and Citadel a 5-4-1 mark.

Vanderbilt	0	7	13	7—27

Carlton scored all of Duke's points before the Tar Heels began sizzling just before half time in the annual classic watched by 40,000 rain-splattered fans and a regional television audience.

The jubilant Tar Heel fans who pulled down the goal posts after the game saw North Carolina spring a single-wing formation from split-T master Jim Tatum's secret practices to set up a first half touchdown.

It came in a 49-yard march accented by Cummings' passes, and it sent halfback Emil de Cantis barrelling seven yards to the Duke three. Fullback Giles Gaca smashed for the score.

The Tar Heels turned two Duke fumbles into third period touchdowns. All conference end Buddy Payne jarred the ball loose from Duke half-back George Dutrow and guard Fred Swearingen recovered on the Duke 42.

Halfback Daley Goff, who had blocked Carlton's first extra point try, passed 12 yards to Payne, and an interference penalty gave Carolina a first down on the 26. From there a single wing play sent halfback Jim Schuler for five yards and Cummings passed to Payne on a 21-yard scoring play.

Carlton, who gained 117 of Duke's 193 rushing total, gave Duke a 13-point early lead. He took the opening kickoff back 25 yards, crashed for two first downs and took a 15-yard pass from Dutrow for another, then bulled four yards for the touchdown after a 20-yard Dutrow scamper.

Jena Forfeits Game, Title To Pineville

PINEVILLE, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—Pineville High School won the district 3 double-A championship today when Jena forfeited the final game of the season.

The game, originally scheduled for last night, was postponed by rain. It then was rescheduled for Tuesday night.

Jena coach Billy Jarrell today asked that the game either be played tonight or canceled. When he was advised that the field at Pineville was still covered by water, he forfeited the game.

Pineville's opponent in the state playoffs will be district 1 champion, Homer. The game will be played Dec. 6 at a site to be selected later.

Cage Leagues To Hold Meet Monday Night

GOOD IOWA SEASON

Hawkeyes Slug Irish, 21-13

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 23 (UP)— Iowa's rugged football team bounced Notre Dame, 21-13, today in a bitter defensive battle which closed the Hawkeyes' season with seven wins, one tie and only one defeat.

The difference in score didn't represent the difference between teams since Iowa three times lost the ball on fumbles and five times was thrown back when inside the Notre Dame 21 yard line.

One Iowa bobbie set up Notre Dame's second touchdown when Billy Gravel's fumble was recovered by Ron Toth on the Hawkeye 15, and Toth then sped the distance on the next play.

Iowa had a break, though, for one of its scores. Randy Duncan pulled in the only pass attempted by Notre Dame's Frank Reynolds and ran 24 yards into the end zone. Fred Nocera rambled 36 yards for the first Hawkeye score, and Duncan completed a lucky pass to Don Norton for the other. The ball was deflected by the Irish's George Izo into Norton's hands. Bob Prescott converted after each touchdown.

On other scoring attempts, Iowa missed a first down by a yard on the Irish 14, had three straight passes knocked down after another first down on Notre Dame's 14, lost 14 yards in three plays from the Irish 15, failed to make one yard on another attempt from the 13, and was thrown back another time on the Irish 21.

Score by periods:

Notre Dame	0	6	7	0—13
Iowa	7	7	0	7—21

Notre Dame scoring: Touchdowns, Stickles (55, pass-run from Izo), Toth (15, run). Conversions, Stickles.

Grambling's Tigers Down M.V., 19-12

Twenty seniors had dedicated the game to Coach Robinson and they and their teammates played some hard single wing ball on the damp, gray Saturday afternoon.

Yhe first quarter was scoreless. But an alert Grambling team recovered the first of three enemy fumbles on the M. V. 25 Edward Murray ran for 15 to the 10 and three plays later, Paul Green passed to left end Woody Miles for the touchdown. Murray added the conversion and that was the first half scoring.

In the second half Tommie Allen blocked Curtis Cotton's punt, on the Grambling 28, picked up the ball on the 20 and ran in for the score.

Grambling took the kickoff with Murray returning from the 10 to the Grambling 45. On third down, pass interference was called against M. V. quarterback Walter Taylor on his 35. Grambling used five plays to cover the distance with 220 - pound fullback, Willie Garner scoring from 11 yards out. The third quarter ended 13-6.

In the early minutes of the fourth quarter, Grambling used a pass interception to get moving. Don Stephenson raced 21 yards to the M.V. 9. Preston Powell, freshman fullback, scored on the next play.

The final M.V. score came when Grambling fumbled on the 15. Coleman Lindsey punged in from the five and the scoring was over for the day.

This game closed a 4-4 season for Grambling.

West Virginia Takes 7-0 Win Over Syracuse

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 23 (UP)—Fullback Larry (Stubby) Krutko sparked a 54-yard second quarter touchdown drive for West Virginia today as the Mountaineers closed their season with a 7-0 victory over Syracuse.

Krutko, playing his final college game, carried the ball five times in the game's only scoring march and gained 25 of the 54 yards. Quarterback Mickey Trimarki carried the ball over from the one and Paul (Whitey) Mikanik converted.

Syracuse, also closing its season, gave 26,000 West Virginia homecoming fans a scare in the third quarter when it marched 67 yards to the Mountaineer two only to fumble on a first and goal situation.

Illinois Romps Over Winless Northwestern

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 23 (UP—Fullback Ray Nitschke scored two touchdowns and got an "assist" on another today to pace Illinois to a 27-0 victory over Northwestern, which closed its season without a win.

The loss was the ninth straight and climaxed Northwestern's first winless season in history. It also marked the Illini's first home triumph over their Big Ten cross-town rivals in 29 years.

Northwestern's light and depthless line proved a soft touch for Illinois assaults, and the Wildcats' offense could penetrate no farther than the enemy 20-yard line. Overall, the hapless losers were held to 92 yards on the ground to 339 for the winners.

Princeton Hands Defeat To Dartmouth

PRINCETON, N.J., Nov. 23 (UP)—Sophomore tailback Dan Sachs, scampering to three touchdowns and passing for another on a snow blanketed field, led Princeton to the Ivy League championship today with a 34-14 victory over previously unbeaten Dartmouth

It was Princeton's first official Ivy League crown since the league was formalized two years ago but its 19th son or shared since the Ivy group first got together in 1872. Princeton's only league defeat was t oYale, which earlier had tied Dartmouth.

Snow fell for three periods today but Sachs was red hot to the delight of the Princeton partisans in the sellout crowd of 46,000.

He passed 20 yards to end Bob Shepardson for one touchdown, ran four yards for another, dashed 38 yards with an intercepted pass to score and then climaxed his superb performance with a 60-yard touchdown gallop on a punt return early in the fourth period.

Revolutionary Changes Sweep Food Retailers

This was brought out as farm experts discussed mass merchandising of farm products and what it means to farmers and marketing agencies at the Agriculture Department's 35th annual Outlook Conference.

Robert M. Walsh, chief of the market development branch of the Agricultural Marketing Service, led the discussion. In a serio-comic vein, Walsh said:

"If we take all prognostications seriously, by 1960 or 1965 we shall be a nation largely of supermarket shoppers, addicted to self service, large parking lots, air conditioning, soft music, pastel colors, and pleasant landscapes in our weekly visit to the food mart."

"We shall, in addition, have been offered several thousand new food-product and packaging innovations. And we shall be subjected to increasing persuasion to buy through ingenious methods of advertising and other promotion."

Walsh didn't endorse precisely all the forecasts in that sprightly paragraph, but he pointed out trends in marketing that may lead to the predicted end result.

Retail food establishments are being transformed — food stores are becoming fewer but larger, Walsh said. Significant changes also are occurring in wholesaling.

Complete, convenient, and uninhibited self service is rapidly being achieved, not only by the wide variety of high-quality food items to be found under one roof, but also through replacement of sales clerks by prepackaged, preweighed, and prepriced items attractively arranged throughout the store. Consumer convenience is further satisfied by use of day-and-night automatic food vending machines outside the food store, Walsh said.

Mass Distribution

While these are marks of prosperity, Walsh said, "most of today's developments are likely to persist in recession years, mainly because they represent steps toward greater efficiency through mass distribution of foodstuffs to a rapidly expanding and internally migrating population."

Two or three decades ago shopping for food required visits to food stores of different kinds. The buyer went to a grocery for flour, beans, canned goods, and the like. For meat, he went to a butcher shop.

But nowdays, the buyer gets all his food in one store. Specialty stores still exist, especially in large cities, but their importance has been overshadowed by the rise of large groceries carrying a complete line of food and containing departments for virtually all food commodities.

The Census Bureau bears out this trend. The total number of food stores in the United States declined from 561,000 in 1939 to 385,000 in 1954. The trend is still on.

IN SECOND GEAR

Hope For Business Upturn In '58 Rise

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP) — Business was still jogging along in second gear this week, but hopes for an upturn in 1958 burned more brightly.

At the moment, signs of a pickup were admittedly few and far between.

The government's new easier money policy had not had time to take effect. A real improvement might take months.

There were plenty of indications that things might get a little worse before they started getting better.

Retail sales slipped below last year's peak. The average U.S. factory worker faced the Christmas shopping season with three per cent less buying power than he had a year ago.

Freight carloadings dipped sharply.

On the plus side, big corporations found it easier and cheaper to borrow money. The stock market snapped out of its slump. Bond prices climbed sharply.

Auto production surged forward. Chevrolet built 40,000 cars and Ford 38,000. Total new car output was the highest in nearly a year. But dealers said many customers were more interested in leftover 1957 cars than in higher priced 1958 models.

Best news for consumers was official word that the long rise in living costs had come to a temporary halt.

Less encouraging were government figures showing a dip in factory wages and a decline in consumer buying power. For retailers there was the prospect that with prices up and income down, consumers might curb their Christmas spending.

With most indicators still pointing lower, it was evident that the tonic effects of the government's new credit policy would not be felt at the consumer level for some time.

Even so, the foundation was being laid for a possible 1958 upturn.

Top federal reserve officials hinted that more money-easing moves are in the works. Most of the nation's 12 federal reserve banks already have cut the interest they charge on loans to commercial banks. Next step, insiders say, will be increased buying of U.S. Treasury bills by the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee. This would pump more dollars into the banking system and give the banks more money to lend.

By September, some economists say, you should see some major changes. First thing to look for will be a pickup in construction. With easier credit greasing the skids, stepped-up building of schools, sewers, roads and bridges should boost production of cement and steel. A new surge in home building would lift demand for furniture, appliances, roofing materals, plumbing fixtures and lumber. Bigger payrolls in the manufacturing industries and building trades would put new starch into retail sales.

Many economists don't like to predict that far ahead. But there were at least a few this week who ventured a guess that a full-blown boom might be under way by next November.

NO COMMENT

By JAMES W. DOUTHAT

WASHINGTON (Special) — All of the evidence made available thus far in Washington indicates there is no basis for forecasts emanating from a variety of sources that government spending will soar to spectacular heights and that heavier taxes will be required.

Many in Washington are wondering if the predictions are not resulting from propaganda disseminated by New Dealers in the lower echelons of government service whose solution for any problem invariably is bigger and bigger spending.

Thus far (obviously, the future could bring changes) official information adds up about like this:

There is expected to be moderate increases in some categories of defense spending, particularly for the missile and satellite programs.

But, at the same time, every effort is to be made to reduce other defense or non-defense spending found to be unessential or can be postponed

Final result of course, cannot be known exactly. But 1 billion is the figure most often mentioned for increased defense spending in information given out both publicly and privately. In some sources the figure given ranges as high as $2 billion.

Savings made elsewhere would, of course, be deducted in arriving at the total government spending figure. And economy advocates are convinced that multi-billion savings could be made in the present huge spending budget.

To place the government's fiscal situation in proper perspective, here are the facts:

Spending this fiscal year (ending June 30) is officially forecast at $72 billion. Expected revenue is $73.5 billion. This would leave a $1.5 billion surplus.

For the following year the Administration's announced goal is to hold spending to $70 billion—$2 billion under this year. Even if defense spending were increased by $2 billion (and disregarding any savings elsewhere), the spending total still would be no larger than this year's figure. If revenue were the same as expected for this year, there would be another surplus of $1.5 billion.

But there is another important factor. The nation's normal economic growth, if continued, should produce an additional $3 billion (or more) in tax revenue annually.

Thus, on the basis of this computation, defense spending could exceed the present goal by $2 billion and still leave approximately $4.5 billion available for tax reduction and for payment on the national debt.

It should be kept in mind that the bipartisan tax-reduction bill introduced by Representatives Sadlak (R.-Conn.) and Herlong (D.-Fla.) would cost in revenue only $1 billion for the first year, $3 billion for each of the next four years.

The measure provides for a series of annual reductions in the personal and corporate income tax rates so that at the end of five years the maximum would be 42 per cent. (In the event that the economy should not expand normally, the Sadlak Herlong bill provides for one-year postponements of the scheduled tax reduction.)

And, don't overlook the fact that recent official statements discussing the government's spending outlook do not preclude the possibility of tax reduction. Nor was ahe door closed to tax reduction during the National Defense Executive Reserve Conference in Washington, which was addressed by President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon, and other top government officials.

Four Oil Wells Are Completed In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 23 (AP)—Four oil wells were completed this week as Mississippi oil men watched developments at Gulf Oil Corp.'s Soso unit No. 28-7 in Jasper County's Soso field.

Gulf's test well is below 13,000 feet and has logged several oil sands below 12,500 feet.

The current deepest producing level in Soso field is about 12,500 feet. The Gulf well is scheduled to be drilled to 17,500 feet.

The four completed wells were:

Sun Oil Co. reported its Gray No. 1 well in Diamond field flowed 142 barrels of oil daily from a sand at 9,377 feet and 195 barrels from a and at 10,785 feet.

In Hinds County's Bolton field, Weston Drilling Co. said its Roberts-Ross-Mashburn Unit No. 2 flowed from sands at 10,792 feet and at 11,440 feet.

CITE CREDIT POLICY

Second Straight Stock Rise Seen

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—The stock market, buoyed again by the Federal Reserve Board's easier policy toward credit, made its second straight weekly rise this week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $1.10 to $156.30.

It was by no means a consistent, uninterrupted rise. In fact, the first two market sessions were pretty dismal. Stocks declined sharply on an assortment of bad news about business and the economy.

But the last three days were decidedly bullish.

Wall Street observers said that there was a new confidence based on apparent assurance that the Federal Reserve had definitely departed from its rigid tight money policy and was now embarked on a course which would shore-up the security markets. The upsurge in corporate and U.S. Treasury bonds acted as a beacon to the stock market.

The result, according to financial observers, was a renewed vigor in buying by big institutional investors, as shown by active dealings and sizable blocks in such stocks as American Telephone, General Electric, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and other blue chips.

As the week began, however, it was natural to take profits on the big rise of the preceding Friday following news of the lower discount rate. At the same time, talk of recession was emphasized by news of drops in personal income and industrial production.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Weil's Cleaners, at North Fourth and Olive, is expected to complete an elaborate rebuilding operation by February, according to Don Weil, owner. "We are shooting to be finished by that time," Weil said.

He said there would be no interruption in service during the entire period of rebuilding. One section of the plant has already been completed on the beck side of the location.

The front, modern, attractive and serviceable, will be constructed as soon as demonlition is completed. The new building will feature a corner entrance and considerable new equipment including the latest development in shirt processing units. A conveyor system will speed up delivery of completed work to customers in the air conditioned front.

Four drivers for Midwest Bus Lines last week received awards to recognize outstanding safe driving records, according to F. A. Lusck, director of safety for the company.

The drivers who received diamond studded safety pins and bonus checks of $100 each were: E. M. Hammond, 22 - year safety award; M. H. Donald, 16-year; T. H. Evans, 15-year and W. D. Evans, 11 years.

Monument To Bolivar Slated For Dedication

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23—UP—A monument honoring the memory of South American hero and liberator Simon Bolivar will be dedicated tomorrow.

The $246,000 monument, featuring a 12-foot granite statue of Bolivar, is a gift from the Republic of Venezuela to New Orleans.

The statute stands at Basin and Canal streets.

Dr. Pedro Guierrez-Alfaro, minister of health and welfare of Venezuela, headed a South American delegation which will attend unveiling ceremonies. Mayor deLesseps Morrison will accept the gift for the city.

A military parade will precede the ceremonies at 4 p.m.

The monument will formally open the city's "garden of the Americas," an area offered by New Orleans as a site for other monuments from Latin American countries.

PRICE WAR TO END

DALLAS, Nov. 23 (UP)—Gasoline prices were expected to advance 7.5 to 7.9 cents a gallon in Dallas today to bring an end to a lengthy price war.

AUTO INDUSTRY

'57 Models Compete With New Versions

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (AP) — Automobile retainers still have a sizable stock of 1957 model cars on hand to compete with higher-priced 1958 models.

The picture is not necessarily discouraging, but it could bring a faster increase in inventories than the auto makers anticipated.

The cleanup pressure of the last few months together with the competitive drives for new model sales volume could borrow some business from the early months of 1958. If that happens the traditional spring upsurge in new car demand again will be lacking.

That seasonal upturn did not materialize in 1956 or 1957. Industry executives said this marked a change in buying habits; that henceforth new car buying would be spread over the entire year at more constant levels. To some degree they were correct, but a lot of price slashing was needed to sustain sales volume.

The sales executives would welcome a return of the spring upturn in 1958. It would help hold down top-heavy dealer inventories. It would reduce the need for manufacturer-sponsored sales contests and bonus payments.

One leading trade publication said recently the industry's retailers started November with nearly a quarter of a million 1957 cars on hand. At that time they also held about 340,000 incoming models. A year ago the dealers held about 278,000 new cars, of which only 90,000 were outgoing models.

Initial field reports indicate retail sales are moving upward again after a modest decline in October. Unofficial estimates put the October total at 428,800 units, against a September total of 453,460.

But the full impact of the 1958 model cars will not be indicated until tabulations are made for November and December. Combined November and December sales should go above the one million unit mark to provide a 1957 total of close to 6,200,000 retail deliveries.

But there is considerable uncertainty about sales volume through the early months of 1958.

It has been suggested by several top auto company executives that 1958 sales will be substantially aided by the return to the market of many motorists who now have completed paying for the cars they bought in record-smashing 1955.

Undoubtedly many 1958 buyers will be persons who bought cars in 1955. But prices have gone up broadly since the 1955 model year even with the almost industry-wide discounting among the retailers.

Statistics now becoming available indicate many new car buyers shifted from medium to the lower price fields during the 1957 model year. The over-all volume of the medium price field declined noticeably from 1956.

This could happen again in the 1958 model year. Producers in the medium price bracket probably realized this when they drew up their price schedules for the new moden year. The increases on their more popular models were lower than expected.

Mercury increased most of its Montclair prices $44; its Monterey series $70. Buick boosted most of its "Special" model series $36 and Oldsmobile added approximately the same amount to its "88" series. Dodge advanced most of its models $15, $48 and $67. De Soto increases ranged up to $75 in the conventional passenger car grouping.

WANT LEVEL-OFF

No New Price Hikes Sought By Oil Men

By CHARLES HASLET

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Independent oil producers are not planning to seek any further increase in crude oil prices at this time, a spokesman said today.

They want to see the present situation as to prices level off and "see how we get along," says Russell B. Brown, general counsel of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of America.

"If we don't get along and prices continue to rise, then we may be presented with further problems."

A cost study committee of the association reported in Dallas last month that a long period of rising costs and inadequate revenues was responsible in large measure for a sharp reduction in development of new oil and gas fields.

The committee said domestic oil and gas producers are finding it difficult, because of constantly rising costs of steel, materials, equipment and payrolls, to maintain the proper level of exploration and drilling needed to assure adequate reserves.

Asked if the report meant that the independents would urge increased oil prices in the near future, Brown replied the report "clearly justifies the fact that the price we have is not too high."

But he added that the independents did not expect to suggest any further price increase at this time.

The average price of crude oil now is about $2.80 a barrel. Increases of 20 to 28 cents a barrel were put into effect last January to take care of what the industry described as, "accumulated increased costs."

Brown also mentioned imports again, saying they figure in the costs of the domestic industry. If imports are excessive, he said, they add to the quantity of oil in storage and, in effect, to the supplies of underground reserves that cannot be tapped. Such a condition, he argued, adds to the overall costs of operation.

Another move is planned in Congress next year to earmark federal revenues from offshore oil production for improving research for defense.

The legislation is expected to be a modified form of a bill introduced by Hill and others in 1953. That bill died.

The new bill would use the government's share of offshore oil revenues for scholarships, laboratory construction and research facilities.

Earlier this week Sen. Olin Johnson (D-SC) wrote Hill to pledge his support of the proposal for use of such revenues.

Johnson said he was informed that $286,157,000 has been paid into the national treasury since 1953 from offshore oil and that this was only the first trickle. He said offshore reserves belonging to the government are estimated to be worth some 10 billion dollars.

Weather Again Dominates Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP) —Weather was a dominant factor in the grain futures markets this week, particularly for wheat, corn and soybeans.

Conditions in the Southwest were favorable for the winter wheat crop and other small grains. Soybean producing areas in other parts of the country were affected by wet weather.

At the close of trading Friday, wheat was 1⅛ lower to 1¼ higher compared with Friday a week ago. Corn was down ¾ to 1½ cents a bushel, oats were off ⅛ to ⅜, rye was up 1 to 2¼ cents, soybeans were 2 to 2⅝ higher, and lard was 5 cents lower to 8 cents higher per hundred pounds.

HOME FINANCING

CHICAGO —(UP)— The 6,000 savings and loan associations in the United States have financed almost three million new homes since the end of World War II, according to the United States Savings and Loan League.

Cotton Prices Follow Mixed Trend In Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—Cotton futures prices followed mixed trends this week. The nearer months advanced on a new rash of unfavorable weather reports. Distant deliveries pointed lower.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange showed net changes ranging from $1.95 a bale higher to $1.55 lower.

Weakness in the distant months stemmed partly from uncertainty about future price support legislation. Many traders also felt farm subsidies might be cut to make federal funds available for missiles.

Of considerable interest to traders was a census bureau report that showed ginnings for the current crop through Nov. 14 at a record low of only 6,758,000 bales. This indicated that only 58 per cent in the like period last year and an average of 79 per cent over the past five years.

A decidedly bearish interpretation was placed on the latest official government report on cotton consumption. During October mill use of the staple averaged 32,800 bales a day. This compared with a daily rate of 33,000 bales in September and 36,300 in October last year.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday jumped to 145,000 bales from 82,000 the previous week and 105,000 in the like 1956 week, according to an estimate by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau. For the season through Nov. 18, exports were estimated at 1,512,000 bales, against 1,875,000 bales at approximately the same time last year.

Crude Production Expected To Hit '56 Record

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Nov. 23 (AP) — Crude oil production in the United States this year may match the 1956 record but the number of new oil and gas wells drilled will be less.

Preliminary year-end figures indicates crude output for the year may be just above or just below the 1956 total of two billion 600 million barrels. A sharp decline, however, is certain in drilling operations.

It will be the first decline in eight years for well completions.

Current estimates indicated 1957 completions will be from 4,000 to 6,000 below the 1956 record of 58,000 new wells.

Forecasts for 1957 had indicated modest increases—from two to three per cent in drilling and about six per cent in crude production.

The only postwar decline to date in drilling was in 1949, when new wells fell below 1948 by only 500.

Postwar declines in crude production came in 1949 and 1954. Like 1957, the oil industry in 1949 was in the middle of a dispute over the level of foreign oil imports. The 1954 drop resulted from a demand slump that accompanied the end of the Korean fighting.

The Suez Crisis last year caused domestic crude output to jump from a daily average of 6,700,000 last November to a record 7,700,000 in March. Since then output has been slashed nearly a million barrels a day but the big January-March push was sufficient to keep 1957's total output within striking distance of the 1956 record.

Despite the decline, the 1957 drilling operations have included points that justify encouragement.

The new annual report of the cost study committee of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of American IPPA said the ratio of exploration and development wells required in finding a million barrels of crude and natural gas liquids the first eight months of the year was the lowest since 1947.

Only 18 new wells were needed during the January-August period, compared to 20 wells the past three years and 23 for the five pre-war years.

The committee said that while some recovery has been made in recent weeks in development drilling the number of new exploratory or wildcat completions has continued to fall below a year ago.

Major reasons for the decline included rising costs and inadequate crude prices.

Average prices the first eight months of the year for oil tubular goods were said to have risen from 12 to 15 per cent over the same 1956 period. Hourly wages were reported up 4.5 per cent.

The committee said, however, the crude price hike that ranged from 6 to 10 per cent last January did not offset previous increases in costs.

Adding to the industry's year-end headaches, there has been some talk in recent weeks that current crude prices will have to decline unless the production level begins to climb.

Revolutionary Changes Sweep Food Retailers

This was brought out as farm experts discussed mass merchandising of farm products and what it means to farmers and marketing agencies at the Agriculture Department's 35th annual Outlook Conference.

Robert M. Walsh, chief of the market development branch of the Agricultural Marketing Service, led the discussion. In a seriocomic vein, Walsh said:

"If we take all prognostications seriously, by 1960 or 1965 we shall be a nation largely of supermarket shoppers, addicted to self service, large parking lots, air conditioning, soft music, pastel colors, and pleasant landscapes in our weekly visit to the food mart."

"We shall, in addition, have been offered several thousand new food-product and packaging innovations. And we shall be subjected to increasing persuasion to buy through ingenious methols of advertising and other promotion."

Walsh didn't endorse precisely all the forecasts in that sprightly paragraph, but he pointed out trends in marketing that may lead to the predicted end result.

Retail food establishments are being transformed — food stores are becoming fewer but larger, Walsh said. Significant changes also are occurring in wholesaling.

Complete, convenient, and uninhibited self service is rapidly being achieved, not only by the wide variety of high-quality food items to be found under one roof, but also through replacement of sales clerks by prepackaged, preweighed, and prepriced items attractively arranged throughout the store. Consumer convenience is further satisfied by use of day-and-night automatic food vending machines outside the food store, Walsh said.

Mass Distribution

While these are marks of prosperity, Walsh said, "most of today's developments are likely to persist in recession years, mainly because they represent steps toward greater efficiency through mass distribution of foodstuffs to a rapidly expanding and internally migrating population."

Two or three decades ago shopping for food required visits to food stores of different kinds. The buyer went to a grocery for flour, beans, canned goods, and the like. For meat, he went to a butcher shop.

But nowdays, the buyer gets all his food in one store. Specialty stores still exist, especially in large cities, but their importance has been overshadowed by the rise of large groceries carrying a complete line of food and containing departments for virtually all food commodities.

The Census Bureau bears out this trend. The total number of food stores in the United States declined from 561,000 in 1939 to 385,000 in 1954. The trend is still on.

IN SECOND GEAR

Hope For Business Upturn In '58 Rise

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP) — Business was still jogging along in second gear this week, but hopes for an upturn in 1958 burned more brightly.

At the moment, signs of a pickup were admittedly few and far between.

The government's new easier money policy had not had time to take effect. A real improvement might take months.

There were plenty of indications that things might get a little worse before they started getting better.

Retail sales slipped below last year's peak. The average U.S. factory worker faced the Christmas shopping season with three per cent less buying power than he had a year ago.

Freight carloadings dipped sharply.

On the plus side, big corporations found it easier and cheaper to borrow money. The stock market snapped out of its slump. Bond prices climbed sharply.

Auto production surged forward. Chevrolet built 40,000 cars and Ford 38,000. Total new car output was the highest in nearly a year. But dealers said many customers were more interested in leftover 1957 cars than in higher priced 1958 models.

Best news for consumers was official word that the long rise in living costs had come to a temporary halt.

Less encouraging were government figures showing a dip in factory wages and a decline in consumer buying power. For retailers there was the prospect that with prices up and income down, consumers might curb their Christmas spending.

With most indicators still pointing lower, it was evident that the tonic effects of the government's new credit policy would not be felt at the consumer level for some time.

Even so, the foundation was being laid for a possible 1958 upturn.

Top federal reserve officials hinted that more money-easing moves are in the works. Most of the nation's 12 federal reserve banks already have cut the interest they charge on loans to commercial banks. Next step, insiders say, will be increased buying of U.S. Treasury bills by the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee. This would pump more dollars into the banking system and give the banks more money to lend.

By September, some economists say, you should see some major changes. First thing to look for will be a pickup in construction. With easier credit greasing the skids, stepped-up building of schools, sewers, roads and bridges should boost production of cement and steel. A new surge in home building would lift demand for furniture, appliances, roofing materals, plumbing fixtures and lumber. Bigger payrolls in the manufacturing industries and building trades would put new starch into retail sales.

Many economists don't like to predict that far ahead. But there were at least a few this week who ventured a guess that a full-blown boom might be under way by next November.

NO COMMENT

By JAMES W. DOUTHAT

WASHINGTON (Special) — All of the evidence made available thus far in Washington indicates there is no basis for forecasts emanating from a variety of sources that government spending will soar to spectacular heights and that heavier taxes will be required.

Many in Washington are wondering if the predictions are not resulting from propaganda disseminated by New Dealers in the lower echelons of government service whose solution for any problem invariably is bigger and bigger spending.

Thus far (obviously, the future could bring changes) official information adds up about like this:

There is expected to be moderate increases in some categories of defense spending, particularly for the missile and satellite programs.

But, at the same time, every effort is to be made to reduce other defense or non-defense spending found to be unessential or can be postponed

Final result of course, cannot be known exactly. But 1 billion is the figure most often mentioned for increased defense spending in information given out both publicly and privately. In some sources the figure given ranges as high as $2 billion.

Savings made elsewhere would, of course, be deducted in arriving at the total government spending figure. And economy advocates are convinced that multi-billion savings could be made in the present huge spending budget.

To place the government's fiscal situation in proper perspective, here are the facts:

Spending this fiscal year (ending June 30) is officially forecast at $72 billion. Expected revenue is $73.5 billion. This would leave a $1.5 billion surplus.

For the following year the Administration's announced goal is to hold spending to $70 billion—$2 billion under this year. Even if defense spending were increased by $2 billion (and disregarding any savings elsewhere), the spending total still would be no larger than this year's figure. If revenue were the same as expected for this year, there would be another surplus of $1.5 billion.

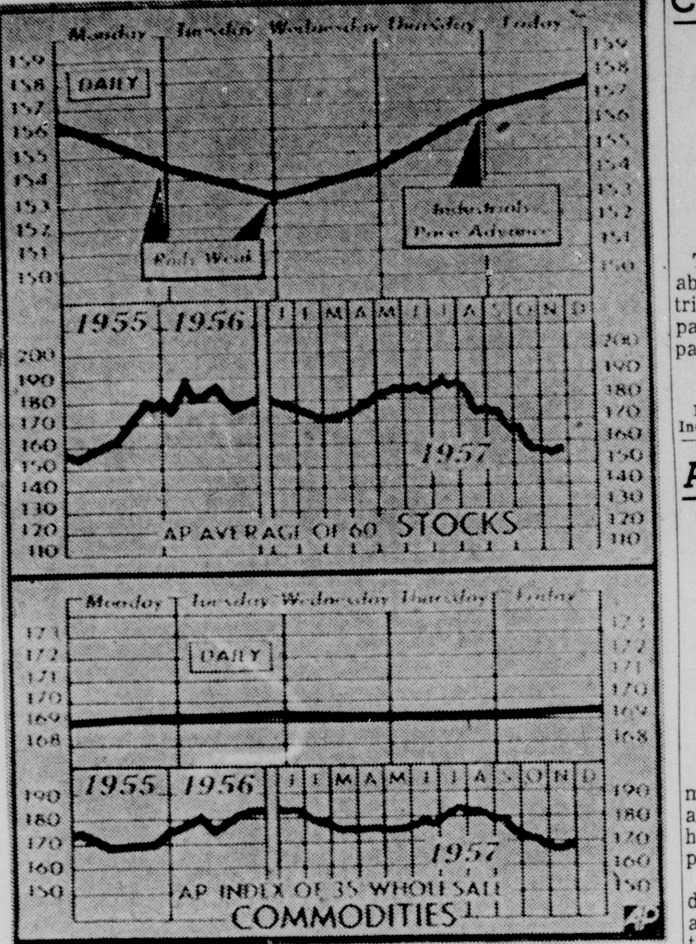
But there is another important factor. The nation's normal economic growth, if continued, should produce an additional $3 billion (or more) in tax revenue annually.

Thus, on the basis of this computation, defense spending could exceed the present goal by $2 billion and still leave approximately $4.5 billion available for tax reduction and for payment on the national debt.

It should be kept in mind that the bipartisan tax-reduction bill introduced by Representatives Sadlak (R.-Conn.) and Herlong (D.-Fla) would cost in revenue only $1 billion for the first year, $3 billion for each of the next four years.

The measure provides for a series of annual reductions in the personal and corporate income tax rates so that at the end of five years the maximum would be 42 per cent. (In the event that the economy should not expand normally, the Sadlak Herlong bill provides for one-year postponements of the scheduled tax reduction.)

And, don't overlook the fact that recent official statements discussing the government's spending outlook do not preclude the possibility of tax reduction. Nor was ahe door closed to tax reduction during the National Defense Executive Reserve Conference in Washington, which was addressed by President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon, and other top government officials.



STOCK AVERAGE PUSHES AHEAD—For the second and successive week, The Associated Press average of 60 stocks pushed ahead, closing at 157.8 from 156.3 a week ago. Led by food and grains, the commodity index advanced for the second week in a row when it closed this week at 169.3 from 169.0 in the preceding period. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

CITE CREDIT POLICY

Second Straight Stock Rise Seen

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—The stock market, buoyed again by the Federal Reserve Board's easier policy toward credit, made its second straight weekly rise this week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $1.10 to $156.30.

It was by no means a consistent, uninterrupted rise. In fact, the first two market sessions were pretty dismal. Stocks declined sharply on an assortment of bad news about business and the economy.

But the last three days were decidedly bullish.

Wall Street observers said that there was a new confidence based on apparent assurance that the Federal Reserve had definitely departed from its rigid tight money policy and was now embarked on a course which would shore-up the security markets. The upsurge in corporate and U.S. Treasury bonds acted as a beacon to the stock market.

The result, according to financial observers, was a renewed vigor in buying by big institutional investors, as shown by active dealings and sizable blocks in such stocks as American Telephone, General Electric, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and other blue chips.

As the week began, however, it was natural to take profits on the big rise of the preceding Friday following news of the lower discount rate. At the same time, talk of recession was emphasized by news of drops in personal income and industrial production.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Weil's Cleaners, at North Fourth and Olive, is expected to complete an elaborate rebuilding operation by February, according to Don Weil, owner. "We are shooting to be finished by that time," Weil said.

He said there would be no interruption in service during the entire period of rebuilding. One section of the plant has already been completed on the beck side of the location.

The front, modern, attractive and serviceable, will be constructed as soon as demonlition is completed. The new building will feature a corner entrance and considerable new equipment including the latest development in shirt processing units. A conveyor system will speed up delivery of completed work to customers in the air conditioned front.

Four drivers for Midwest Bus Lines last week received awards to recognize outstanding safe driving records, according to F. A. Lusck, director of safety for the company.

The drivers who received diamond studded safety pins and bonus checks of $100 each were: E. M. Hammond, 22 - year safety award; M. H. Donald, 16-year; T. H. Evans, 15-year and W. D. Evans, 11 years.

Four Oil Wells Are Completed In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 23 (AP)—Four oil wells were completed this week as Mississippi oil men watched developments at Gulf Oil Corp.'s Soso unit No. 28-7 in Jasper County's Soso field.

Gulf's test well is below 13,000 feet and has logged several oil sands below 12,500 feet.

The current deepest producing level in Soso field is about 12,500 feet. The Gulf well is scheduled to be drilled to 17,500 feet.

The four completed wells were:

Sun Oil Co. reported its Gray No. 1 well in Diamond field flowed 142 barrels of oil daily from a sand at 9,377 feet and 195 barrels from a and at 10,785 feet.

In Hinds County's Bolton field, Weston Drilling Co. said its Roberts-Ross-Mashburn Unit No. 2 flowed from sands at 10,792 feet and at 11,440 feet.

MAYO EXPIRES

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 23 (AP)—William T. Mayo, about 70, insurance man and former city commissioner, died today after a heart attack.

Mayo, a native of Leesville, was chairman of the city Democratic executive committee and former commissioner of public utilites.

Monument To Bolivar Slated For Dedication

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23—UP—A monument honoring the memory of South American hero and liberator Simon Bolivar will be dedicated tomorrow.

The $246,000 monument, featuring a 12-foot granite statue of Bolivar, is a gift from the Republic of Venezuela to New Orleans.

The statute stands at Basin and Canal streets.

Dr. Pedro Guierrez-Alfaro, minister of health and welfare of Venezuela, headed a South American delegation which will attend unveiling ceremonies. Mayor deLesseps Morrison will accept the gift for the city.

A military parade will precede the ceremonies at 4 p.m.

The monument will formally open the city's "garden of the Americas," an area offered by New Orleans as a site for other monuments from Latin American countries.

PRICE WAR TO END

DALLAS, Nov. 23 (UP)—Gasoline prices were expected to advance 7.5 to 7.9 cents a gallon in Dallas today to bring an end to a lengthy price war.

CONSERVATION REPORT

Two Completions, Three Abandonments In District

Two completions and three abandonments in the Monroe District were reported by the Department of Conservation for the past week:

Completions
Tensas Parish

Killens Ferry Field — Amer. Petrofina Inc., Ayer Tbr. Co. "C" No. 4, Sec. 30-14-10E. Completed Nov. 15, testing 146 barrels of 41.4 gravity oil on an 8-64 choke, from perforations at 6682-92 feet. Tubing pressure of 1175 pounds and a gas-oil ratio of 621-1. Total depth 6946 feet.

Locust Ridge Field — The Atlantic Refg. Co., R. C. Lowry No 8, Sec. 18-10-11E. Completed Oct. 31, testing 56 barrels of 57.2 gravity oil on an 11-64 choke from perforations at 9146-52 feet. Gas-oil ratio 420-1. Total depth 9250 feet.

Abandonments
Franklin Parish

Wildcat Field — James K. Bivins, H.W. Gilbert et al No. 1, Sec. 19-12-8E, on Nov. 20 at 7396 feet.

Wildcat Field — Munoco Co., Ola No. 1, Sec 18-14-7E, on Nov. 17 at 5050 feet.

La Salle Parish

Geo. Belchic Jr. & Mercury Drlg. Corp. et al, Tremont "A" No. 1, Sec. 33-10-2E, on Nov. 16 at 3511 feet.

Active Rigs
Catahoula Parish

Wildcat Field — A. J. Hodges Inds. et al, La. Cent. Oil & Gas-Internat'l Paper Co. No. 1, Sec. 3-9-6E, drilling at 9084 feet.

Sicily Island Field — Anstral Oil Exp. Inc. & Crescent Prod. Co., Ten. Delta "A" No. 1, Sec. 11-9-7E, drilling at 12,290 feet.

Tew Lake Field — Serio-Punches Oil Co., Guss No. 1, Sec. 2-8-6E, spudded in Nov. 19, set 402 feet of 8⅝ inch pipe. Waiting on cement at 430 feet.

Tew Lake Field — Sam Sklar; Routon No. 1, Sec. 2-8-6E, spudded in Nov. 15, set 401 feet of 10¾ inch pipe. Drilling at 4375

Concordia Parish

AUTO INDUSTRY

'57 Models Compete With New Versions

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (AP) — Automobile retainers still have a sizable stock of 1957 model cars on hand to compete with higher-priced 1958 models.

The picture is not necessarily discouraging, but it could bring a faster increase in inventories than the auto makers anticipated.

The cleanup pressure of the last few months together with the competitive drives for new model sales volume could borrow some business from the early months of 1958. If that happens the traditional spring upsurge in new car demand again will be lacking.

That seasonal upturn did not materialize in 1956 or 1957. Industry executives said this marked a change in buying habits; that henceforth new car buying would be spread over the entire year at more constant levels. To some degree they were correct, but a lot of price slashing was needed to sustain sales volume.

The sales executives would welcome a return of the spring upturn in 1958. It would help hold down top-heavy dealer inventories. It would reduce the need for manufacturer-sponsored sales contests and bonus payments.

One leading trade publication said recently the industry's retailers started November with nearly a quarter of a million 1957 cars on hand. At that time they also held about 340,000 incoming models. A year ago the dealers held about 278,000 new cars, of which only 90,000 were outgoing models.

Initial field reports indicate retail sales are moving upward again after a modest decline in October. Unofficial estimates put the October total at 428,800 units, against a September total of 453,-460.

But the full impact of the 1958 model cars will not be indicated until tabulations are made for November and December. Combined November and December sales should go above the one million unit mark to provide a 1957 total of close to 6,200,000 retail deliveries.

But there is considerable uncertainty about sales volume through the early months of 1958.

It has been suggested by several top auto company executives that 1958 sales will be substantially aided by the return to the market of many motorists who now have completed paying for the cars they bought in record-smashing 1955.

Undoubtedly many 1958 buyers will be persons who bought cars in 1955. But prices have gone up broadly since the 1955 model year even with the almost industry-wide discounting among the retailers.

Statistics now becoming available indicate many new car buyers shifted from medium to the lower price fields during the 1957 model year. The over-all volume of the medium price field declined noticeably from 1956.

This could happen again in the 1958 model year. Producers in the medium price bracket probably realized this when they drew up their price schedules for the new moden year. The increases on their more popular models were lower than expected.

Mercury increased most of its Montclair prices $44; its Monterey series $70. Buick boosted most of its "Special" model series $36 and Oldsmobile added approximately the same amount to its "88" series. Dodge advanced most of its models $15, $48 and $67. De Soto increases ranged up to $75 in the conventional passenger car grouping.

WANT LEVEL-OFF

No New Price Hikes Sought By Oil Men

By CHARLES HASLET

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Independent oil producers are not planning to seek any further increase in crude oil prices at this time, a spokesman said today.

They want to see the present situation as to prices level off and "see how we get along," says Russell B. Brown, general counsel of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of America.

"If we don't get along and prices continue to rise, then we may be presented with further problems."

A cost study committee of the association reported in Dallas last month that a long period of rising costs and inadequate revenues was responsible in large measure for a sharp reduction in development of new oil and gas fields.

The committee said domestic oil and gas producers are finding it difficult, because of constantly rising costs of steel, materials, equipment and payrolls, to maintain the proper level of exploration and drilling needed to assure adequate reserves.

Asked if the report meant that the independents would urge increased oil prices in the near future, Brown replied the report "clearly justifies the fact that the price we have is not too high."

But he added that the independents did not expect to suggest any further price increase at this time.

The average price of crude oil now is about $2.80 a barrel. Increases of 20 to 28 cents a barrel were put into effect last January to take care of what the industry described as, "accumulated increased costs."

Brown also mentioned imports again, saying they figure in the costs of the domestic industry. If imports are excessive, he said, they add to the quantity of oil in storage and, in effect, to the supplies of underground reserves that cannot be tapped. Such a condition, he argued, adds to the overall costs of operation.

Another move is planned in Congress next year to earmark federal revenues from offshore oil production for improving research for defense.

The legislation is expected to be a modified form of a bill introduced by Hill and others in 1953. That bill died.

The new bill would use the government's share of offshore oil revenues for scholarships, laboratory construction and research facilities.

Earlier this week Sen. Olin Johnson (D-SC) wrote Hill to pledge his support of the proposal for use of such revenues.

Johnson said he was informed that $286,157,000 has been paid into the national treasury since 1953 from offshore oil and that this was only the first trickle. He said offshore reserves belonging to the government are estimated to be worth some 10 billion dollars.

Weather Again Dominates Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP) —Weather was a dominant factor in the grain futures markets this week, particularly for wheat, corn and soybeans.

Conditions in the Southwest were favorable for the winter wheat crop and other small grains. Soybean producing areas in other parts of the country were affected by wet weather.

At the close of trading Friday, wheat was 1⅞ lower to 1¼ higher compared with Friday a week ago. Corn was down ¾ to 1½ cents a bushel, oats were off ⅛ to ⅜, rye was up 1 to 2¼ cents, soybeans were 2 to 2⅝ higher, and lard was 5 cents lower to 8 cents higher per hundred pounds.

HOME FINANCING

CHICAGO —(UP)— The 6,000 savings and loan associations in the United States have financed almost three million new homes since the end of World War II, according to the United States Savings and Loan League.

Cotton Prices Follow Mixed Trend In Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP)—Cotton futures prices followed mixed trends this week. The nearer months advanced on a new rash of unfavorable weather reports. Distant deliveries pointed lower.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange showed net changes ranging from $1.95 a bale higher to $1.55 lower.

Weakness in the distant months stemmed partly from uncertainty about future price support legislation. Many traders also felt farm subsidies might be cut to make federal funds available for missiles.

Of considerable interest to traders was a census bureau report that showed ginnings for the current crop through Nov. 14 at a record low of only 6,758,000 bales. This indicated that only 58 per cent in the like period last year and an average of 79 per cent over the past five years.

A decidedly bearish interpretation was placed on the latest official government report on cotton consumption. During October mill use of the staple averaged 32,800 bales a day. This compared with a daily rate of 33,000 bales in September and 36,300 in October last year.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday jumped to 145,000 bales from 82,000 the previous week and 105,000 in the like 1956 week, according to an estimate by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau. For the season through Nov. 18, exports were estimated at 1,512,000 bales, against 1,875,000 bales at approximately the same time last year.

Crude Production Expected To Hit '56 Record

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Nov. 23 (AP) — Crude oil production in the United States this year may match the 1956 record but the number of new oil and gas wells drilled will be less.

Preliminary year-end figures indicates crude output for the year may be just above or just below the 1956 total of two billion 600 million barrels. A sharp decline, however, is certain in drilling operations.

It will be the first decline in eight years for well completions.

Current estimates indicated 1957 completions will be from 4,000 to 6,000 below the 1956 record of 58,-000 new wells.

Forecasts for 1957 had indicated modest increases—from two to three per cent in drilling and about six per cent in crude production.

The only postwar decline to date in drilling was in 1949, when new wells fell below 1948 by only 500.

Postwar declines in crude production came in 1949 and 1954. Like 1957, the oil industry in 1949 was in the middle of a dispute over the level of foreign oil imports. The 1954 drop resulted from a demand slump that accompanied the end of the Korean fighting.

The Suez Crisis last year caused domestic crude output to jump from a daily average of 6,700,000 last November to a record 7,700,-000 in March. Since then output has been slashed nearly a million barrels a day but the big January-March push was sufficient to keep 1957's total output within striking distance of the 1956 record.

Despite the decline, the 1957 drilling operations have included points that justify encouragement.

The new annual report of the cost study committee of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of American IPPA said the ratio of exploration and development wells required in finding a million barrels of crude and natural gas liquids the first eight months of the year was the lowest since 1947.

Only 18 new wells were needed during the January-August period, compared to 20 wells the past three years and 23 for the five pre-war years.

The committee said that while some recovery has been made in recent weeks in development drilling the number of new exploratory or wildcat completions has continued to fall below a year ago.

Major reasons for the decline included rising costs and inadequate crude prices.

Average prices the first eight months of the year for oil tubular goods were said to have risen from 12 to 15 per cent over the same 1956 period. Hourly wages were reported up 4.5 per cent.

The committee said, however, the crude price hike that ranged from 6 to 10 per cent last January did not offset previous increases in costs.

Adding to the industry's year-end headaches, there has been some talk in recent weeks that current crude prices will have to decline unless the production level begins to climb.

'Until They Sail' Is Vivid Story

Charles Drake and Sandra Dee, New York's highest - paid teenage model making her film debut, head the supporting cast, which also includes Wally Cassell, Alan Napier, Ralph Votrian, John Wilder, Tige Andrews, Adam Kennedy and Mickey Shaughnessy.

A vivid and compassionate story covering the years of World War II and their effect on a New Zealand family of four sisters, "Until They Sail" was filmed in CinemaScope against locales of New Zealand's principal cities, Wellington, the capital, and Christchurch, situated across the Cook Straights. Added authenticity was given the film by atmospheric location footage shot in these cities, which never previously have been used for a feature picture.

As the narrative of "Until They Sail" begins, the "Friskett Case" is the sensation of Christchurch. Shiner Phil Friskett, a returned soldier, has murdered his wife, Delia, (Piper Laurie), on discovery of her infidelity to him while he was a prisoner of war. Delia's sister, Barbara (Jean Simmons), has been called as a witness at the trial, and as she prepares to give her testimony, the story of what happened to her, to Delia, and to the other sisters, Anne (Joan Fontaine) and teenage Evelyn (Sandra Dee), during four wartime years is unfolded in flashbacks.

It is the story of the effects of loneliness, desperation and temptation on the women left behind. Father, brother and Barbara's husband are early war casualties. In an era of "Eat, drink and make love for tomorrow we die," Delia has buried the regret for her impetuous marriage to the boorish Shiner Phil in a series of affairs with American servicemen stationed in Wellington. The more reserved Anne has kept the newcomers at a distance until she falls in love with Captain Richard Bates. They are to be married but he is killed without knowing that Anne is to have his child. Young Evelyn is also caught up in the romantic illusions of the wartime years but waits faithfully for her Tommy. And, as the war nears its close, Barbara is drawn to Capt. Jack Harding (Paul Newman), liaison officer between the GI's and New Zealand girls.

ROMANTIC SCENE — A meeting in a New Zealand recreation center during World War II marks the beginning of the romance between Jean Simmons and Paul Newman in "Until They Sail", new M-G-M drama based on a story by James Michener. Joan Fontaine and Piper Laurie also have starring roles in the picture which starts today at the Jim Theater.

STOPOVER TOKYO — Edmund O'Brien takes over from Robert Wagner in the scene from "Stopover Tokyo", the CinemaScope feature that opens today at the Paramount Theatre. The picture also stars Joan Collins in the film based on John P. Marquand's book-of-the-month novel about the United States' espionage service in postwar Japan.

Sputniks, Atoms Hit Philatelic Headlines, Too

Sputniks and atoms have hit the philaetic headlines, too.

Soviet Russia has just issued two new stamps publicizing its space satellites and the United Nations has announced its first stamp for 1958 will honor the International Atomic Energy Agency.

One Soviet stamp depicts a rocket shooting off into space. Another features the Sputnik about to leave the earth. A new sputnik stamp is expected to be issued this week, claims J. and H. Stolow in New York.

The U. N. Postal Administration says its first commemorative of 1958 will be issued Feb. 10 in the 3 cent and 8 cent denominations. It will show the U. N. emblem shedding light on an atom and will symbolize the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

The stamp was designed by Robert Perrot of France and will be the ninth in the series of U.N. commemoratives depicting the work of United Nations agencies.

The autonomous Republic of Togo has issued three series of stamps. One series has 14 postage stamps, another has seven and a third has five airmails. The subjects are mostly flora and fauna of the French colony.

Peru will commemorate the centenary of its postage stamps by issuing 10 new stamps. The first nine values will honor the centenary and the last will pay tribute to PEREX, the stamp exhibition planned for the philatelic occasion.

Leonard Warren, Mixed Chorus On Telephone Hour

The Telephone Hour's salute to Thanksgiving Day, which will be heard at 8 p.m. Monroe time, over the NBC radio network, featured Metropolitan Opera baritone Leonard Warren and the Bell Telephone Mixed Chorus. They will be accompanied by Donald Voorhees and the telephone orchestra in a program that includes three numbers by American composers.

First of these will be the opening of the broadcast when the chorus will sing Wilkinson's arrangement of the traditional 'Over the River and Through the Woods." Leonard Warren will sing the familiar and nostalgic "Hills of Home" by Oscar Fox. The third American number on the program is the orchestra's presentation of "At an Old Trysting Place," the distinctively New England composition from MacDowell's "Woodland Sketches."

At the conclusion of the program Warren and ahe chorus will join in Puccini's setting in "Tosca" of the ancient church hymn "Te Deum."

Warren's other number on the program will be an Italian folk song, "Come to the Sea," as arranged by Califano. The chorus and orchestra will also present the overture and prologue to "Romeo and Juliet" by Charles Gounod.

ABBE LANE

Actress Invades Hollywood Via Italian Pictures

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Abbe Lane swore she wouldn't return to Hollywood until the combined studio heads bore her through the streets like an Egyptian princess, with the lesser officials strewing rose petals in her path.

However, there are indications that Hollywood is coming around to her way of thinking about Abbe Lane.

"Hollywood!" she exclaimed, seething. "Don't mention Hollywood to me!"

I took a chance and did so, and she continued: "I left here two years ago because nobody in Hollywood could see me as anything but a band singer. I went to Italy, where they have imagination about a person's talent. When they see a girl sing, they realize she could be able to act too."

The more perceptive Italians made good use of her talents. In two years, she did a total of eight pictures, appearing opposite such stars as Vittorio de Sica, Toto and Peter Ustinov.

"I went to Italy at a very good time," she reported. "The other female stars were on the wane. Sophia Loren was away doing American pictures; they consider her almost an American star now. Besides, she is in real trouble because of her marriage.

"Gina Lollobrigida was out because of her baby, and she was falling in popularity. The Italians are very fickle about their screen favorites."

So Abbe stepped in. Now she's back here to play "a tramp" in "Maracaibo" with Cornel Wilde, who is also producing and directing.

Sputniks, Atoms Hit Philatelic Headlines, Too

Sputniks and atoms have hit the philaetic headlines, too.

Soviet Russia has just issued two new stamps publicizing its space satellites and the United Nations has announced its first stamp for 1958 will honor the International Atomic Energy Agency.

One Soviet stamp depicts a rocket shooting off into space. Another features the Sputnik about to leave the earth. A new sputnik stamp is expected to be issued this week, claims J. and H. Stolow in New York.

The U. N. Postal Administration says its first commemorative of 1958 will be issued Feb. 10 in the 3 cent and 8 cent denominations. It will show the U. N. emblem shedding light on an atom and will symbolize the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

The stamp was designed by Robert Perrot of France and will be the ninth in the series of U.N. commemoratives depicting the work of United Nations agencies.

The autonomous Republic of Togo has issued three series of stamps. One series has 14 postage stamps, another has seven and a third has five airmails. The subjects are mostly flora and fauna of the French colony.

Peru will commemorate the centenary of its postage stamps by issuing 10 new stamps. The first nine values will honor the centenary and the last will pay tribute to PEREX, the stamp exhibition planned for the philatelic occasion.

Leonard Warren, Mixed Chorus On Telephone Hour

The Telephone Hour's salute to Thanksgiving Day, which will be heard at 8 p.m. Monroe time, over the NBC radio network, featured Metropolitan Opera baritone Leonard Warren and the Bell Telephone Mixed Chorus. They will be accompanied by Donald Voorhees and the telephone orchestra in a program that includes three numbers by American composers.

First of these will be the opening of the broadcast when the chorus will sing Wilkinson's arrangement of the traditional 'Over the River and Through the Woods." Leonard Warren will sing the familiar and nostalgic "Hills of Home" by Oscar Fox. The third American number on the program is the orchestra's presentation of "At an Old Trysting Place," the distinctively New England composition from MacDowell's "Woodland Sketches."

At the conclusion of the program Warren and ahe chorus will join in Puccini's setting in "Tosca" of the ancient church hymn "Te Deum."

Warren's other number on the program will be an Italian folk song, "Come to the Sea," as arranged by Califano. The chorus and orchestra will also present the overture and prologue to "Romeo and Juliet" by Charles Gounod.

ABBE LANE

Actress Invades Hollywood Via Italian Pictures

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Abbe Lane swore she wouldn't return to Hollywood until the combined studio heads bore her through the streets like an Egyptian princess, with the lesser officials strewing rose petals in her path.

However, there are indications that Hollywood is coming around to her way of thinking about Abbe Lane.

"Hollywood!" she exclaimed, seething. "Don't mention Hollywood to me!"

I took a chance and did so, and she continued: "I left here two years ago because nobody in Hollywood could see me as anything but a band singer. I went to Italy, where they have imagination about a person's talent. When they see a girl sing, they realize she could be able to act too."

The more perceptive Italians made good use of her talents. In two years, she did a total of eight pictures, appearing opposite such stars as Vittorio de Sica, Toto and Peter Ustinov.

"I went to Italy at a very good time," she reported. "The other female stars were on the wane. Sophia Loren was away doing American pictures; they consider her almost an American star now. Besides, she is in real trouble because of her marriage.

"Gina Lollobrigida was out because of her baby, and she was falling in popularity. The Italians are very fickle about their screen favorites."

So Abbe stepped in. Now she's back here to play "a tramp" in "Maracaibo" with Cornel Wilde, who is also producing and directing.

The Family Book Of Humor Is Excellent

A lighthearted, rollicking anthology of short stories, humorous sketches, poems, quizzes, puzzles, and cartoons for the whole family's entertainment.

Here's fun for everyone! A book to be shared by a wide range of ages, The Family Book of Humor is full of things to be read aloud, to recite, to look at, or to play together. There are over two hundred rib-tickling pieces — many sparkling-new and never before anthologized, and many beloved and familiar — and some material written just for this book! They range from a short and witty poem by Parke Cummings to a hilarious long story by Betty MacDonald of The Egg and I fame. Among the old favorites are selections by Stephen Leacock and Mark Twain, as well as a wealth of fresh new material by such contemporary humorists as Sylvia Wright, Art Buchwald, Robert Thomas Allen, and Bennett Cerf.

Many choice cartoons by such popular artists as H. T. Webster, Chon Day, Kate Osann, Virgil Partch, and others are sprinkled through the text, and Richard Erdoes' zany sketches make amusing chapter openings. For do-it-yourselfers there are nearly fifty brain teasers and puzzles to challenge the family's combined intellect.

Cleverly divided into groups like those on the ubiquitous (and popuar) questionnaire, there are chuckles here for every occasion and every member of the family. This is a happy, wholesome collection of the best of American humor — served family style.

Jesus Left An Impact On All Those He Met

THEY KNEW JESUS. By George Cornell. Morrow. Regular and deluxe editions $3.75 and $7.50

Not very much is known, historically, concerning the lives of the 24 persons who form the subject of this book, an essay in Gospel reconstruction. Imagination, of a controlled sort, is indispensable for a full portraiture, and the author — religion writer for the Associated Press — has made resourceful use of it.

The approach is perhaps somewhat subjective, but the sketches are none the worse for that. The New Testament figures come to life within the context. Through the pages stride not only major figures like Mary, Joseph, John the Baptist, Peter, and John, but also more obscure characters in the great drama.

All are depicted at some crucial stage in their encounter with Christ. Cornell has wisely and firmly based himself on the New Testament record, rounding it out with tradition where the material is scanty and drawing on non-Scriptural documentation where feasible. The tone is one of sustained reverence, and the book will make eminently satisfying reading for the religiously disposed.

Slaughter Turns Out Another Top Work

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Frank G. Slaughter who is without a peer as a modern story teller has produced another enthralling story of the Renaissance called "The Mapmaker." This is the story of Andrea Bianco, a Venetian who spent eight years as a slave of the moors and was then sold into slavery to the Portugese. There he met Prince Henry the Navigator and proved that he was a mapmaker. With his instruments of navigation he was able to lead voyages of exploration to the Antilles, the Azores and the Coast of Africa. There is a good love story and a very cruel villain, but the most interesting part of the book deals with the development of navigational knowledge and physical prowess.

A cynical but entertaining novel of the seventeenth century is "Monsieu.. Janvier" written by Elizabeth Linington. It is the story of Ringan Montieth, youngest son of a proud Highland Chieftan, who after Culloden made a new life for himself in Paris. This is a story of how he sought revenge and almost lost his own soul. The book moves from Paris to England and to Scotland. It is a colorful novel and presents an interesting although not very pleasant picture of a man and an era. Elizabeth Linington has written several other good novels in the past few years and she is an author to watch.

The addiiotns to the non-fiction section this week have been varied and interesting. Two fascinating books dealing with the life of English Royalty are "Of Carriages and Kings" by Frederuck John Gorst and "My Twenty Years in Buckingham Palace" by F. J. Corbitt. The first book was written by a retired royal footman and gives a fascinating picutre of life as it was lived during the lush Edwardian period. The second was written by Mr. Corbitt who served as deputy comptroller of supply in the households of George V, Edward VII, George VI and Elizabeth II. if you want to know how a royal family lives, be sure to read one of these books.

The past of our country is always of interest and there are many readers who will welcome such books as "Last of the Great Outlaws", "The Story of Cole Younger" by Homer Crow, "Across the Cimarron" by James D. Horan which is the true story of the life of Marshall George Bold and his adventures in the cow towns of the wild west. "Fastest on the River" by Manly Wade Wellman is the thrilling account of the great steamboat race between the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee. All of these books are thrilling as well as informative.

Books of a humorous nature are "Further Fables For our Time" by James Thurber, "George Washington's Horse Slept Here" by Pauline McConnell and "Dear Mad'm" by Stella Walthal Patterson. This type of book is very popular and always finds a waiting public.

Biographies are always popular and this week we have three new ones on a variety of personalities. "A Journey to Greatness" by David Ewen deals with the life and music of George Gershwin and will be eagerly read by music lovers. 'De Lesseps of Suez" by Charles Beatty is a very well done account of the man who had the dream and the ingenuity to build the Suez canal. "The Tiger Wore Spikes" by John McCallum is an informal biography of Ty Cobb. Here is a truly wonderful study of baseball's most brilliant mind and performer and how the first man to be enshrined in the Hall of Fame revolutionized the game.

There are many hazardous occupations and today's books offer accounts of two of them. "The Hurricane Hunters" by Ivan Ray Tannehill is a lively story of the hair-raising experiences of the men who have probed by sea and air into the mysteries of the world's most terrible storms. How they have saved many lives and how they have risked their own in doing so makes an exciting book to read. "Gorilla Hunter" by Fred G. Merfield is the African adventures of an extraordinary hunter. Mr. Merfield has hunted wild animals in the French Cameroons for 35 years, but he is not a "sportsman." He is a profession hunter, collecting rare animals for museums and zoos and his specialty is the gorilla, the largest of the apes and one of the rarest. It is interesting to know how Mr. Merfield works and the hazards he faces each day he is in the bush.

These books and many more may be borrowed from your branch of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. If you are not using our resources now, we give you a hearty invitation to do so as soon as possible.

The Longest Second Is Suspense Novel

THE LONGEST SECOND By Bill S. Ballinger (Harper, $2.95). A suspense novel and one you won't put down until the final page.

When he woke up he had no idea who he was. Then, when he tried to talk and couldn't—he realized his throat had been cut.

When he grew stronger the police came to question him — and he answered by signs.

Finally he was able to leave the hospital and went out into New York City, armed with pad and pencil for communication, searching for his identity and some explanation for what had happened to him. He went first to see the woman, a young silversmith, on whose doorstep he had been lying after his injury, but he learned nothing — she had never seen him before she found him in front of her house. She was sympathetic, however, and took him in as an assistant and let him sleep in her basement.

With this security he began to hunt further into the past, and slowly, surprisingly, little things began to remind him of other things and with recollection came awareness of danger, danger that grew increasingly real as he moved on in his search.

Ingenious and tense, The Longest Second is loaded with the surprises.

List Boehm's Merits As A Conductor

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK —(UP)— Because Karl Boehm currently is making a big conductorial impression at the Metropolitan Opera, it is interesting to examine his merits as a symphonic conductor, which can be done readily in three recordings of his.

These are of Brahms' second symphony, with the Berlin Philharmonic (Decca-9933); of Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," with the Saxon State Orchestra (Decca-9927), and Beethoven's fifth symphony and Mozart's "Ein Kleine Nachtmusik" with the Berlin Philharmonic (Decca-9942).

The most telling thing that can be said is that the three records are as distinctly different as are the composers. There is no conduitorial imprint which carries from one to the others. This conductor eschews all effort for novelty rather than being dramatically an "interpreter." Brahms rarely sounds as Brahmsian as he does under Boehm's baton, nor Strauss so Straussian and so on. It is an inestimable conductorial virtue, which stands out impressively when his Brahms' second is conpared with another new recording by Rafael Kubelik and the Vienna Philharmonic (London-1699).

The fragile opera, Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," is preserved in all its fragility and shimmering beauty in a recorded performance with Andre Cluytens conducting the French National Orchestra and well-known singers with Victoria de los Angeles as Melisande. She couldn't get away with the part on the stage. Physically she is not at all ethereal. But she adapts her voice admirably to Melisande's essential qualities. Jacques Jansen as Pelleas and Gerard Souzay as Golaud are vital singers in vital (to the opera's appreciation) parts (Angel-3561C-L).

Maria Meneghini Callas' complete oper. recordings have reached such a number that it was inevitable they would have to include minor operas to continue. The minor is Bellini's "La Sonnambula," which Miss Callas recorded with singers, chorus, and orchestra of La Scala, Milan, with Antonino Voto conducting. People interested in opera as opera will get only sporadic pleasure from the complete "La Sonnambula." People enraptured by the art of Miss Callas will find it a great joy. Bellini's heroines and Bellini's great vocal lines fit her emotions and voice to a T (Angel-3568).

CONTEST

Selecting Photos Very Interesting

By JOHN OLDENBURG
Camera Editor

At a rather stormy but interesting session of the North Louisiana Camera Club Tueday evening, the same display of pictures as shown here was shown and each member asked to jot down his criticism. Then an open forum was held and almost as many ideas as members came up. Much was learned from dissecting the prize winners.

The following article by Irving Desfor, AP feature writer, is very informative and interesting. We are quoting the article exactly.

When more than 74,000 pictures are submitted from all over the world to a magazine photo contest in which $25,000 prize money is awarded, there is bound to be international camera fan interest when the winners are announced.

And the announcement usually is followed by debate and disagreement over the judges' selections.

As a judge in previous photo contests, I am only too well aware of the compromises which take place in a "smoke - filled room" in order to arrive at a "unanimous" choice. And the more judges, the more compromises usually have to be made.

The result of this contest is another indication of the wide differences in individual preferences.

As an experiment, I showed a set of five unmarked prints to half a dozen people. One print was the $2,000 winner. The others won minor prizes of $100, $50 or $25 each.

As long as there is no specific formula or certainty as to what makes a winning picture, camera fans should keep aiming for these big photo contests. If their picture is original in any degree and has a twist, perspective or angle that's only slightly different, some judge somewhere is liable to pin the blue ribbon on it.

P. S. "Run for Cover," the $2,000 prize winner in black - and-white was shot by Tom Nebbia of Columbia, S. C. A tiny child, dwarfed by giant trees, is shown sprinting for home as a storm threatens. It combines human interest, dramatic composition and technical excellence in the opinion of the judges.

THE SHORT STORY

Fifteen By Three Is Work Of 30 Writers

FIFTEEN BY THREE. By R. V. Cassill, Herbert Gold and James B. Hall. New Directions. $1.35.

MOOLTIKI. By Rumer Godden. Viking. $3.50.

THE BEST SHORT STORIES OF FRANK R. STOCKTON SCRIBNER. $2.75.

THE BEST SHORT STORIES OF RING LARDNER. Scribner. $4.50.

About 30 writers are represented in these seven volumes by about 100 short stores and by many times that number of different topics, attitudes, subjects and incidents.

The short story is supposed to be rigidly unified, yet of course it invariably spills over. If one character speaks for the author, another must answer; if one acts for him, another must behave in contrary fashion. So here is an infinite variety:

The husband who cherishes a pinch of his wife's ashes, the youth who weds the daughter of the man whose head he hacked off, the poet who borrows the cloak of his wife's lover, the teacher who wouldn't marry the girl who instead becomes the Negro's wife, the faith of the aged Indian greater than that of the religious, the grocery boy in love, the lesson taught by the sacrifice of the black ram, the telltale unsmirched square of linen.

The last is from "The Blank Page," by that master of the short form, author of "Seven Gothic Tales," "Winter's Tales" and now "Last Tales:" Isak Dinesen, pseudonym for the Danish Baroness Karon Blixen. In it an old coffee - brown, black-veiled woman remembers how her grandmother taught her to tell stories: "Be loyal to the story," and demanded, "Where does one read a deeper tale than upon the most perfectly printed page of the most precious book?" She herself replied:

"Upon the blank page."

This precious blank page, the unrecorded part of the story, gives wings to the recorded part. Here are the invaluable implications, the super - values.

American Tradition

The short story is probably the commonest art form in this country, and we're expert at it. We may be Johnny - come - latelies on the cultural scene: somebody beat us to music, ballet, painting, sculpture, novel, drama. But if we may lay claim to any pioneering the arts, it is in three fields: We came first with the steel-frame skyscraper; with jazz-provided always jazz is art and isn't African; and we were very early, if not wholly first, thanks to Edgar Allen Poe, with the short story.

To be sure there was Boccaccio, but the 19th Century saw the real start of this flexible medium. Maupassant led in France, Chekhov in Russia, if he didn't and doesn't still lead in the entire world.

But we have been phenomenally prolific. We had the trick endings of Stockton "The Lady, or the Tiger?" and of O. Henry and Wilbur Daniel Steele; we had Lardner's merciless satires such as "Haircut" and 'The Golden Honeymoon." We have remarkable writers today: Hemingway is one, Truman Capote did "Miriam" and Shirley Jackson, "The Lottery."

But we have a weakness. We would rather play with the short story than work with it; it threatens to change from means of communication to pastime. We tell the story and forget about the essential blank page. We have reduced the short story on occasion to the short, short, thanks to our preference for getting through things rather than relishing them, for enjoying the abridgment in place of the entire opera or novel, the "highlights" of half a dozen symphonies instead of the irreducible substance of a single one.

The best short stories in the group listed at the start — all published within a couple of weeks — are curiously those with the freshest tone and their opposites: those with the most conservative.

Pursuit of Newness

Cassill, Gold and Hall are vivid, wide - awake, exploratory writers; they do not tell you what they think you want, or tell it in the familiar way. They dismiss the old, offer only the new, different and unused. They are, for me, better short story writers than novelists. Gold, for instance, writes with a freedom from restraint and a wonderful buoyancy that perhaps too much care, or too much devout working - over, may eliminate from his longer fiction.

"Fifteen by Three" has a positive, affirmatory value which fortunately is not diminished by the unnecessary emphasis, in James Laughlin's foreword — helpful though it is—and in Cassill's own introduction, on the supposed faults of what they castigate as the New Yorker magazine formula — a formula which after all has produced some memorable short stories in the last quarter century.

Along with this trio you will rate very highly the creations of Angus Wilson, involved though they are in a manner that seems more suitable for the longer novel; the work of Miss Godden, though it is certainly conventional in form; and the dozen gripping tales by Isak Dinesen, in a form about as old, stately and seductive as the minuet.

The Family Book Of Humor Is Excellent

A lighthearted, rollicking anthology of short stories, humorous sketches, poems, quizzes, puzzles, and cartoons for the whole family's entertainment.

Here's fun for everyone! A book to be shared by a wide range of ages, The Family Book of Humor is full of things to be read aloud, to recite, to look at, or to play together. There are over two hundred rib-tickling pieces — many sparkling-new and never before anthologized, and many beloved and familiar — and some material written just for this book! They range from a short and witty poem by Parke Cummings to a hilarious long story by Betty MacDonald of The Egg and I fame. Among the old favorites are selections by Stephen Leacock and Mark Twain, as well as a wealth of fresh new material by such contemporary humorists as Sylvia Wright, Art Buchwald, Robert Thomas Allen, and Bennett Cerf.

Many choice cartoons by such popular artists as H. T. Webster, Chon Day, Kate Osann, Virgil Partch, and others are sprinkled through the text, and Richard Erdoes' zany sketches make amusing chapter openings. For do-it-yourselfers there are nearly fifty brain teasers and puzzles to challenge the family's combined intellect.

Cleverly divided into groups like those on the ubiquitous (and popuar) questionnaire, there are chuckles here for every occasion and every member of the family. This is a happy, wholesome collection of the best of American humor — served family style.

Jesus Left An Impact On All Those He Met

THEY KNEW JESUS. By George Cornell. Morrow. Regular and deluxe editions $3.75 and $7.50

Not very much is known, historically, concerning the lives of the 24 persons who form the subject of this book, an essay in Gospel reconstruction. Imagination, of a controlled sort, is indispensable for a full portraiture, and the author — religion writer for the Associated Press — has made resourceful use of it.

The approach is perhaps somewhat subjective, but the sketches are none the worse for that. The New Testament figures come to life within the context. Through the pages stride not only major figures like Mary, Joseph, John the Baptist, Peter, and John, but also more obscure characters in the great drama.

All are depicted at some crucial stage in their encounter with Christ. Cornell has wisely and firmly based himself on the New Testament record, rounding it out with tradition where the material is scanty and drawing on non-Scriptural documentation where feasible. The tone is one of sustained reverence, and the book will make eminently satisfying reading for the religiously disposed.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Slaughter Turns Out Another Top Work

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Frank G. Slaughter who is without a peer as a modern story teller has produced another enthralling story of the Renaissance called "The Mapmaker." This is the story of Andrea Bianco, a Venetian who spent eight years as a slave of the moors and was then sold into slavery to the Portugese. There he met Prince Henry the Navigator and proved that he was a mapmaker. With his instruments of navigation he was able to lead voyages of exploration to the Antilles, the Azores and the Coast of Africa. There is a good love story and a very cruel villain, but the most interesting part of the book deals with the development of navigational knowledge and physical prowess.

A cynical but entertaining novel of the seventeenth century is "Monsie... Janvier" written by Elizabeth Linington. It is the story of Ringan Montieth, youngest son of a proud Highland Chieftan, who after Culloden made a new life for himself in Paris. This is a story of how he sought revenge and almost lost his own soul. The book moves from Paris to England and to Scotland. It is a colorful novel and presents an interesting although not very pleasant picture of a man and an era. Elizabeth Linington has written several other good novels in the past few years and she is an author to watch.

The addiiotns to the non-fiction section this week have been varied and interesting. Two fascinating books dealing with the life of English Royalty are "Of Carriages and Kings" by Frederuck John Gorst and "My Twenty Years in Buckingham Palace" by F. J. Corbitt. The first book was written by a retired royal footman and gives a fascinating picutre of life as it was lived during the lush Edwardian period. The second was written by Mr. Corbitt who served as deputy comptroller of supply in the households of George V, Edward VII, George VI and Elizabeth II. if you want to know how a royal family lives, be sure to read one of these books.

The past of our country is always of interest and there are many readers who will welcome such books as "Last of the Great Outlaws", "The Story of Cole Younger" by Homer Crow, "Across the Cimarron" by James D. Horan which is the true story of the life of Marshall George Bold and his adventures in the cow towns of the wild west. "Fastest on the River" by Manly Wade Wellman is the thrilling account of the great steamboat race between the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee. All of these books are thrilling as well as informative.

Books of a humorous nature are "Further Fables For our Time" by James Thurber, "George Washington's Horse Slept Here" by Pauline McConnell and "Dear Mad'm" by Stella Walthal Patterson. This type of book is very popular and always finds a waiting public.

Biographies are always popular and this week we have three new ones on a variety of personalities. "A Journey to Greatness" by David Ewen deals with the life and music of George Gershwin and will be eagerly read by music lovers. 'De Lesseps of Suez" by Charles Beatty is a very well done account of the man who had the dream and the ingenuity to build the Suez canal. "The Tiger Wore Spikes" by John McCallum is an informal biography of Ty Cobb. Here is a truly wonderful study of baseball's most brilliant mind and performer and how the first man to be enshrined in the Hall of Fame revolutionized the game.

There are many hazardous occupations and today's books offer accounts of two of them. "The Hurricane Hunters" by Ivan Ray Tannehill is a lively story of the hair-raising experiences of the men who have probed by sea and air into the mysteries of the world's most terrible storms. How they have saved many lives and how they have risked their own in doing so makes an exciting book to read. "Gorilla Hunter" by Fred G. Merfield is the African adventures of an extraordinary hunter. Mr. Merfield has hunted wild animals in the French Cameroons for 35 years, but he is not a "sportsman." He is a profession hunter, collecting rare animals for museums and zoos and his specialty is the gorilla, the largest of the apes and one of the rarest. It is interesting to know how Mr. Merfield works and the hazards he faces each day he is in the bush.

These books and many more may be borrowed from your branch of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. If you are not using our resources now, we give you a hearty invitation to do so as soon as possible.

The Longest Second Is Suspense Novel

THE LONGEST SECOND By Bill S. Ballinger (Harper, $2.95). A suspense novel and one you won't put down until the final page.

When he woke up he had no idea who he was. Then, when he tried to talk and couldn't—he realized his throat had been cut.

When he grew stronger the police came to question him — and he answered by signs.

Finally he was able to leave the hospital and went out into New York City, armed with pad and pencil for communication, searching for his identity and some explanation for what had happened to him. He went first to see the woman, a young silversmith, on whose doorstep he had been lying after his injury, but he learned nothing — she had never seen him before she found him in front of her house. She was sympathetic, however, and took him in as an assistant and let him sleep in her basement.

With this security he began to hunt further into the past, and slowly, surprisingly, little things began to remind him of other things and with recollection came awareness of danger, danger that grew increasingly real as he moved on in his search.

Ingenious and tense, The Longest Second is loaded with the surprises.

List Boehm's Merits As A Conductor

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK —(UP)— Because Karl Boehm currently is making a big conductorial impression at the Metropolitan Opera, it is interesting to examine his merits as a symphonic conductor, which can be done readily in three recordings of his.

These are of Brahms' second symphony, with the Berlin Philharmonic (Decca-9933); of Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," with the Saxon State Orchestra (Decca-9927), and Beethoven's fifth symphony and Mozart's "Ein Kleine Nachtmusik" with the Berlin Philharmonic (Decca-9942).

The most telling thing that can be said is that the three records are as distinctly different as are the composers. There is no conduitorial imprint which carries from one to the others. This conductor eschews all effort for novelty rather than being dramatically an "interpreter." Brahms rarely sounds as Brahmsian as he does under Boehm's baton, nor Strauss so Straussian and so on. It is an inestimable conductorial virtue, which stands out impressively when his Brahms' second is conpared with another new recording by Rafael Kubelik and the Vienna Philharmonic (London-1699).

The fragile opera, Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," is preserved in all its fragility and shimmering beauty in a recorded performance with Andre Cluytens conducting the French National Orchestra and well-known singers with Victoria de los Angeles as Melisande. She couldn't get away with the part on the stage. Physically she is not at all ethereal. But she adapts her voice admirably to Melisande's essential qualities. Jacques Jansen as Pelleas and Gerard Souzay as Golaud are vital singers in vital (to the opera's appreciation) parts (Angel-3561C-L).

Maria Meneghini Callas' complete oper. recordings have reached such a number that it was inevitable they would have to include minor operas to continue. The minor is Bellini's "La Sonnambula," which Miss Callas recorded with singers, chorus, and orchestra of La Scala, Milan, with Antonino Voto conducting. People interested in opera as opera will get only sporadic pleasure from the complete "La Sonnambula." People enraptured by the art of Miss Callas will find it a great joy. Bellini's heroines and Bellini's great vocal lines fit her emotions and voice to a T (Angel-3568).

THE JUDGES' AWARDS — A. "Resting" won $25 for Joergen Hansen of Denmark; B. "Sunday Afternoon" was a $100 winner for Sara Charnis, New York City; C. "Young Fishermen" won $50 for Charles Kallay of Czechoslovakia the contest's first winner from behind the Iron Curtain; D. "Run for Cover" is the top award winner, bringing $2,000 to Tom Nebbia of Columbia, S. C.; E. "Eyewitness" was a $25 winner for Ake Engman of Sweden.

CONTEST

Selecting Photos Very Interesting

By JOHN OLDENBURG
Camera Editor

At a rather stormy but interesting session of the North Louisiana Camera Club Tueday evening, the same display of pictures as shown here was shown and each member asked to jot down his criticism. Then an open forum was held and almost as many ideas as members came up. Much was learned from dissecting the prize winners.

The following article by Irving Desfor, AP feature writer, is very informative and interesting. We are quoting the article exactly.

When more than 74,000 pictures are submitted from all over the world to a magazine photo contest in which $25,000 prize money is awarded, there is bound to be international camera fan interest when the winners are announced.

And the announcement usually is followed by debate and disagreement over the judges' selections.

As a judge in previous photo contests, I am only too well aware of the compromises which take place in a "smoke - filled room" in order to arrive at a "unanimous" choice. And the more judges, the more compromises usually have to be made.

The result of this contest is another indication of the wide differences in individual preferences.

As an experiment, I showed a set of five unmarked prints to half a dozen people. One print was the $2,000 winner. The others won minor prizes of $100, $50 or $25 each.

As long as there is no specific formula or certainty as to what makes a winning picture, camera fans should keep aiming for these big photo contests. If their picture is original in any degree and has a twist, perspective or angle that's only slightly different, some judge somewhere is liable to pin the blue ribbon on it.

P. S. "Run for Cover," the $2,000 prize winner in black - and-white was shot by Tom Nebbia of Columbia, S. C. A tiny child, dwarfed by giant trees, is shown sprinting for home as a storm threatens. It combines human interest, dramatic composition and technical excellence in the opinion of the judges.

THE SHORT STORY

Fifteen By Three Is Work Of 30 Writers

FIFTEEN BY THREE. By R. V. Cassill, Herbert Gold and James B. Hall. New Directions. $1.35.

LAST TALES. By Isak Dinesen. Random House. $4.

MOOLTIKI. By Rumer Godden. Viking. $3.50.

THE BEST SHORT STORIES OF FRANK R. STOCKTON SCRIBNER. $2.75.

THE BEST SHORT STORIES OF RING LARDNER. Scribner. $4.50.

About 30 writers are represented in these seven volumes by about 100 short stores and by many times that number of different topics, attitudes, subjects and incidents.

The short story is supposed to be rigidly unified, yet of course it invariably spills over. If one character speaks for the author, another must answer; if one acts for him, another must behave in contrary fashion. So here is an infinite variety:

The husband who cherishes a pinch of his wife's ashes, the youth who weds the daughter of the man whose head he hacked off, the poet who borrows the cloak of his wife's lover, the teacher who wouldn't marry the girl who instead becomes the Negro's wife, the faith of the aged Indian greater than that of the religious, the grocery boy in love, the lesson taught by the sacrifice of the black ram, the telltale unsmirched square of linen.

The last is from "The Blank Page," by that master of the short form, author of "Seven Gothic Tales," "Winter's Tales" and now "Last Tales:" Isak Dinesen, pseudonym for the Danish Baroness Karon Blixen. In it an old coffee - brown, black-veiled woman remembers how her grandmother taught her to tell stories: "Be loyal to the story," and demanded, "Where does one read a deeper tale than upon the most perfectly printed page of the most precious book?" She herself replied:

This precious blank page, the unrecorded part of the story, gives wings to the recorded part. Here are the invaluable implications, the super - values.

American Tradition

The short story is probably the commonest art form in this country, and we're expert at it. We may be Johnny - come - latelies on the cultural scene: somebody beat us to music, ballet, painting, sculpture, novel, drama. But if we may lay claim to any pioneering the arts, it is in three fields: We came first with the steel-frame skyscraper; with jazz-provided always jazz is art and isn't African; and we were very early, if not wholly first, thanks to Edgar Allen Poe, with the short story.

To be sure there was Boccaccio, but the 19th Century saw the real start of this flexible medium. Maupassant led in France, Chekhov in Russia, if he didn't and doesn't still lead in the entire world.

But we have been phenomenally prolific. We had the trick endings of Stockton "The Lady, or the Tiger?" and of O. Henry and Wilbur Daniel Steele; we had Lardner's merciless satires such as "Haircut" and 'The Golden Honeymoon." We have remarkable writers today: Hemingway is one, Truman Capote did "Miriam" and Shirley Jackson, "The Lottery."

But we have a weakness. We would rather play with the short story than work with it; it threatens to change from means of communication to pastime. We tell the story and forget about the essential blank page. We have reduced the short story on occasion to the short, short, thanks to our preference for getting through things rather than relishing them, for enjoying the abridgment in place of the entire opera or novel, the "highlights" of half a dozen symphonies instead of the irreducible substance of a single one.

The best short stories in the group listed at the start — all published within a couple of weeks — are curiously those with the freshest tone and their opposites: those with the most conservative.

Pursuit of Newness

Cassill, Gold and Hall are vivid, wide - awake, exploratory writers; they do not tell you what they think you want, or tell it in the familiar way. They dismiss the old, offer only the new, different and unused. They are, for me, better short story writers than novelists. Gold, for instance, writes with a freedom from restraint and a wonderful buoyancy that perhaps too much care, or too much devout working - over, may eliminate from his longer fiction.

"Fifteen by Three" has a positive, affirmatory value which fortunately is not diminished by the unnecessary emphasis, in James Laughlin's foreword — helpful though it is—and in Cassill's own introduction, on the supposed faults of what they castigate as the New Yorker magazine formula — a formula which after all has produced some memorable short stories in the last quarter century.

Along with this trio you will rate very highly the creations of Angus Wilson, involved though they are in a manner that seems more suitable for the longer novel; the work of Miss Godden, though it is certainly conventional in form; and the dozen gripping tales by Isak Dinesen, in a form about as old, stately and seductive as the minuet.

Memory Is An Asset In Any Line Of Work

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Meeting and talking with Doctor Bruno Furst, distinguished memory expert, was one of the most delightful and interesting experiences I have had. He and Mrs. Furst, herself an expert, estimate that they have about 80,000 students. This includes those in their New York City classes, at Brooklyn College, Denver University, the McGeorge College of Law in Sacramento, Calif., widely scattered adult education centers and thousands all over the world who learn through the correspondence course.

A lot of folks must want to remember a lot of things. Or more accurately, many people are smart enough to realize that one's efficiency and effectiveness in business and public relations, as well as success and happiness in social life and the home are diminished by the inability to remember.

Variety

Just to give you an idea of the variety in types and professions, the following is a list of pupils taken from the Furst's current classes: executives of all sorts, an office engineer, a manufacturer, an Oriental rug wholesale, a laboratory technician, a doctor, a legal stenographer, a registered nurse, a sales representative, a banker, an interior decorator, students, a real estate promoter, lawyers, teachers, an artist, a police sergeant, a hairdresser, a handwriting expert, a professional gambler in Las Vegas, a funeral dirctor, an insurance salesman, and lots of housewives. Then there are some famous alumni such as Red Buttons and Rear Admiral Redfield Mason, who won 100,000 dollars on a TV quiz program.

I asked Doctor Furst if one must have a superior or better than average intelligence in order to prform the feats in memory which his students are capable of after just 10 short weeks. He assured me that this is not so. He said, "Anyone who can read and write and will practice my technique can do it."

Doctor and Mrs. Furst are nothing like the baldheaded man who was selling hair tonic. They can identify all of their 500 New York City students by name one week after they enroll for the course. Doctor Furst also can shuffle a deck of cards, look at them for only a few seconds, and then give the sequence forward and backwards. I would hate to play bridge with him. As a matter of fact he does not play, probably because it would be an unfair advantage. He prefers chess.

At the end of 10 weeks, or 10 lessons, the Furst graduates can memorize the list of each page in a magazine in around 20 minutes, meet 40 to 50 strangers and remember their names, remember long lists, all sorts of dates, faces, and myriad other facts and information. It is really just short of magic.

Use Hooks

To put it simply, Doctor Furst said, "When you hang up your hat you put it on a hook. You must also put things you want to remember on hooks which you have established in your mind. Then when you want to pluck something from your mind you find the right hook and take it off."

This interview made me feel as though I am flying on one engine AND I could certainly use four!

This is seriously interesting to me because I believe so completely that the mind must be subjected to mental gymnastics of some sort if it is to remain youthful.

Tomorrow: 'Mrs. Housewife, a Good Memory is an Asset to you."

SOAP TO BURN

WATERLOO, N. Y .—(UP)— It was an awful mess when driver Roscoe Westbrook's truck blew a tire, causing a fire that destroyed the truck trailer and its cargo. Police said the 33,000 pounds of soap melted into a huge glob over the charred trailer.

General Practice Academy To Meet

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 23 (UP)—Subjects from heart disease and ulcers to fractures and hypnotized patients will be discussed at the American Academy of General Practice tenth annual scientific Assembly March 24-28.

The organization, from its Kansas City headquarters, said today that the assembly will be held in Dallas, and will be attended by more than 8,000 physicians, residents and interns.

More than 90 scientific and 300 technical exhibits will supplement the scientific lectures. The academy's policy-making Congress of Delegates will meet Saturday, March 22 at Dallas.

Wednesday, March 26, following induction ceremonies for academy President-elect Ho'lajd Jackson of Fort Worth, guests will attend a reception for Dr. Malcolm Phelps of El Reno, Okla., the organization's president.

Average sale price of milk cows on American farms was $165 a head in July, 1957, the highest price in the past four years.

IN RED WORLD

Khrushchev Blazing Awesome Trail

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
The Associated Press

Nikita Sergeyevich Khrushchev is blazing an awesome trail across the Communist firmament today. But nobody knows just how long Russia's political Sputnik can stay up there.

Informed betting is that one day, perhaps not too distant, he will fall with a resounding crash. But the Red boss, who now aspires to run the whole Communist world is less predictable than the scientific Sputnik, and far more dangerous to the free world.

At this moment, Khrushchev has more potential for mischief than Hitler before Munich. At times he sounds just as reckless as Hitler did. But for all his dazzling success, Khrushchev occupies a shaky throne. His trouble: He started too late. His biggest mistake was unavoidable. In the nervous days after Stalin, relaxations he introduced in a police state gave the people time to think.

Faces Contradictions

Khrushchev faces complex contradictions. Russia is a dictatorship, but no longer with an all-powerful dictator. Though he has taken most of the collective out of the collective leadership, Krushchev cannot return to total Stalin-like control. To avoid explosions, he had to destroy the hero-image of Stalin. But to preserve Communist party supremacy, he must describe himself today as a Stalinist.

Today's U.S.S.R. is not the backward, frightened country it was when Stalin axes his way to power through rivers of blood. Soviet society is coming out of its cocoon. From the regimented masses emerge individuals — scientists, engineers, technocrats, professional people.

Khrushchev feels their pressure. His rise to eminence was not so much through brute power as by a series of complicated maneuvers and cagey compromises. Khrushchev, the bold gambler, must make concessions. His authority still depends upon others.

Quite Man

For years Khrushchev was Russia's quiet man. But under Stalin all Politburo members were quiet. Khrushchev was efficient, reliable and pitiless, a valuable Stalin henchman. He was what the Russians would call a "sposobny chelovyek" — an able sort of fellow — but few would have chosen him as potential dictator.

With the old master in his tomb, Khrushchev soon shed the strong, silent man role, and showed himself strong and loud. Step by step he pushed to the threshhold of dictatorship, lumbering like an uninhibited bull elephant through Soviet and world politics, smiling and wheedling, scowling and threatening.

He is as noisy as Stalin was taciturn. He can look as benign as Stalin seemed sinister. Stalin's thundercloud scowls could hold the free world close together. Khrushchev's smiles might have the power to pull the free world apart.

Many came to look upon Khrushchev as an amiable buffoon, lurching in a happy alcoholic haze across the world political stage. British Labor party leader Clement Attlee, meeting Khrushchev in 1954, dismissed him as "a noisy chap."

Could Be Dangerous

Such appraisals could be dangerous. Khrushchev is one of the shrewdest of politicians, a rough and tumble Russian version of the American success story — the poor boy who made good in the big time.

Khrushchev can drink as freely as he sounds off. But when necessary, he can hold his liquor — and when necessary he can stick to fruit juice through an entire boisterous reception. Sober or otherwise, he manages to sound the same, barging from one guest to another, poking a stubby thumb into a startled listener's chest, making his points in rude, often vulgar, but singularly effective language.

He likes drinking almost as much as he likes talking. But he can be grim as well as gay, when he clamps steelrimmed spectacles firmly on his bottom nose and issues a threatening blast as he did last spring when he blamed the West for the Hungarian revolution.

Marvel At Bounce

Those who have watched Khrushchev perform marvel at his bounce. Short and stubby, about 5 feet 4, his 190 pounds are compressed into a squat bear-like figure. Only up close can one see the merest trace of white fuzz on a head which, in pictures, looks round and barren as a billiard ball. But for all his lack of hair, Khrushchev neither looks nor acts his 64 years. Correspondents find it tough to keep up with him.

"Me? tired?" he snorted to a reporter last spring. "Let me tell you something. Life is short. Live it. See all you can. Hear all you can. Go all you can. Tired? Of course not. I'm a strong man."

Only once in a while can the careful observer find a hint that the pace is rough for Khrushchev, too. Sometimes there is the trace of a grimace as if from some internal pain. Probably it is from the effects of an old kidney ailment. But Khrushchev doesn't let that stop him.

Khrushchev was born Apr. 17, 1894, in Kursk, which is near the Ukraine, and has had long association with that Soviet Republic. But he is pure Great Russian from head to toe, a living embodiment of the baffling contradictions which make up the Russian personality.

To the public Khrushchev is all bombast and braggadocio, antics and grins. If he has any soft side, it is as a family man. He is devoted to his surviving son, Serei, an electro-technical student, and to his daughters and grandchildren. Another son was killed in the war.

Khrushchev's wife is seldom seen in public. Those who have seen her say she is a motherly type, constantly clucking over her grandchildren, little interested in her husband's stormy politics.

Sentimental Or Cold

Like many Russians, Khrushchev can be emotionally sentimental and coldly ruthless at the same time. About his communism he has the look of a fanatic, completely sure of ultimate world victory. He pledges himself to the destruction of capitalism. His sentimental side probably tells him no matter how bloody the price, it is for mankind's good. Russians for centuries have been like that, nursing a sort of Messianic complex.

This is the man who likely aspires to be total dictator. But Khrushchev stands today where Stalin stood in 1927 in that era's power struggle. Stalin was only in his forties then. Time is against Khrushchev.

Khrushchev climbed to eminence over the corpses of Stalin's real or imaginary enemies. From obscure beginnings he rose through party organization ranks, bossed the Moscow party, vaulted to full Politburo membership. He emerged from the war a political lieutenant-general, bossed the Moscow in 1949, where his rivalry with Georgi Malenkov began. He pushed his way into domination of Soviet agriculture, tried to transform the farms into agricultural factories, went too far and was slapped down by Stalin in 1951.

Bounced Back

But Khrushchev bounced back. By the 19th party Congress in October, 1952, he was obviously an influential figure, probably fully ready for the power struggle which would begin with Stalin's death five months later.

Khrushchev's rise from then on was lighted by a series of brilliant explosions.

He shoved Malenkov out of the first secretaryship of the party in 1953, then out of the premiership in 1955. He shoved his plans for reorganization of Soviet economy down the throats of his rivals, then out-maneuvered and eliminated his rovals — Malenkov, V. M. Molotov, Lazar Kaganovich, Marshal Georgi Zhukov and many others. In his words, "we took the black sheep by the tails and threw them out."

But now he needed support. He spoke soothingly to the Soviet consumer:

"Would it be bad if we spread our Marxist-Leninist teachings with a piece of butter? I say that with a good bread spread like that Marxism-Leninism would be even more tasty."

He promised the consumers the U.S.S.R. would overtake American production of meat, milk, butter and consumer goods. But his mind was on Sputniks and missiles. At the recent Bolshevik Revolution anniversary festivities, he told the people they must wait at least seven years for enough consumer goods to satisfy their demands, at least 15 years to overtake American production.

Khrushchev's offensives against the West never stand still — and can be fairly effective, even while oozing an air of innocence.

As head of the B. and K. team—the B. Premier Nikolai Bulganin, always thoughtfully in the background — Khrushchev began his smiles offensive in 1955, with the visit of apology to Yugoslavia's Tito, begging forgiveness for Stalin's five-year propaganda war against the Yugoslavs. Bubbling with good spirits, Khrushchev astonished Belgrade by lurching about happily, chasing down the ladies and kissing their hands with the look of a country bumpkin playing gallant.

Roar Through Asia

B. and K. roared through South Asia, scattered propaganda all the way. Like an affable bear pawing for honey, Khrushchev lunged through Burma and India, caring little that his hosts were shocked at his manners and his propaganda.

"Truth is thorny and prickly for the eyes," he thundered when eyebrows were raised. He loves to throw proverbs at bewildered audiences.

Khrushchev dominated the U.S.S.R.'s 20th Communist party Congress, hurling blasts at deviationists and "utopian dreamers" who dared suggest the Soviet consumer deserved a better break. But his biggest blast was a secret speech which became known months later to the outside world.

Punctuating his marathon address with emotional sobs, Khrushchev denounced Stalin as a barbarian torturer, murderer and egomaniac inventor of "the cult of personality."

The Communist world still reeled from shock when Khrushchev was off again on another tour, this one to Britain. To his obvious astonishment, Britons received him cooly. British politicians out-finessed and enraged him. Accusing them of behaving piggishly, he unleashed proverbs like a Jupiter tossing thunderbolts.

"Call me a pot," he thundered, "but don't put me on the stove."

Hurt, he wondered why the British laughed so much when he cited an old "Russian" proverb: "Moscow wasn't built in a day."

AS CHRISTMAS NEARS

Bitterness Still At Little Rock

By RELMAN MORIN

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 23 (AP)—The red and green symbols of Christmas are gleaming in the streets of Little Rock but the city is still filled with bitterness, anxiety and racial tensions.

Exactly two months have passed since the riots at Central High School, and the incredible moment when federal troops crossed the Arkansas River to enforce integration in a Southern community.

Two long months. . . .

On the surface, some things have changed in Little Rock since then.

Underneath, however, the situation seems basically unchanged, so far as this correspondent can discover.

Fierce Feeling

The fierce feeling is still here. The segregationists are still determined to force the nine Negro children out of Central High School. The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People is still determined to keep them in school.

Between these two groups, the struggle has settled into an endurance contest, a long tug-of-war.

In the middle are the majority of Little Rock people—people who don't want integration but don't want mobs in the streets either.

The Negro children are now going to school without armed guards. They ride in their parents' automobiles.

For the first time, Negro parents recently attended a meeting of the Parents-Teachers Assn. There were no incidents

The Army is preparing to withdraw the rest of the 101st Airborne troops by Nov. 27. The federalized Arkansas National Guard has, in fact, taken over from the paratroopers already. Only token patrols guard the halls and grounds at the high school.

'Improved'

"Conditions at the school have gradually improved until, at the present time, there is a very satisfactory school program going on," says Virgil Blossom, superintendent of schools.

He said the average daily attendance is 1,800. Normal enrollment is approximately 2,000.

"There will be bloodshed if all troops are taken away from the school," says Mrs. Margaret Jackson, president of the Mothers League of Central High, a segregationist organization.

'There is a definite organization inside the school tryng to make life so unbearable that the Negro children will leave," says Mrs. L. C. Bates, Arkansas director of the NAACP.

Blossom denies Mrs. Bates' statement. Most Little Rock people disagree with Mrs. Jackson's view of the potential violence.

Mrs. Jackson says her organization is growing and that the determination of the segregationists is firmer than ever. She claims between 400 and 500 members although, under a new city ordinance requiring organizations to register their membership and finances, the Mothers League reported 163 members.

Similarly, Mrs. Bates said the Negroes in Little Rock have become more militant in the past two months.

"People who before were simply paying their dues but taking no positive part are now volunteering to work, asking for things to do, offering money," she said.

"Effect of all this has been to crystallize the Negro community. It has brought wonderful unity among our people. They want to work now, to act."

Resentment High

Mrs. Jackson said, "There is great resentment against the Negroes inside the school. The white children are determined to get them out of there."

Mrs. Bates said, "The Negro children are being bullied and harassed to try to force them to leave. But they're not going to give in."

To reports that some of the nine were about ready to quit, she said, "Absolutely untrue. They've got too much of themselves invested in this now."

White children in the school said there were a few boys and girls who heckle and threaten the Negroes. But they said they did not believe it is an organized group. "The majority of us aren't trying to get them to leave," a girl student said. "Some of the kids ignore them, but I think most of us don't care, one way or another."

Negro Hit

A Negro boy, Jefferson Thomas, was knocked down by a white boy recently. The white boy's name was not made public.

You get every shade of version of that incident—all the way from the one that four white boys carefully planned it, to the other that Thomas accused his assilant of insulting a Negro girl. And there are other versions in between.

So it is, too, with the significance of the recent Little Rock elections.

Early this month, the voters elected seven directors to serve as a City Council and to choose a city manager, replacing ex-Mayor Woodrow Mann.

The "Good Government Council," which did not take a positive position on integration, won six of the seven seats in a race with a slate of outright segregationists.

Was that a setback for the segregationists

Few people think so. As Gov. Orval Faubus said, "The GGC should have had a 3-1 margin. Their candidates were well known, well financed and they had been campaigning for a year. The segregationists were largely unknown yet they won one seat and came within a hair of winning them all."

Khrushchev Blazing Awesome Trail

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
The Associated Press

Nikita Sergeyevich Khrushchev is blazing an awesome trail across the Communist firmament today. But nobody knows just how long Russia's political Sputnik can stay up there.

Informed betting is that one day, perhaps not too distant, he will fall with a resounding crash. But the Red boss, who now aspires to run the whole Communist world is less predictable than the scientific Sputnik, and far more dangerous to the free world.

At this moment, Khrushchev has more potential for mischief than Hitler before Munich. At times he sounds just as reckless as Hitler did. But for all his dazzling success, Khrushchev occupies a shaky throne. His trouble: He started too late. His biggest mistake was unavoidable. In the nervous days after Stalin, relaxations he introduced in a police state gave the people time to think.

Faces Contradictions

Khrushchev faces complex contradictions. Russia is a dictatorship, but no longer with an all-powerful dictator. Though he has taken most of the collective out of the collective leadership, Khrushchev cannot return to total Stalin-like control. To avoid explosions, he had to destroy the hero-image of Stalin. But to preserve Communist party supremacy, he must describe himself today as a Stalinist.

Today's U.S.S.R. is not the backward, frightened country it was when Stalin axes his way to power through rivers of blood. Soviet society is coming out of its cocoon. From the regimented masses emerge individuals — scientists, engineers, technocrats, professional people.

Khrushchev feels their pressure. His rise to eminence was not so much through brute power as by a series of complicated maneuvers and cagey compromises. Khrushchev, the bold gambler, must make concessions. His authority still depends upon others.

Quite Man

For years Khrushchev was Russia's quiet man. But under Stalin all Politburo members were quiet. Khrushchev was efficient, reliable and pitiless, a valuable Stalin henchman. He was what the Russians would call a "sposobny chelovyek" — an able sort of fellow — but few would have chosen him as potential dictator.

With the old master in his tomb, Khrushchev soon shed the strong, silent man role, and showed himself strong and loud. Step by step he pushed to the threshhold of dictatorship, lumbering like an uninhibited bull elephant through Soviet and world politics, smiling and wheedling, scowling and threatening.

He is as noisy as Stalin was taciturn. He can look as benign as Stalin seemed sinister. Stalin's thundercloud scowls could hold the free world close together. Khrushchev's smiles might have the power to pull the free world apart.

Many came to look upon Khrushchev as an amiable buffoon, lurching in a happy alcoholic haze across the world political stage. British Labor party leader Clement Attlee, meeting Khrushchev in 1954, dismissed him as "a noisy chap."

Could Be Dangerous

Such appraisals could be dangerous. Khrushchev is one of the shrewdest of politicians, a rough and tumble Russian version of the American success story — the poor boy who made good in the big time.

Khrushchev can drink as freely as he sounds off. But when necessary, he can hold his liquor — and when necessary he can stick to fruit juice through an entire boisterous reception. Sober or otherwise, he manages to sound the same, barging from one guest to another, poking a stubby thumb into a startled listener's chest, making his points in rude, often vulgar, but singularly effective language.

He likes drinking almost as much as he likes talking. But he can be grim as well as gay, when he clamps steelrimmed spectacles firmly on his bottom nose and issues a threatening blast as he did last spring when he blamed the West for the Hungarian revolution.

She claims between 400 and 500 members although, under a new city ordinance requiring organizations to register their membership and finances, the Mothers League reported 163 members.

Similarly, Mrs. Bates said the Negroes in Little Rock have become more militant in the past two months.

"People who before were simply paying their dues but taking no positive part are now volunteering to work, asking for things to do, offering money," she said.

"Effect of all this has been to crystallize the Negro community. It has brought wonderful unity among our people. They want to work now, to act."

Resentment High

Mrs. Jackson said, "There is great resentment against the Negroes inside the school. The white children are determined to get them out of there."

Mrs. Bates said, "The Negro children are being bullied and harassed to try to force them to leave. But they're not going to give in."

To reports that some of the nine were about ready to quit, she said, "Absolutely untrue. They've got too much of themselves invested in this now."

White children in the school said there were a few boys and girls who heckle and threaten the Negroes. But they said they did not believe it is an organized group. "The majority of us aren't trying to get them to leave," a girl student said. "Some of the kids ignore them, but I think most of us don't care, one way or another."

Negro Hit

A Negro boy, Jefferson Thomas, was knocked down by a white boy recently. The white boy's name was not made public.

You get every shade of version of that incident—all the way from the one that four white boys carefully planned it, to the other that Thomas accused his assilant of insulting a Negro girl. And there are other versions in between.

So it is, too, with the significance of the recent Little Rock elections.

Early this month, the voters elected seven directors to serve as a City Council and to choose a city manager, replacing ex-Mayor Woodrow Mann.

The "Good Government Council," which did not take a positive position on integration, won six of the seven seats in a race with a slate of outright segregationists.

Was that a setback for the segregationists

Few people think so. As Gov. Orval Faubus said, "The GGC should have had a 3-1 margin. Their candidates were well known, well financed and they had been campaigning for a year. The segregationists were largely unknown yet they won one seat and came within a hair of winning them all."

MONROE MORNING WORLD

November 24, 1957

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. John Woodbury Brown of West Monroe of the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Dixie Norieta Brown, to Elvis Collins Stout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Stout. The ceremony will be held Tuesday evening, December 17, in the First Baptist Church of West Monroe at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Barbara Burlingham's engagement to James Rodney Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Joseph Parker, of Joaquin, Texas, is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Nathan Burlingham of this city. The wedding will be an event of December 15, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at St. Paul's Methodist Church with a reception following the ceremony in the social rooms of the church.

Photographed in the home of Mrs. Louis Masur, Jr., was this group of ardent workers for the Ouachita Parish Society for Crippled Children and Adults. They are shown planning the annual Christmas Party to be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall. From the left, Miss Armandine Renaud, who is in charge of the entertainment, Mrs. E. A. Porter, general chairman and Mrs. Masur, Christmas Party, chairman.

The First Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding last night of Miss Jamey Poulan and Cecil Calvin Belgard, Jr. After a short honeymoon they will make their home in Manhatten, Kansas, where Mr. Belgard is stationed with the U. S. Army.

Myriads of golden yellow chrysanthemums and lighted yellow tapers decorated the First Baptist Church Saturday evening for the marriage of Miss Jamey Poulan to Cecil Calvin Belgard, Jr. The bride is the daugh'er of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thomas Poulan of this city and Mr. Belgard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil C. Belgard, of Colfax. Reverend James T. Horton heard their vows at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. B. D. Allbritton, at the organ and Dale Martha soloist, provided the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of lace and tulle. The moulded bodice of lace was finished with a Sabrina neckline touched with pearls and sequins, and long lace sleeves ending in points at the wrists. The very full skirt was designed with front panel of pleated tulle festooned with side flounces of galloon lace drifting into a chapel train. A Juliet cap of lace studded with pearls and sequins held her veil of illusion. She carried a white Bible with while orchid and stephanotis bouquet.

Mrs. William Phillips was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Mary Evelyn Belgard, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Thad Ouchley. Their gowns of iridescent taffeta were in sun shades of gold. Cognac trimmed the low necklines and the large bows at the back with streamers extending to the hemline. Their slippers matched their dresses and in their hair they wore gold chrysanthemums. They carried cascade bouquets of bronze colored mums.

Mr. Belgard was his son's best man. Groomsmen and ushers included, Tommy Poulan, Robert Wakefield, Robert Murrell Johnson and John B. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Poulan were hosts following the ceremony at their home on Orange street. Mrs. Poulan was wearing a gown of champagne lace over satin made along slim lines with short sleeves and a scooped neckline. Matching satin formed an Empire bodice ending in a bow in the back. Her hat and shoes were of matching satin and her corsage bouquet of talisman roses.

Mrs. Belgard chose for her son's wedding, a gown of blue lace and taffeta worn with matching shoes and bag and a feathered hat. Heer corsage was of talisman roses.

White flowers were used about the reception rooms and white chrysanthemums and white grapes in a large crystal basket formed the centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with a white satin cloth overlaid with net ruffles. Lighted tapers were placed at either side of the arrangement. Mrs. W. A. Cornett and Mrs. Earl Vigg took turns at pouring punch and Mrs. Madison Phillips, aunt of the bride, served the frosted tiered wedding cake. She was assisted by Mrs. Forrest Seaman, Mrs. Dick Brothers and Mrs. Frank Reitzell in serving.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. A. D. Love, Mrs. Mattie Love, Mrs. F. S. Love all of Houston, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dean, Miss Barbara Nell Dean, Jerry Dean of Crossett, Arkansas, Mr. and Mrs. David Burk, Mrs. Mamie Burk, Mr. and Mrs. Wytt Burk, Mrs. Virginia Smith, Mr. Phil Smith, all of Rayville.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Nezat, Mr. Richard Nezat of Cantonment, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Barnes, Calhoun; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clifton, Minden, Mr. and Mrs. William Timon, Natchitoches, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Poulan, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Poulan, Harry Poulan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Poulan, Mrs. Retta Poulan, Miss Helene Poulan, Mr. Hilton Hanson, all of Shreveport; Miss Ursula Herrin, Marvin Dossett, Miss Annie Laura Lee, Miss June Wood, Miss Kathleen Wilkerson, Miss Merrianna Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Van Rompei, Lewis Salmon, Rex Crowell, Miss Betty Corbell, of Shreveport.

DR. AND MRS. NEIL BUIE have returned from a week in Houston as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Downs. Part of their visit was spent on a hunting party at the Down's camp near Houston.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID NORMANN and four children, Susan, David, Louise and Bobby will be the holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leigh in their home on Grand Street. The Normanns will arrive Wednesday. This will be Bobby's first visit to his grandparents.

MRS. HAYDN CUTLER is now at home in her new home at 2772 Point Drive. Miss Diana Cutler arrives this Wednesday from Newcomb and will have her roommate as a guest through Sunday.

AMONG THE EARLY ARRIVALS for the Fortner-McHenry wedding this Friday are Mr. and Mrs. Grant Thomas and children, Joe, Carl and Ann of Charleston, West Virginia. Mrs. Thomas will act as matron of honor to her sister and Ann will be the flower girl. Also arriving today will be Mr. and Mrs. William Nadler, of Placquemine.

HOME FOR THE FIRST TIME since entering the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa will be Miss Helen Theus, who will spend the holidays with her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Theus in their home on the Loop Road. Helen is a freshman at the University and a Pi Phi pledge.—Not coming for the holidays will be Miss Sue Stubbs who is spending the vacation with a group of Sweetbriar classmates at the Biltmore Hotel in New York. They will see the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia on Saturday. Sue's last weekend was a particularly exciting one as she was on hand for the Princeton-Yale game and was the guest at the Ivy Club for the festivities following the game at Princeton.

GEORGE SNELLINGS III, with two Tulane classmates, Dale Mackie and Louis de La Vergne will come up Wednesday for Thanksgiving with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Snellings, Jr. They will go to Baton Rouge Saturday for the L.S.U.-Tulane game and return to New Orleans from there. Going down with them will be Mr. and Mrs. Snellings and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McDonald with their son Hugh Jr., a L.S.U. student.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD DALTON have returned from a weeks visit in Oklahoma City as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Turner. Mr. and Mrs. Turner will arrive here this week and will take possession of their home on Lakeside Drive for the holiday season.

MR. AND MRS. BENTON WAKEFIELD will have as guests this week her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Walton of Jackson, Miss. Arriving Thursday for the day, will be Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carmichael and young daughter, Chris. Mr. Wakefield's parents and sister and family. They are also from Jackson.

Myriads of golden yellow chrysanthemums and lighted yellow tapers decorated the First Baptist Church Saturday evening for the marriage of Miss Jamey Poulan to Cecil Calvin Belgard, Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thomas Poulan of this city and Mr. Belgard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil C. Belgard, of Colfax. Reverend James T. Horton heard their vows at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. B. D. Allbritton, at the organ and Dale Martha soloist, provided the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of lace and tulle. The moulded bodice of lace was finished with a Sabrina neckline touched with pearls and sequins, and long lace sleeves ending in points at the wrists. The very full skirt was designed with front panel of pleated tulle festooned with side flounces of galloon lace drifting into a chapel train. A Juliet cap of lace studded with pearls and sequins held her veil of illusion. She carried a white Bible with white orchid and stephanotis bouquet.

Mrs. William Phillips was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Mary Evelyn Belgard, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Thad Ouchley. Their gowns of iridescent taffeta were in sun shades of gold. Cognac trimmed the low necklines and the large bows at the back with streamers extending to the hemline. Their slippers matched their dresses and in their hair they wore gold chrysanthemums. They carried cascade bouquets of bronze colored mums.

Mr. Belgard was his son's best man. Groomsmen and ushers included, Tommy Poulan, Robert Wakefield, Robert Murrell Johnson and John B. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Poulan were hosts following the ceremony at their home on Orange street. Mrs. Poulan was wearing a gown of champagne lace over satin made along slim lines with short sleeves and a scooped neckline. Matching satin formed an Empire bodice ending in a bow in the back. Her hat and shoes were of matching satin and her corsage bouquet of talisman roses.

Mrs. Belgard chose for her son's wedding, a gown of blue lace and taffeta worn with matching shoes and bag and a feathered hat. Heer corsage was of talisman roses.

White flowers were used about the reception rooms and white chrysanthemums and white grapes in a large crystal basket formed the centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with a white satin cloth overlaid with net ruffles. Lighted tapers were placed at either side of the arrangement. Mrs. W. A. Cornett and Mrs. Earl Vigg took turns at pouring punch and Mrs. Madison Phillips, aunt of the bride, served the frosted tiered wedding cake. She was assisted by Mrs. Forrest Seaman, Mrs. Dick Brothers and Mrs. Frank Reitzell in serving.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. A. D. Love, Mrs. Mattie Love, Mrs. F. S. Love all of Houston, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dean, Miss Barbara Nell Dean, Jerry Dean of Crossett, Arkansas, Mr. and Mrs. David Burk, Mrs. Mamie Burk, Mr. and Mrs. Wytt Burk, Mrs. Virginia Smith, Mr. Phil Smith, all of Rayville.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Nezat, Mr. Richard Nezat of Cantonment, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Barnes, Calhoun; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clifton, Minden, Mr. and Mrs. William Timon, Natchitoches, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Poulan, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Poulan, Harry Poulan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Poulan, Mrs. Retta Poulan, Miss Helene Poulan, Mr. Hilton Hanson, all of Shreveport; Miss Ursula Herrin, Marvin Dossett, Miss Annie Laura Lee, Miss June Wood, Miss Kathleen Wilkerson, Miss Merrianna Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Van Rompei, Lewis Salmon, Rex Crowell, Miss Betty Corbell, of Shreveport.

MISS RUBY LUCILLE CASSEL

Miss Cassel To Be Bride In January

Announcement is made by Mrs. Harold F. Welborn, of Fort Necessity, of the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Ruby Lucille Cassel to George C. Greer. The vows will be solemnized at 7 o'clock in the evening of January 3, in the Trinity Baptist Church, of West Monroe. A reception will follow in the church parlors.

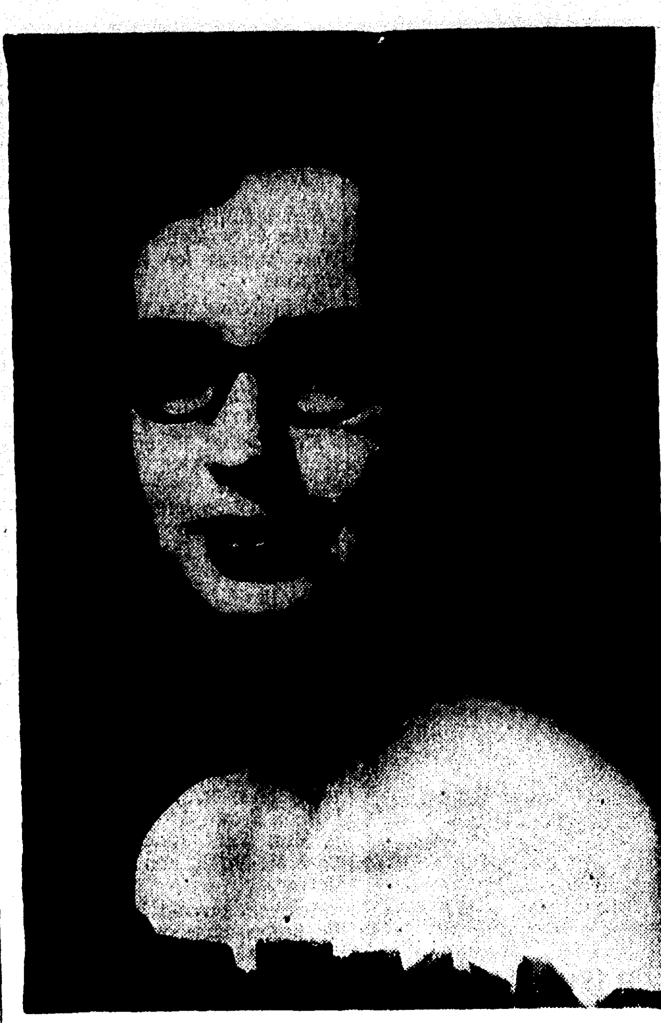
Miss Cassel is the daughter of Mr. Ike L Cassel, of Shreveport and the parents of the bridegroom to-be are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon G. Greer, of West Monroe.

The bride is a graduate of Fort Necessity High School, and the granddaughter of Mrs. R E. Fisher and the late M . Fisher and the late Mr. and Mrs. George Cassel, all of Converse.

Mr. Greer was graduated from West Monroe High School and attended Northeast State College. He is the grandson of Mrs. C U. Smith and the late Rev. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Greer both of Mississippi.

They have selected Miss Eyvonne Greer, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor and another sister, Miss Shirley Greer, Miss Gwen Duncan, Miss Maralyn Gilmore, of Vidalia, and Miss Nelda Horn as bridesmaids.

William Steed will be the best man and the groomsmen and ushers will include Neal Duncan, James Stricklin, Ronnie Sanford and Raymond Bullock.



MISS ELIZABETH ANN MCEACHARN

Miss McEacharn Is Betrothed To Larry Bonner

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Ann McEacharn, to Larry Veigh Bonner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Renzo Bonner, of Hartsville, Tenn., is announced today by her mother, Mrs. Russell McEacharn, of Delhi.

The wedding will be solemnized at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of December 21 in the Delhi Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Sanders and Neal McEacharn, both of Delhi. She is a graduate of Delhi High School and attended Northeast State College.

Mr. Bonner's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs J. L. Patrick of Alabama. He attended Tennessee Polytechnic Institute and is now a student at Northeast College.

Miss Jeanette Kennedy will be the only attendant to the bride and Douglas Bonner will act as his brother's best man. Ushers will be Cecil Bonner, of Reform, Ala., and Fred McEacharn, Freeport, Tex.

To press shirts which have writing on the back, place a large folded bath towel under the shirt and iron on wrong side. The letters will stand out.

NOVEL PLACE MATS

You can make novel place setting mats out of prefinished hardboard. The material is available in a range of marble patterns, wood grains and plain colors, offering a wide choice for a distinctive and suitable appearance. Foods and drinks cannot harm the paneling's baked plastic surface, and it is easily wiped clean with a damp cloth. The mat may be used like a tray as the hardboard is stiff enough for that purpose.

FLAME RETARDANT

A new flame retardant is packaged in 13 - ounce aerosol spray push - button cans and may be used for the protection of drapes, and party decorations.

Children Find It's Fun To Give As Well As Get

If you've trained youl child to be generous, it's a good idea to demonstrate appreciation for that tiny Christmas gift. Some moth ers are so overwhelmed with the big gift from that giant-sized Santa Claus, Dad, that they are likely to ignore the smaller remembrances that come their way.

It's a good idea to guide a youngster in Christmas gift selections, rather than upbraiding her for buying gifts that do not mean anything. Sit down with her before she begins to shop and help her with a list. You can steer her to all the gifts that are appropriate by suggesting them. When it comes to your own, a little gentle hint like "do you know what I hope Santa brings me" should do the trick.

There are some worth while stocking stuffers within a child's budget, and these are perked up to look exactly like a gift that a child would select.

An enchanting little dancer wearing a ballet skirt of swansdown and a little jeweled cap turns out to have original French perfume in its vial. The fragrances are to suit the personality of the wearer, and the little tot can decide whe'her she wants to choose brilliant pink "danger" for her Mom or a sky - blue "new horizons" scent.

There are those perfect gifts for grandma, prettily packaged sweet smelling and appropriate to the season — scented soap, sachet, dusting powder, colognes

Suggestions for little - girl pals might include one charming gift set that contains a make believe flavored lip pomade and a tinted powder compact in strawberry and cream hues. There are the bubble baths that a[illegible]al to any little girl and younger set toiletries in special packages that fold into doll houses. Soaps for the younger set include angels, Hansel and Gretal, baseball and [illegible]her's mitt, clowns on cord that may be put around the neck in the tub, seaside motifs — shells, starfish and fish, delicately colored, all packaged to please a small child's eye.

WORD OF CAUTION

If you are planning to [illegible] a television set in a wall installation, engineers urge that you seek professional advice. The possibility of a heat or fire hazard due to lack of essential air circulation may be avoided if you get the proper advice.

Miss Doris Virginia Brown will be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids will include Mrs. Morris P. Albritton, Mrs. Wade L. Fincher, Mrs. John M. Drouet, Jr., Miss Patsy Davis and Miss Jane Moore. John Ellen Brown, niece of the bride-elect will act as flower girl. Her nephew Danny Jay Edwards will be ring bearer.

Oscar E. Cloyd is to be the best man and the groomsmen and ushers, Talmadge Stout, brother of the bridegroom, Ike Hamilton, John M. Drouet, Jr., Bobby Joe Oden and Ralph Norman.

Miss Brown is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Putnam Williamson and the late Mr. and Mrs. John W. Brown, of this city. She is a graduate of West Monroe High School and Northeast State College.

Mr. Stout is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High School and is attending Northeast State College. His grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. John Albert Lingle and Mrs. J. W. Stout and the late Mr. Stout, of Delhi.

Welcome Book Club Meets With Mrs. A. S. Gunter

Chrysanthemums in bright fall shades decorated the pine-paneled recreation room in the home of Mrs. A. S. Gunter on Auburn Avenue when the Welcome Book club met for the November meeting. Mrs. E. Everett Lawson was the assisting hostess.

The president, Mrs. V. S. Garnett, called the meeting to order and presided over the business session. Club members present joined with Mrs. Ben Oliphint in the pledge to the flag and were led by Mrs. Henson S. Coon in the reading of the collect. A new member, Mrs. George Raymond, was accepted for membership. The president called attention to the display of dolls which had been dressed for the Salvation Army Christmas gifts by club members.

The program chairman, Mrs. J. Norman Coon, presented the program for the afternoon on the subject Home and Community. Two poems from "Notes From Beauty's Lyre" written by Adelaide Long Lawson, were read by the program chairman. These poems were "Shrine" and 'Hymn For Pioneer Fathers.

The book review for the program was given by Mrs. F. H. Pe erson, a reveiwer who possesses skill and talent. Mrs. Peterson in her review of "Three Saints and A Sinner" by Louise Hall Tharp, said in part, "in this book we find a composite biography of four members of a famous family, the Wards of Boston and New York." It is sad to be the best Miss Tharp has written.

The hostesses served cake, coffee and salted nuts during the enjoyable conversational hour. In addition to the hostesses, members present were: Mrs. L. F. Bewick, Mrs. F. E. Black, Mrs. R. L. Carson, Mrs. Henson S. Coon, Mrs. J. Norman Coon, Mrs. O. O. Cummings, Mrs. V. S. Garnett, Mrs. J. G. Hicks, Mrs. Ben R. Oliphint, Mrs. F. H. Peterson, Mrs. J. D. Petty, Mrs. E. A. Porter, Mrs. George M. Rorex, Mrs. Dean Selig, Mrs. A. J. Speer, Mrs. L. V. Tarver and Mrs. E. M. Vandiver.

Two Parties Fete Bride On Friday

A bridesmaids luncheon Friday, honored Miss Jamey Poulan, whose marriage to Cecil Belgard, Jr., was solemnized last night in the First Baptist Church. Mrs. Claude Poulan, aunt of the bride, was hostess and the party was held at the Frances Hotel where flowers in autumn shades centered the table. Included with the honoree were her mother, Mrs. Henry Poulan, Mrs. Cecil Belgard, mother of the bridegroom, Miss Mary Evelyn Belgard, Miss Becky Phillips, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Clara Seaman, Mrs. Hattie Phillips, and Miss Thad Ouchly.

Mr. and Mrs. Belgard were hosts at supper following the wedding rehearsal that evening. The party was held at the Holiday Inn and the T shaped table, where the guests were seated, was centered with a wedding ring tree with clusters of valley lilies extending down the table. The guest included with the bridal couple were the wedding party, members of the two families, and a few close friends.

MISS MARY PATRICIA WELCH is the bride-elect of Francis Gray Pirnique, son of Mrs. E. R. Bowman and the late Dr. A. F. Pirnique, of Little Rock, Ark. Miss Welch is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos O. Welch. The marriage will be solemnized on Friday, December 27, at 4 o'clock in the Memorial Methodist Church. A reception will follow in the church parlors.

EMILY POST

Emily Post Answers Many Of Reader's Questions

QUESTION: I would like to send a Christmas card to my employer but do not know whether to send it to Mr. alone or to Mr. and Mrs. His wife is unknown to me. Will you please tell me what is proper?

Mrs. Post: You send your card to Mr. alone because you do not know Mrs.

Question: When taking a young woman to a dance at a hotel, what is the proper thing to do upon arrival? That is, should the young man let her out of the car at the entrance to the hotel and then park the car, or should he take her with him while he parks and then both walk back to the hotel together?

Mrs. Post: If he has to go any distance to park the car — and especially if the weather is bad —then he would let her out at the hotel. But if the weather is good and the parking space nearby, he would take her with him while he parks the car and enter the hotel with her. (In many places there are men especially hired to park the guests' cars for them. In this case they both get out at the entrance of the hotel.)

Question: I have just received an invitation to the golden wedding anniversary of an aunt and uncle of mine. The invitation has R.s.v.p. on it. I would like to know if it would be permissible to telephone my acceptance or must it be acknowledged by hand?

Mrs. Post: You may properly telephone your acceptance of the invitation.

Question: My husband and I have been invited to a double wedding. The brides are twin sisters. I would like to know if we are obliged to send two wedding presents?

Mrs. Post: If you know better and have always shown that you care more for one of the sisters one present to your favorite will be sufficient. Otherwise you will have to give one to each bride.

Question: My husband and I have just moved into a new apartment and I was thinking of having a housewarming. I have been to'd that this type of party is given only when moving into a new house. Will you please tell me if this is true?

Mrs. Post: As the apartment is new to you, you can certainly give a housewarming to show it to your friends.

Question: I am faced with the problem of having to write a letter of resignation to a club of which I have been a member for the past five years. Will you please tell me to whom the letter should be written and how it is worded?

ANSWER: A letter of resignation is written to the secretary of the club and follows this general pattern: "My dear Mrs. Blank, It is with regret that I must ask you to present my resignation at the next meeting of the Board of Governors, since I am moving to Fartown shortly after the first of next month." (It is more polite to give the reason if possible.) You sign the note, "Very sincerely, Mary Jones."

Question: Is it proper to typewrite the address on Christmas cards or must they be addressed by hand?

Mrs. Post: They should be addressed by hand.

Question: The other afternoon I invited some women friends in to play bridge. As I wanted this to be an especially nice bridge party I went to great pains in preparing refreshments, making all sorts of fancy sandwiches and cakes. Much to my chagrin hardly any of these refreshments were eaten — three of the women would not touch one single thing as they were dieting. I was very much annoyed over this and think that they were very rude. When the hostess goes to the trouble and expense of preparing refreshments, the least her guests can do is to forget their diets this once and eat something. Don't you agree, Mrs. Post, that they were very inconsiderate?

Mrs. Post: It is very disappointing to the hostess not to have her guests eat the delicious food she has prepared, but the unfortunate people who have to diet know that going off their diet can cancel days of abstinence. It is a good idea for every hostess to keep this in mind when giving a party and have some low calorie foods so that those who are dieting can eat something.

Question: I am writing to ask you a question that has been on my mind for some time. Would you be so kind as to tell me the correct way to write the suffix "second" after a name. I have asked two of the leading stationers here and have received conflicting answers. One said that it is written "2nd," and the other said that the Roman numeral was correct. Will you please set me straight on this?

Mrs. Post: "2nd" is in best taste. Roman numerals after a name suggest a dynasty.

Question: I received an invitation to a party and I know the occasion is a wedding anniversary even though no mention has been made of it. Ought I take a present?

Mrs. Post: Since there will be others who are likely not to know beforehand of the anniversary, it might make them uncomfortable should they see that you have brought a present. If, on the other hand, you want to send a remembrance, it would be best to send it to the house before the party.

Do you use linen tab'ecloths or mats for a formal dinner or luncheon? The centerpiece, linen, and silver are described in Mrs. Post's booklet No. 504, "The Etiquette of Table Setting." Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. To obtain a copy, send 25 cents in coin to Dept. EP, c-o this paper, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Is it good manners to break crackers into soup? How should baked potato be eaten? Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail. Answers to these questions are included in leaflet E-16, "Table Rules of Importance." To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to Dept. EP c-o this paper, P. O. Bo 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Thanksgiving Motif Used By Garden Club

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. W. Montgomery. The club collect was then read in unison by all members. A short business session was presided over by the president.

Mrs. Luther Branch introduced Mr. L. L. Price of Northeast State College, guest speaker. Mr. Price gave an interesting and informative lecture on "Landscape Designing and Planning Composition."

The beautiful table decorations, which were in the Thanksgiving motif, were arranged by Mrs. Luther Branch.

Refreshments were served by the following hostesses: Mrs. J. W. Golson, Mrs. J. C. Anders, Mrs. Lela King Breard, Mrs. A. R. Bates, Mrs. Prevost Craighead, Mrs. R. W. Bandy, Mrs. J. Blain Brown, Mrs. Joseph Mickel, Mrs. W. R. Laing, Mrs. Margaret M. Smith, and Mrs. George Mercer.

Members present in addition to the hostesses were: Mrs. Milton Ford, Mrs. Floyd Mathews, Mrs. F. Pettit, Mrs. Robert Cowden, Mrs. Phillip Bernhardt, Mrs. E. A. Porter, Mrs. W. T. Simpson, Mrs. Sam Futrell, Mrs. R. B. Henry, Mrs. Luther Branch, Mrs. H. G. Thompson, Mrs. R. M. Kettering, Mrs. M. W. Montgomery, Mrs. Bill Feazel, Mrs. William B. Bartlett, Mrs. Vance Rhodes, Mrs. Sam Humphries, Mrs. Victor Kelley, Mrs. Charles Chisholm, Mrs. Icy Willis, Mrs. William E. Kramer, Mrs. Norman Jardine and one guest, Mrs. Howell Heard.

Mrs. Breard Is Speaker For Garden Club

The November meeting of the Sun and Sand Garden Club was held in the attractive home of Mrs. H. A. Malone with Mrs. Francella BeDoit assisting as cohostess. There were several lovely fall flower arrangements.

A very brief business meeting was presided over by the club president, Mrs. Van Clark.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Kent Breard, gave a most interesting talk and demonstration on 'Table Settings and Arrangements." Her discussion was further highlighted by an actual presentation of different pieces of china, silver and linens and their relation in value to each other.

Home Ceremony Unites Couple

Wednesday night, at seven oclock, at the home of the brides' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Roberts, in the Hudson community, Miss Sue Roberts was united in marriage to Julius Crawford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Crawford of the Jordan Hill community. The Rev. T. L. Rhymes read the double ring service.

Vows were exchanged in a setting of pink gladioli, ivy and white candles. The bride was gowned in an aqua suit with which she wore matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. The brides' table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a lovely arrangement of pink gladioli. At one end stood a beautiful four tiered cake, iced in white and edged in pink. Opposite was a crystal punch bowl. Mrs. T. L. Rhymes and Mrs. Myrtle Montgomery served; Miss Ann Roberts, sister of the bride, registered the guests. Later in the evening the couple left on a honeymoon to points in Tennessee and Alabama. Upon their return they will be at home with the bridegrooms' parents.

LaVingt Club Entertained By Mrs. R. Carson

Mrs. Robert L. Carson was hostess to members of the La Vingt Club in her home on Pargoud Blvd. on Wednesday afternoon.

The vice-president, Mrs. George Phebus, led the members in the reading of the club collect, and presided over the business session in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. D. Bernhardt.

The secretary, Mrs. William Crow, read the minutes of the previous meeting, and a letter of resignation from Mrs. W. T. Goward, who has moved from Monroe. Mrs. J. Tigner Conger was welcomed as a new member of the club.

The program chairman, Mrs. D. E. Bivins, Jr., introduced Mr. William O. Smith, visiting psychologist for the Monroe Area Guidance Center, who talked to the club on mental health and psychiatry. He explained that the shell shock cases in World War I started the field for psychiatry, but that people's awareness of mental illness and the need for psychiatry is fairly new. The Monroe Area Guidance Center, whose clinic expenses are underwritten by the United Givers Fund, gives professional help to people with all kinds of emotional problems, such as marital discord, personality disorders, job adjustment problems, learning problems and behavior problems coming to the attention of the school, court or parent.

Attending were: Mr. Smith, Mrs. D. E. Bivins, Jr., Mrs. Bruce Brooks, Mrs. J. Tigner Conger, Mrs. E. W. Cruse, Mrs. William Crow, Mrs. Cecil Hill, Mrs. Walter Knapp, Mrs. A. Petrus, Mrs. L. D. Ritter, Mrs. T. H. Scott, Mrs. W. O. Webb, Mrs. Joe Gorman and Mrs. Vergil Reitzell, an associate member.

Emily Post Answers Many Of Reader's Questions

QUESTION: I would like to send a Christmas card to my employer but do not know whether to send it to Mr. alone or to Mr. and Mrs. His wife is unknown to me. Will you please tell me what is proper?

Mrs. Post: You send your card to Mr. alone because you do not know Mrs.

Mrs. Breard Is Speaker For Garden Club

The November meeting of the Sun and Sand Garden Club was held in the attractive home of Mrs. H. A. Malone with Mrs. Francella BeDoit assisting as cohostess. There were several lovely fall flower arrangements.

A very brief business meeting was presided over by the club president, Mrs. Van Clark.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Kent Breard, gave a most interesting talk and demonstration on 'Table Settings and Arrangements." Her discussion was further highlighted by an actual presentation of different pieces of china, silver and linens and their relation in value to each other.

Home Ceremony Unites Couple

Wednesday night, at seven oclock, at the home of the brides' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Roberts, in the Hudson community, Miss Sue Roberts was united in marriage to Julius Crawford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Crawford of the Jordan Hill community. The Rev. T. L. Rhymes read the double ring service.

Vows were exchanged in a setting of pink gladioli, ivy and white candles. The bride was gowned in an aqua suit with which she wore matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. The brides' table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a lovely arrangement of pink gladioli. At one end stood a beautiful four tiered cake, iced in white and edged in pink. Opposite was a crystal punch bowl. Mrs. T. L. Rhymes and Mrs. Myrtle Montgomery served; Miss Ann Roberts, sister of the bride, registered the guests. Later in the evening the couple left on a honeymoon to points in Tennessee and Alabama. Upon their return they will be at home with the bridegrooms' parents.

LaVingt Club Entertained By Mrs. R. Carson

Mrs. Robert L. Carson was hostess to members of the La Vingt Club in her home on Pargoud Blvd. on Wednesday afternoon.

The vice-president, Mrs. George Phebus, led the members in the reading of the club collect, and presided over the business session in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. D. Bernhardt.

The secretary, Mrs. William Crow, read the minutes of the previous meeting, and a letter of resignation from Mrs. W. T. Goward, who has moved from Monroe. Mrs. J. Tigner Conger was welcomed as a new member of the club.

The program chairman, Mrs. D. E. Bivins, Jr., introduced Mr. William O. Smith, visiting psychologist for the Monroe Area Guidance Center, who talked to the club on mental health and psychiatry. He explained that the shell shock cases in World War I started the field for psychiatry, but that people's awareness of mental illness and the need for psychiatry is fairly new. The Monroe Area Guidance Center, whose clinic expenses are underwritten by the United Givers Fund, gives professional help to people with all kinds of emotional problems, such as marital discord, personality disorders, job adjustment problems, learning problems and behavior problems coming to the attention of the school, court or parent.

Attending were: Mr. Smith, Mrs. D. E. Bivins, Jr., Mrs. Bruce Brooks, Mrs. J. Tigner Conger, Mrs. E. W. Cruse, Mrs. William Crow, Mrs. Cecil Hill, Mrs. Walter Knapp, Mrs. A. Petrus, Mrs. L. D. Ritter, Mrs. T. H. Scott, Mrs. W. O. Webb, Mrs. Joe Gorman and Mrs. Vergil Reitzell, an associate member.

CHICKEN AND RICE

When using natural cheddar cheese in a sauce, grate it before adding so it will melt quickly; prolonged heating is likely to make the cheese stringy.

Miss Hennington Carl Thompson Exchange Vows

The Emmanuel Baptist Church was the setting, November 16, for the ceremony uniting Miss Lois Annette Hennington and S-Sgt. Carl Henry Thompson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hennington, of Wilmot, Arkansas and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thompson of this city. The Reverend Fred Doolittle officiated.

The afternoon ceremony was held before a background of white gladioli and green foliage with white tapers burning in branched candelabra. Miss Emma Jean Hall, organist, accompanied the soloist, Mrs. James Hall in traditional wedding selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of brocade satin fashioned on princess lines. The fully flared skirt was ballerina length and the snug fitting bodice was finished with a deep V front and back and had short sleeves. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a tiara of tulle and pearls and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Miss Eva Doris Hennington was her sister's maid of honor. Her gown was of pink chrystaline taffeta made along similar lines to that worn by the bride. Miss Carol Thompson in orchid and Miss Georgia Hennington, in blue, wore identical dresses to the honor attendant. They carried chrysanthemum bouquets dyed to match their frocks.

James Hall served as best man while Roscoe Johns and Donald Ganaway were groomsmen.

MRS. CARL HENRY THOMPSON

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Hennington wore a gray silk suit with matching accessories and a corsage bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Thompson, the groom's mother, chose a dress of periwinkle blue with hat the same shade and a corsage of white flowers

For their wedding trip to Hot Springs, Arkansas, the bride wore a mauve colored suit with navy blue hat. On their return they will make their home in Shreveport, where he is stationed at Barksdale.

Mrs. Thopson is a graduate of Wilmot, Ark. High School and the bridegroom was graduated from Ouachita Parish High School.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding were M-Sgt. and Mrs. Oren Welch, of Barksdale A. F. Base, Shreveport, Frank Latimor, Mrs Nannie Strange, of Wilmot, Miss Mary Learl Montgomery, Mrs. Sam Montgomery, of Bastrop, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor, Swartz, Miss Betty Lee, of Bosco and S-Sgt. Roscoe Johns, of Barksdale.

CLOTHES QUIZ
Difficult To Alter Slacks

Slacks for at-home wear should fit as well as those for outdoor activities. Their lines may be softer and fabrics fussy but the flattery of neat lines is important. A reader writes —

Dear Miss Blair:

I have a pair of velvet slacks which have become too tight. Is there any way to remodel them so that they will fit?

It is difficult to alter slacks and as a rule all seams should be let out an equal amount if you wish to keep their smart lines intact. Velvet marks from stitching and if you feel just letting out side seams is sufficient you might cover the marks with a matching wide braid or grosgrain ribbon. If you feel they are worth it, have a tailor do the job. Would a long overblouse or peplum top cover the snug fit of your pants?

Dear Miss Blair:

Could I wear a cotton and silk dress to a holiday party? The dress is well styled and in navy blue but I wonder if the fabric would look out of season.

Your cotton and silk dress would be very appropriate for wear this winter. Actually, some of the holiday clothes are designed fabrics. The styling and color of your dress is just right.

If your sponge cake is dry, itmay be that you have overbeaten the egg whites or baked the cake too long.

MISS GWENDOLYN ADELE OSBORN'S approaching marriage to Lester Louis Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Bennett, of Start, is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Osborn. The December 7 wedding is set for 7 o'clock in the evening at the Central Baptist Church.

Games Spark Family Fun

This is the era of family fun, when Mom, Pop and the children once more are enjoying games and television as a family group.

Designed to foster gay fireside competition is the new crop of Christmas games available in shops, many of which can be enjoyed on an equal basis by all members of the family.

There are indoor counterparts to many outdoor sports, such as baseball, football, hockey and even Giant Steps, the game children used to enjoy outdoors before the days of traffic problems.

The trend to ease the course of homework via instructive games is accelerating. Fractions are easy as pie in a new game which bases play on sections of lemon and cherry pie representing various fractional divisions

Sound is added to the fun in a new game slanted to include younger children. It bases play on ringing small bells as players make moves.

If waffles stick, it may be there is not sufficient fat in the batter.

Miss Windham Is Bride Of Gilbert Hower

WINNSBORO — White gladioli and chrysanthemum-filled baskets interspersed with ferns, flanked an arch entwined with greenery and smilax, centered with three silver wedding bells to provide the setting for the recent marriage ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Avis Jean Windham and T. Gilbert Hower. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Windham, and Mr. Hower's parents are Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Hower of Winnsboro.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. P. Owens, pastor of the Jena Baptist church, in the home of the bride's brother, Murl Windham.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was wearing a brocaded champagne colored two-piece suit, designed with Peter Pan collar and self-material buttons extended down the front bodice. The dress was street length. With it she wore matching accessories and carried a white Bible topped with a bouquet of pink asters.

Mrs. Murl Windham, sister-in-law of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a fall street-length frock.

C. G. Wall, Jr., of West Monroe, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, served as best man.

The bride's mother was wearing a blue two-piece dress and complimentary accessories. Her corsage was white carnations.

The reception was held following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a white hand-drawn table linen and centered with a pink and white carnation flower arrangement. Pink candles in crystal candelabras flanked either side of the arrangement. The three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom was placed on one end of the table and on the opposite end was the crystal punch bowl. Mrs. Claude Taylor, of Winnsboro and Mrs. Lawrence Wright of Tullos served the punch and wedding cake.

Guests were asked to register in the bride's book by Mrs. E. L. Ganey, of Jena. The table where the guests registered was decorated with styrofoam wedding bells with tiny split carnations used as claps in the bell.

The bride is a graduate of Northwestern State College, Natchitoches, and is employed by the Franklin Parish Library.

Mr. Hower graduated from Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William Baker, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Nugent, Ike Drouet, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Taylor, Diane and Duane, all of Winnsboro, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Caldwell of Winnfield, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Cockerham of Baton Rouge, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wright of Tullos and C. G. Wall, Jr., of W. Monroe.

Knit Your Gift List Early

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Those lucky girls who know how to knit never have to worry about what to give their favorite people for Christmas. A hand-knit gift is prized by practically everybody — boy or girl, man or woman. It has that special, personal value of something made especially for you.

This year there are all kinds of knit accessories that can be turned out quickly and easily in time for Christmas. For the males on your list, knit or crocheted ties are always popular, and there are interesting new patterns available. Or a sleeveless sweater vest is easy to make and sure to please.

For the feminine side of the list, the possibilities are almost endless. But particularly in favor this year are snug knit hoods, helmets and stocking caps that can be worn whenever the cold winds blow, for winter sports, around town, in the country or on the campus.

Older girls like the ski-type helmet, which has a sleek, sophisticated look and keeps the ears warm and the hair under control besides. The pigtail and junior-high crowd goes for yard-long tasseled stocking caps, often in school colors.

Mittens may be made to match the caps, one bright new style having an open palm so the wearer can get her fingers free to fumble in a purse.

The fashion for black-dyed mink is growing in coat and jacket styles. The mink is used in the newest way for fullness — balloon or barrel-shaped jackets which billow out in back in a seven-inch dip.

Have you seen a kumquat growing in north Louisiana? Mrs. C. M. Washer, White's Ferry Road, West Monroe, says she has a tree that is just loaded with this fruit. Ask her the horticultural practices she used.

If you're interested in espaliered plants drive by the Thatcher home on the corner of North Fifth and Speed, Monroe. The plant is against the house on North Fifth side. It's a pyracantha, one of the tallest I've ever seen.

"Espalier" is a French word meaning "trellis" and is used to indicate the training of ornamental shrubs or trees against a wall or fence. The tree or shrub is planted within a foot of the wall. As the new growth develops, prune out the wood growing away from the wall. A formal or informal system can be developed. The main limbs are fastened to the wall by nails or screw eyes inserted into the mortar joints or wood work. Pruning must be done several times during the growing season.

This method of training plants has become very popular. Pyracantha is probably the most popular shrub for espaliering with sasanqua, flowering quince, crabapple, yaupon, holly, pear, loquat and magnolia close behind. An espaliered magnolia that is quite lovely can be seen at 1502 Park Avenue, home of Mrs. Marion Gray.

Vines such as Confederate jasmine and English ivy may also be trained into a particular pattern on a fence or wall surface such as is growing in the Biedenharn garden at the corner of Forsythe and Riverside Drive, Monroe. There are also several shrubs espaliered on this wall. Espaliered plants take up less room in a small garden and can be an attractive focal point or an accent in the base planting.

Remember, it's a good idea to shellac garden tools before putting them away for another season. Clean rusted parts with steel wool first.

It's just simply too wet to do any gardening. The pine straw is falling. Maybe you can get some mulching done. Save all leaves, too, for the shrubbery beds or compost pile. It is not too late to plant winter grass seed, or to plant narcissus and daffodils. The ground is too wet to plant the bulbs, though, unless there's lots of sunshine between now and Sunday.

Christmas News

Mrs. Anne Wertsner Wood demonstrated practical and inexpensive Christmas decorations to the Monroe Garden Club Monday. The lecturer fashioned bel's from tin can tops and trees from the can. Other ingenious ideas were: ornaments made with flashlight bulbs wrapped in aluminum foil; a simulated tree from a garden rake (gilded or silvered); Christmas wreaths from stove pipe rings.

Mrs. Wood advised using juniper, yew or pine for your Christmas greens, as these dry without shedding. For the framework for wreaths the lecturer used privet hedge canes, with leaves stripped. Take a very long cane and wrap it round and round. This makes an excellent framework for holding greens to form the wreath. A lovely swag for the door was made with a dust pan for foundation, the handle down. Water can be put in the pan and the greens kept fresh for a longer period of time.

The old bronzy looking scouring pad was used in a number of interesting ways. Borrow Mrs. Wood's book, "Make Your Own Christmas Merry", from the Ouachita Parish Library or the Garden Center. You'll see many beautiful and practical ideas to make your home a cheeful place for the family during the holidays.

You may like the night lights, but believe me, your poinsettia plants prefer darkness. This p'ant develops blooms in darkness. Night lights cause dropping of blooms. However, root crowding can also cause bloom drop.

Around the House

As winter fashions take shape and color, it appears more and more probable that colored hosiery will enjoy considerable favor. Nearly every maker is offering a range of tinted hosiery and, in addition, the usual beiges are overcast with color. The very sheer near - black hose is with us again this winter.

You'll like this — no - iron shirts. A well - known company has introduced a cotton broadcloth business shirt that does not require ironing. The maker says that if the shirt is sudsed, rinsed and placed on a plastic hanger to dry overnight, it may be worn immediately without ironing. The shirt may also be machine washed.

There's a new fiber, caprolon, that will soon be used in car upholstery, drapery fabrics and carpets. It's advantages are: it dyes well, taking colors that are of striking depth and brilliance; it's easy to clean and will shed soil; it's strong and last well. Caprolon will be used both alone and in combination with other fibers. Read the label on anything you buy to see the name of the fiber and its care.

Announcements

Don't forget the Recreation Center is the place to go each Friday afternoon to make your Christmas gifts. You should see the tier trays, aluminum trays, textile painting and many other interesting articles they are making. All are welcome to come see or come and make articles for yourself.

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday, Elizabeth McDaniel and Lola Caldwell from Caldwell parish will make Christmas decorations; Wednesday, flower arrangements with Mary Margaret Jardine; Friday, marketing and Christmas cooking with Mildred and Mammy.

The young wife said her husband had a dual personality — much of the time he is charming. Thanksgiving.
Other times, he's broke. Happy

Garden Chores Last Through Every Season

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

What is gardening?

"It is work and sweat and blisters and bugs. Prickles in fingers and dirt on the rugs," answers John S. Gallagher in the 1957 catalogue of one of the big nurseries.

He goes on, of course, to paint in rhyme the joys of the first daffodil, the dew - covered morning rose and all the rest of the things each of us with our very own spot knows full well, even if modesty does prevent us from doing too much bragging.

It is a curious hobby. At October's end, when the cleanup work outdoors seemed never-ending and every gust of wind blew another load of leaves onto the lawn, there were times when gardening seemed pure drudgery. Now, with the plants snug in their winter beds, the last leaves mulched or composted and the grass given its late fall feeding, just a couple of indoor weekends turns the gardener's thoughts to spring and spring planning. After all, it's just a matter of weeks, really, until the 1958 seed catalogues are out, and the flats of tomatoes and snap dragons and petunias can be started the last week in February.

Meanwhile, there is still gardening to be done — the inside variety, but gardening just the same. The African violets are blooming their heads off, so make a note about their pot'ing soil: earth scratched from beneath the privet hedge, lightened by a bit of peat moss, sweetened by a bit of powdered charcoal and fed once a month by a special African violet fertilizer, water soluble and in a 5-8-7 formulation of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. And on a tray of moist pebbles set in a west window.

In the sunniest southeast window, the delicate patience plants — impatiens, if you want to go into Latin — produce abundant supplies of bright red blossoms, along with the Christmas begonias. Both are cuttings, started during the summer in the shade garden and potted up in September Both are doing well in a mixture of one part top soil, one part leafmold, powdered charcoal and a bit of bonemeal — no additional feeding. They are sunk rim-deep in expanded mica in a window box set a foot back from the window pane, and the mica is kept moist.

Principal gardening chore is watering. My own experience has been that the Africa violets do better if allowed to become fairly dry before receiving another thorough watering, and that the begonias and impatiens like to be kept moist — not wet — constantly. The purpose of both the tray of moist pebbles and the moist mica is to provide the plants with a humid atmosphere.

House plants, alas, can become afflicted with almost as many diseases as the indoor variety. Watch the Africans for mold, fungus, red spider, mealy bugs and cyclamen mite. The others can pick up aphids and plenty of other pests.

We managed to keep our shade loving ivies and philodendron shiny and healthy during the winter by giving them access to daylight — they are happy in a north window — and give them a weekly plunge, which includes washing their leaves, in the laundry tub.

My indoor armory of weapons against pests includes a bulb spray, nicotine sulphate (for sucking pests), sulphur for mildew and mold, and a number of proprietary preparations specifically made to cope with cyclamen mite (which last year killed two of my best African violets). Mealy bugs are most easily wiped off with a bit of cotton on a stick, a dip of rubbing alcohol or nail polish remover.

Old Pantries Replaced By New Cabinet

For many a middle-ager and older, thoughts of Mom's kitchen pantry bring memories of the enticing cookie jar (tucked away on the highest shelf), the aroma of cooking pies, and the silent rising of rich yellow cream to the top of pans of milk.

The pantry was the home's kitchen storehouse. Its walls were lined with shelves or cupboards, providing the storage area that was generally missing from the kitchen itself.

Here, in winter, was the refrigeration room because the pantry generally was unheated. And here, in summer, was the focal point of attack for hungry youngsters — and sometimes a hideaway for a youthful romance.

Once almost automatically included as an adjunct to the kitchen room, the pantry faded with the advent of more compactly arranged houses. Further contributing to demise of the pantry was electric refrigeration, making less useful the unheated room where perishables were kept.

Much can be said for the pantry with its wealth of storage room Many a homemaker today wishes she had one; at least she would like to have the storage area it provides. The tremendous increase in packaged foods finds her caught short of adequate storage space.

This is particularly true in the vast number of low and modestly priced homes (and unfortunately true, too, in many more expensive homes) built during the past decade in which kitchen space was sacrificed to make other rooms acceptably larger.

While the manufacturers of kitchen cabinets and appliances, along with magazines and newspapers, have succeeded in convincing the American homemaker to plan her kitchen more efficiently, the basic problem of getting more storage space into the kitchen is still a troublesome one.

The answer seems to lie in making better use of the space that remains available for storage purposes. One notably wasted wall area is that between the bottom of wall cupboards and above the work surface of base cabinet units.

Just recently one of the large manufacturers of kitchen cabinets designed a cabinet especially for this space. Appropriately called a "pantry cabinet," it fits against teh wall and below the wall cabinets.

Made with sliding doors, it offers useable storage space just above the counter work surface—probably the handiest place of all. The cabinet measures 48 inches long (but can be cut to shorter sizes), is 13 inches high and at the top is 11½ inches front to back. It tapers to six inches in width at the bottom.

Because the pantry cabinet is completely finished as an individual unit, it finds other uses in the home, too. Its lighting and storage features make it useful as part of a kitchen planning desk; it might even be used in a bathroom or as part of a built-in headboard of a bed.

Principle use of this unit, however, remains in the kitchen where it provides extra storage space to help offset loss of the old-fashioned pantry.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Compositions For Holiday

By Mary M. Jardine

The theme of John Wright's show this month was Thanksgiving compositions and arrangements for the home. For a small living room or hall table Mr. Wright made a vertical design using a small black urn. The primary vertical placement was two stalks of canna buds wired together for strength. Continuing down the line were lavender chrysanthemums, small in size. A parallel line of yellow chrysanthemums a little larger in scale emphasized the pattern. Arborvitae was used low in the design as a filler background. The effect was most pleasing.

Fall colors were selected for the bountiful composition designed for a large buffet. The "container" was a large bamboo raft with a cup-type needle point holder to hold the fresh plant material. Three large palm spathes in their natural state were placed in a triangular pattern for the background. Secondary placements were furlel, dried, aspidistra leaves followed by sprays of sea-oats and rice. Yellow chrysanthemums shading into bronze followed the established lines and creating a background for the focal point, a small orange pumpkin and two clusters of green grapes.

Another delightful buffet arrangement combined vegetables, flowers and foliage in greens and yellows. A low platter of dull green was selected for the container. A triangular background pattern was achieved with aspidistra leaves, grouped in threes. Bright yellow chrysanthemums emphasized the pattern. Yellow and green fruits of the trifoliage orange were clustered low in the arrangement tying in the focal point, a green artichoke balanced by a green pepper on one side and a slender curved cucumber on the other. The contrast in textures and the color rhythm combined to make this a most distinctive design.

A beautiful composition combining fresh and dried materials was staged against a pale pink background. Background placements were tall stalks of canna buds, variegated euonymus, milo maize and lower placements of millet. Bronze shaded daisy type chrysanthemums were combined with deep lavender Mums. The center of interest was a cluster of three medium sized pine cones. The container was a modern compote of midnight blue. A most effective combination of colors and materials. This design was greatly admired by men gardeners visiting the Center.

Mrs. Pattie Carr and Mrs. Suzee Gorman of Monroe exhibited a delightful Thanksgiving composition that was the object of much admiration. Their theme was the traditional Thanksgiving turkey, a magnificent bird, made by Mrs. L. P. Craighead of Delhi. The turkey was constructed of brown crepe paper over a wire frame, and stuffed with cotton to maintain his buxom shape. Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Gorman created a triangular design around this accessory. Tall placements of brown dock, followed by yellow daisy mums with bronze edges. Button mums in bronze were placed low to tie in with the deep celosia of the same color. A pine cone flower was placed above the red Indian corn placed on the large brown board which served as a container. The triangular pattern was completed with a small pumpkin, green and white striped gourd and brown magnolia leaves.

Happy Thanksgiving to all.

Colorful Oaks Pretty, Shady

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Anyone who has ever seen the brilliant color of the Scarlet Oak in the fall will certainly want to grow this tree. It is, unfortunately, hard to transplant after it gets up to any size, and for this reason, people usually plant another tree, the Pin Oak, that has red foliage in the autumn. In the southern states, we have several oaks in the red oak group that have beautiful colored leaves in October and November. The Swamp Red Oak is so much like the Scarlet Oak that few non - botanists would notice the difference. What we in the south call the 'Northern Red Oak" is another red-leaved tree.

Many southern nurseries sell the Northern Red Oak, and most of them sell the Pin Oak. The Pin Oaks have done exceptionally well everywhere in the south where the soil is not alkaline. They are fussy about this, but their soil can be acidified by the usual method we use for making soil sour for azaleas. Crude sulphur is about the most permanent material to use on large areas. Landscapers in the south have used the bautiful Pin Oak because of its grace and striking beauty. The top branches are straight, middle branches are horizontal, and the lower branches hang down like a beautiful skirt around the trunk. You can certainly spot a Pin Oak with no trouble at all because none other of the red oaks has this skirt effect.

If you wish to grow some of the other fine, fast growing trees in the red oak group, you may have to get little tree out of the woods because few of our nurseries stock them. The Red Oak of the south makes a fine shade tree that gets to be tremendous. It has bright red foliage in the autumn and is one of the most important of our timber trees. For a very quick growing shade tree, you can hardly beat our native Southern Red Oak, sometimes called Spanish Oak. The leaves do not turn red in the fall, but this tree, although a fast grower — perhaps the fastest of all our native oaks --seems to be strong and sturdy. The Black Oak is another member of the red oaks, as botanists classify them, but black oaks break up too badly to be recommended as shade trees.

Since there are so many common names for trees, the only way to be sure of the oak you are discussing is to use the Latin name. For this reason, we give, herewith, the Latin names and common names together. Scarlet Oak (Quercus coccinea), Pin Oak (Q. palustris), Northern or Mountain Red Oak (Q. borealis), Swamp Red Oak (Q. Shumardii) Black Oak (Q. velutina.

The following books will identify trees for you: Coker & Totten, Trees of the Southeastern United States, Chapel Hill, N. C. U. N. C. Press; Harrer & Harrer, Guide to Southern Trees, New York, N. Y., Whittlesey House. Both of these books are illustrated with black and white illustrations.

Congratulations to the Best Club of 1957 — McGuire Home Demonstration Club. McGuire Club is a group of young homemakers who, because of their small children felt they could not participate in home demonstration work with older women, organized a club of young homemakers. At the last meeting there were fifteen of these young women with thirteen children in attendance. Oh, yes, we had a lovely meeting because these young women are interested in the subject — The Well Dressed Window. The 1957 officers of this club are, President, Mrs. T. Taylor; vice president, Mrs. Leon Caldwell; secretary, Mrs. A. L. Sweeney; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Krone; reporter, Mrs. J. L. Maxwell. Officers for 1958 are, Mrs. Leon Caldwell, president; Mrs. J. L. Maxwell, president-elect; Mrs. Joe Rogers, secretary; Mrs. Robert Ingram, program director; and Mrs. Harold Spillers, reporter.

How Much Turkey

The right size turkey for the number of people to be served is a problem for many housewives. The LSU Exension Nutritionist suggest the following ready-to-cook weights to yield the number of servings indicated: 8-10 pound turkey will give from 16 to 18 servings; 10-14 pounds, 20 to 28 servings; 14-18 pounds, 28 to 36 servings; 18-20 pounds, 36 to 40 servings

Prepare Ahead

Yes, every home will have guests during either Thanksgiving or Christmas and housewives will be very busy as part of the pleasure of holidays are based on foods. With the home freezer in most homes today, it has become possible to preserve a wide variety of completely prepared or precooked foods. This is a decided advantage for women as most of the work can be done before guests arrive.

Since this is practically a new area of food preservation, it is important for homemakers to learn how to handle prepared and precooked foods that are to be frozen.

Fruit Pies

Fruit pies may be frozen before or after baking, but ready-to-bake pies gives a better quality pie. The bottom crust of pre-baked pies tend to become soggy after freezer storage; and the fresh fruit flav or is not retained, so well as when pies are frozen ready to bake. Both the baked and ready-to-bake pies should be thawed in oven. Cakes containing shortening may be satisfactorily frozen in batter state or after baking. Plain cake batters can be successfully stored up to four months in freezer cartons or in cake pan. When frozen in cake pans the batter may be baked unthawed, with a slight sacrifice in quality as unthawed batters tend to lump in the center. Research showed that batters which are frozen in cartons and thawed before baking are approximately equivalent to fresh'y baked cakes from the same type of batter.

It is important to have the freezer temperature low enough to freeze the batter "brick solid." Batters which contain a high ratio of sugar may require a temperature lower than 0 degrees F. if loss of leavening from baking powder is to be avoided.

Sponge cakes made primarily of egg yolks are not satisfactory when frozen in batter state because of their high egg yolk content, because the batter breaks during freezer storage and the flavor deteriorates rapidly. Baked sponge cakes, when properly wrapped to avoid moisture loss, remains in excellent condition for three or four months in the freezer.

Angel food cakes, which are sponge cakes leavened with whites of egg only, are satisfactorily frozen in the batter state as well as after baking. When properly hand led, both methods give excellent results. The batter should be frozen immediately after mixing, in the coldest part of the freezer, to prevent foam from breaking before the batter solidifies. Angel food batters should be frozen immediately after mixing in the baking pan and not allowed to thaw before baking. Bake at the same temperature as fresh batters, but bake 10 minutes longer.

All yeast breads should be baked before storing. Quick breads, meats and vegetables are best in quality when freshly cooked. Gravies and sauces have a tendency to curdle after freezing. Fat of cooked poultry develops off flavor.

WHY GROW OLD?

Here's A Helpful Check On Your Mental Health

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Did you know that mental illness hospitalizes more people than all other ills put together and that it often can be prevented? It is impossible for any human being to live without tensions and anxieties. To do so we would have to be devoid fo all interests and enthusiasms and involvements of the heart. Also many worries are protective to our health and happiness.

However, the way in which we manage our problems and the manner in which we react to our worries IS important. The average, healthy, well-adjusted individual can go through times of anxiety and crisis and then bounce back. He or she may feel the impact in fatigue or depression, but within a reasonable length of time natural resilience will return.

When to Correct

The time to begin adopting corrective measures is when you live in a constant state of unease when there is no reason for it. If you have had a prolonged time of strain and tension, you should be watchful for any harmful reactions in your personality as well as in your health BUT, how do you recognize it when this is happening to you?

There is a very interesting booklet which gives you a questionnaire to help you evaluate your own outlook, your own mental health. This booklet is called "How To Deal With Your Tensions." It was a joint project of the National Advertising Council and the National Association For Mental Health. It was written by Doctor George S. Stevenson, Consultant for The National Association for Mental Health, and psychologist Harry Milt.

Questionnaire

It certainly seems that we should investigate any symptoms of mental distress just as we would any physical symptoms and seek aid when we need it. I think this questionnaire will be helpful to everyone. Here it is.

1. Do minor problems and disappointments throw you into a dither?
2. Do you find it difficult to get along with people and are people having trouble getting along with you?
3. Do the small pleasures of life fail to satisfy you?
4. Are you unable to stop thinking of your anxieties?
5. Do you fear people or situations that never used to trouble you?
6. Are you suspicious of people, mistrustful of your friends?
7. Do you have the feeling of being trapped?
8. Do you feel inadequate, suffer the tortures of self-doubt?

Need Help

The authors do not indicate that disaster is ahead of you if you answer a number of these questions in the affirmative, but rather that you need help and that the situation should not continue. Do not allow it to become chronic! Overcome it because it puts the dampers on living and it also endangers your future mental welfare.

Perhaps you can help yourself or maybe you need expert aid. One way you can help yourself if you feel you need it is to read this booklet. It gives you direction for self help and also tells you where to find more expert help if you require it.

The booklet will be sent to you free if you send your request to Better Mental Health, Post Office Box 2500, New York City, New York.

When modernizing plans close off a door or a window, make the recess an ornamental and functional feature of the room by converting it into a large "shadow box." Lining the recess with predecorated hardboard — in a wood grain pattern, for instance—will provide an attraction in itself and also an interesting background for whatever is stored or displayed on the shelves.

Money Easy To Get To Improve Homes

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE
AP Newsfeatures

Funds for home improvements, despite all the talk you might hear about a "tight money" market, a readily available through commercial banks and other financial institutions. We have the word of reliable banking sources for this statement.

Making loans is an important part of the business of any financial institution and, we're assured, they're just as eager to serve you as you are to obtain advice and financial help from them.

So, we're told, if you're thinking of installing a new heating system, putting in new plumbing, adding a room, or doing some papering. painting, or insulating, there's no need to put it off just because you can't pay for all the work from your cash reserves.

First, get estimates from reliable contractors on your home improvement project. Then determine how much money you'll need to borrow and how much you can conveniently repay out of your monthly budget. This done, you're ready to talk to a bank or other lender.

Home improvement projects can be financed through personal loans obtained from banks, from credit unions and from small loan companies. In some states, however, laws limit the size of these loans and repayment periods often are shorter than for special home improvement loans.

Aside from direct loans, it also is possible to pay for home improvements on the installment plan by special arrangement with an individual contractor, dealer or supplier.

It is important, however, in considering such installment contracts to determine whether the carrying charges would exceed the interest you would pay for a regular home improvement loan.

There are four principal types of loans which may be available for home improvements through financial institutions. They are (1) conventional bank installment loans, (2) government - insured Title One loans, (3) open - end mortgage advances, and (4) supplemental loans obtained through mortgage refinancing.

Conventional Bank Installment Loans — The bank's major concern here is that the improvement will substantially protect or improve the livability or use of your home and that you will receive certain value for the cost of the project.

The amount and terms of the loan depend primarily on the nature of the improvement and your ability to repay the loan without hardship. These loans are made individually by banks and are not subject to the government-insured Title One loan regulations. Hence, the banks are more flexible generally with regard to the purpose, the amount and the repayment terms of the loan.

While the interest rate usually is slightly higher, some loans not covered under the government-insured plan may be obtained through the bank's own home-improvement loan program.

Government - insured Title One Loans — This plan permits a bank or other qualified lender to advance the money under an insurance arrangement with the Federal Housing Administration. The maximum amount available under this plan is $3,500 and the maximum replayment term is five years for loans above $600.

The interest rate generally is a discount of $5 per $100 each year. Discount means simply that the full charges are deducted from the amount of the loan at the time the money is borrowed.

This financing plan can be used for most basic home improvements. However, it cannot be used for projects "not considered essential to a home such as swimming pools, greenhouses or outdoor fireplaces" or for "appliances and items that are not substantially built into the property."

Open - End Mortgage Loan — Should your home mortgage contain an "open-end" provision, additional funds on the same mortgage may be available to you for home improvement purposes.

A substantial equity usually is required, however. This means that before you can borrow money in this manner, it generally will be required that you have made earlier mortgage payments totaling at least as much as the amount of the new loan.

In this type of loan, your monthly payments may be increased slightly to pay off the additional debt, or the repayment period may be extended beyond the original expiration date.

Supplemental Loans Through Mortgage Refinancing — Should you have a conventional mortgage rather than an "open - end" mortgage, you may be able to obtain funds for home improvements projects by retiring the existing mortgage and obtaining another mortgage in a new amount.

This method of financing, however, usually involves a new title search and recording and other extra fees, but generally your interest rate would be lower than under government - insured loans or other short - term loans.

A Conculing Thought — Regardless of the project, be it a small improvement project or a multiple improvement project involving both products and services, it is generally true that it will be less complicated and more economical to borrow home improvement funds from a bank or financial institution rather than pay the carrying charges involved in installment plan contracts.

Espaliering Vines Easy

By Mildred Swift

Of special interest to gardeners is the Quota Club Bazaar, Monday, Nov. 25. There will be a special garden apron and lovely pot plants grown by the members. And interesting to all will be the homemade preserves, jellies and jams from Mrs. Guy Alford's pantry, frozen chicken spaghetti from Mrs. Ben Breard's freezer and other luscious, delicious foods you can carry home with you. But be sure to eat turkey dinner with Quota members. The place is La Casa Tea Room, 900 North Second Street.

Jes' Gardening

Have you seen a kumquat growing in north Louisiana? Mrs. C. M. Washer, White's Ferry Road, West Monroe, says she has a tree that is just loaded with this fruit. Ask her the horticultural practices she used.

If you're interested in espaliered plants drive by the Thatcher home on the corner of North Fifth and Speed, Monroe. The plant is against the house on North Fifth side. It's a pyracantha, one of the tallest I've ever seen.

"Espalier" is a French word meaning "trellis" and is used to indicate the training of ornamental shrubs or trees against a wall or fence. The tree or shrub is planted within a foot of the wall. As the new growth develops, prune out the wood growing away from the wall. A formal or informal system can be developed. The main limbs are fastened to the wall by nails or screw eyes inserted into the mortar joints or wood work. Pruning must be done several times during the growing season.

This method of training plants has become very popular. Pyracantha is probably the most popular shrub for espaliering with sasanqua, flowering quince, crabapple, yaupon, holly, pear, loquat and magnolia close behind. An espaliered magnolia that is quite lovely can be seen at 1502 Park Avenue, home of Mrs. Marion Gray.

Vines such as Confederate jasmine and English ivy may also be trained into a particular pattern on a fence or wall surface such as is growing in the Biedenharn garden at the corner of Forsythe and Riverside Drive, Monroe. There are also several shrubs espaliered on this wall. Espaliered plants take up less room in a small garden and can be an attractive focal point or an accent in the base planting.

Remember, it's a good idea to shellac garden tools before putting them away for another season. Clean rusted parts with steel wool first.

It's just simply too wet to do any gardening. The pine straw is falling. Maybe you can get some mulching done. Save all leaves, too, for the shrubbery beds or compost pile. It is not too late to plant winter grass seed, or to plant narcissus and daffodils. The ground is too wet to plant the bulbs, though, unless there's lots of sunshine between now and Sunday.

Christmas News

Mrs. Anne Wertsner Wood demonstrated practical and inexpensive Christmas decorations to the Monroe Garden Club Monday. The lecturer fashioned bel's from tin can tops and trees from the can. Other ingenious ideas were: ornaments made with flashlight bulbs wrapped in aluminum foil; a simulated tree from a garden rake (gilded or silvered); Christmas wreaths from stove pipe rings.

Mrs. Wood advised using juniper, yew or pine for your Christmas greens, as these dry without shedding. For the framework for wreaths the lecturer used privet hedge canes, with leaves stripped. Take a very long cane and wrap it round and round. This makes an excellent framework for holding greens to form the wreath. A love'y swag for the door was made with a dust pan for foundation, the handle down. Water can be put in the pan and the greens kept fresh for a longer period of time.

The old bronzy looking scouring pad was used in a number of interesting ways. Borrow Mrs. Wood's book, "Make Your Own Christmas Merry", from the Ouachita Parish Library or the Garden Center. You'll see many beautiful and practical ideas to make your home a cheeful place for the family during the holidays.

You may like the night lights, but believe me, your poinsettia plants prefer darkness. This p'ant develops blooms in darkness. Night lights cause dropping of blooms. However, root crowding can also cause bloom drop.

Around the House

As winter fashions take shape and color, it appears more and more probable that colored hosiery will enjoy considerable favor. Nearly every maker is offering a range of tinted hosiery and, in addition, the usual beiges are overcast with color. The very sheer near - black hose is with us again this winter.

You'll like this — no - iron shirts. A well - known company has introduced a cotton broadcloth business shirt that does not require ironing. The maker says that if the shirt is sudsed, rinsed and placed on a plastic hanger to dry overnight, it may be worn immediately without ironing. The shirt may also be machine washed.

There's a new fiber, caprolon, that will soon be used in car upholstery, drapery fabrics and carpets. It's advantages are: it dyes well, taking colors that are of striking depth and brilliance; it's easy to clean and will shed soil; it's strong and last well. Caprolon will be used both alone and in combination with other fibers. Read the label on anything you buy to see the name of the fiber and its care.

Announcements

Don't forget the Recreation Center is the place to go each Friday afternoon to make your Christmas gifts. You should see the tier trays, aluminum trays, textile painting and many other interesting articles they are making. All are welcome to come see or come and make articles for yourself.

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday and Tuesday, Elizabeth McDaniel and Lola Caldwell from Caldwell parish will make Christmas decorations; Wednesday, flower arrangements with Mary Margaret Jardine; Friday, marketing and Christmas cooking with Mildred and Mammy.

Garden Chores Last Through Every Season

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

What is gardening?

"It is work and sweat and blisters and bugs. Prickles in fingers and dirt on the rugs," answers John S. Gallagher in the 1957 catalogue of one of the big nurseries.

He goes on, of course, to paint in rhyme the joys of the first daffodil, the dew - covered morning rose and all the rest of the things each of us with our very own spot knows full well, even if modesty does prevent us from doing too much bragging.

It is a curious hobby. At October's end, when the cleanup work outdoors seemed never-ending and every gust of wind blew another load of leaves onto the lawn, there were times when gardening seemed pure drudgery. Now, with the plants snug in their winter beds, the last leaves mulched or composted and the grass given its late fall feeding, just a couple of indoor weekends turns the gardener's thoughts to spring and spring planning. After all, it's just a matter of weeks, really, until the 1958 seed catalogues are out, and the flats of tomatoes and snap dragons and petunias can be started the last week in February.

Meanwhile, there is still gardening to be done — the inside variety, but gardening just the same The African violets are blooming their heads off, so make a note about their pot'ing soil: earth scratched from beneath the privet hedge, lightened by a bit of peat moss, sweetened by a bit of powdered charcoal and fed once a month by a special African violet fertilizer, water soluble and in a 5-8-7 formulation of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. And on a tray of moist pebbles set in a west window.

In the sunniest southeast window, the delicate patience plants — impatiens, if you want to go into Latin — produce abundant supplies of bright red blossoms, along with the Christmas begonias. Both are cuttings, started during the summer in the shade garden and potted up in September Both are doing well in a mixture of one part top soil, one part leafmold, powdered charcoal and a bit of bonemeal — no additional feeding. They are sunk rim-deep in expanded mica in a window box set a foot back from the window pane, and the mica is kept moist.

Principal gardening chore is watering. My own experience has been that the Africa violets do better if allowed to become fairly dry before receiving another thorough watering, and that the begonias and impatiens like to be kept moist — not wet — constantly. The purpose of both the tray of moist pebbles and the moist mica is to provide the plants with a humid atmosphere.

House plants, alas, can become afflicted with almost as many diseases as the indoor variety. Watch the Africans for mold, fungus, red spider, mealy bugs and cyclamen mite. The others can pick up aphids and plenty of other pests.

We managed to keep our shade loving ivies and philodendron shiny and healthy during the winter by giving them access to daylight — they are happy in a north window — and give them a weekly plunge, which includes washing their leaves, in the laundry tub.

My indoor armory of weapons against pests includes a bulb spray, nicotine sulphate (for sucking pests), sulphur for mildew and mold, and a number of proprietary preparations specifically made to cope with cyclamen mite (which last year killed two of my best African violets). Mealy bugs are most easily wiped off with a bit of cotton on a stick, a dip of rubbing alcohol or nail polish remover.

Old Pantries Replaced By New Cabinet

For many a middle-ager and older, thoughts of Mom's kitchen pantry bring memories of the enticing cookie jar (tucked away on the highest shelf), the aroma of cooking pies, and the silent rising of rich yellow cream to the top of pans of milk.

The pantry was the home's kitchen storehouse. Its walls were lined with shelves or cupboards, providing the storage area that was generally missing from the kitchen itself.

Here, in winter, was the refrigeration room because the pantry generally was unheated. And here, in summer, was the focal point of attack for hungry youngsters — and sometimes a hideaway for a youthful romance.

Once almost automatically included as an adjunct to the kitchen room, the pantry faded with the advent of more compactly arranged houses. Further contributing to demise of the pantry was electric refrigeration, making less useful the unheated room where perishables were kept.

Much can be said for the pantry with its wealth of storage room Many a homemaker today wishes she had one; at least she would like to have the storage area it provides. The tremendous increase in packaged foods finds her caught short of adequate storage space.

This is particularly true in the vast number of low and modestly priced homes (and unfortunately true, too, in many more expensive homes) built during the past decade in which kitchen space was sacrificed to make other rooms acceptably larger.

While the manufacturers of kitchen cabinets and appliances, along with magazines and newspapers, have succeeded in convincing the American homemaker to plan her kitchen more efficiently, the basic problem of getting more storage space into the kitchen is still a troublesome one.

The answer seems to lie in making better use of the space that remains available for storage purposes. One notably wasted wall area is that between the bottom of wall cupboards and above the work surface of base cabinet units.

Just recently one of the large manufacturers of kitchen cabinets designed a cabinet especially for this space. Appropriately called a "pantry cabinet," it fits against teh wall and below the wall cabinets.

Made with sliding doors, it offers useable storage space just above the counter work surface—probably the handiest place of all. The cabinet measures 48 inches long (but can be cut to shorter sizes), is 13 inches high and at the top is 11½ inches front to back. It tapers to six inches in width at the bottom.

Because the pantry cabinet is completely finished as an individual unit, it finds other uses in the home, too. Its lighting and storage features make it useful as part of a kitchen planning desk; it might even be used in a bathroom or as part of a built-in headboard of a bed.

Principle use of this unit, however, remains in the kitchen where it provides extra storage space to help offset loss of the old-fashioned pantry.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

By Mary M. Jardine

The theme of John Wright's show this month was Thanksgiving compositions and arrangements for the home. For a small living room or hall table Mr. Wright made a vertical design using a small black urn. The primary vertical placement was two stalks of canna buds wired together for strength. Continuing down the line were lavender chrysanthemums, small in size. A parallel line of yellow chrysanthemums a little larger in scale emphasized the pattern. Arborvitae was used low in the design as a filler background. The effect was most pleasing.

Fall colors were selected for the bountiful composition designed for a large buffet. The "container" was a large bamboo raft with a cup-type needle point holder to hold the fresh plant material. Three large palm spathes in their natural state were placed in a triangular pattern for the background. Secondary placements were furlel, dried, aspidistra leaves followed by sprays of sea-oats and rice. Yellow chrysanthemums shading into bronze followed the established lines and creating a background for the focal point, a small orange pumpkin and two clusters of green grapes.

Another delightful buffet arrangement combined vegetables, flowers and foliage in greens and yellows. A low platter of dull green was selected for the container. A triangular background pattern was achieved with aspidistra leaves, grouped in threes. Bright yellow chrysanthemums emphasized the pattern. Yellow and green fruits of the trifoliage orange were clustered low in the arrangement tying in the focal point, a green artichoke balanced by a green pepper on one side and a slender curved cucumber on the other. The contrast in textures and the color rhythm combined to make this a most distinctive design.

A beautiful composition combining fresh and dried materials was staged against a pale pink background. Background placements were tall stalks of canna buds, variegated euonymus, milo maize and lower placements of millet. Bronze shaded daisy type chrysanthemums were combined with deep lavender Mums. The center of interest was a cluster of three medium sized pine cones. The container was a modern compote of midnight blue. A most effective combination of colors and materials. This design was greatly admired by men gardeners visiting the Center.

Mrs. Pattie Carr and Mrs. Suzee Gorman of Monroe exhibited a delightful Thanksgiving composition that was the object of much admiration. Their theme was the traditional Thanksgiving turkey, a magnificent bird, made by Mrs. L. P. Craighead of Delhi. The turkey was constructed of brown crepe paper over a wire frame, and stuffed with cotton to maintain his buxom shape. Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Gorman created a triangular design around this accessory. Tall placements of brown dock, followed by yellow daisy mums with bronze edges. Button mums in bronze were placed low to tie in with the deep celosia of the same color. A pine cone flower was placed above the red Indian corn placed on the large brown board which served as a container. The triangular pattern was completed with a small pumpkin, green and white striped gourd and brown magnolia leaves.

Happy Thanksgiving to all.

Colorful Oaks Pretty, Shady

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Anyone who has ever seen the brilliant color of the Scarlet Oak in the fall will certainly want to grow this tree. It is, unfortunately, hard to transplant after it gets up to any size, and for this reason, people usually plant another tree, the Pin Oak, that has red foliage in the autumn. In the southern states, we have several oaks in the red oak group that have beautiful colored leaves in October and November. The Swamp Red Oak is so much like the Scarlet Oak that few non - botanists would notice the difference. What we in the south call the 'Northern Red Oak" is another red-leaved tree.

Many southern nurseries sell the Northern Red Oak, and most of them sell the Pin Oak. The Pin Oaks have done exceptionally well everywhere in the south where the soil is not alkaline. They are fussy about this, but their soil can be acidified by the usual method we use for making soil sour for azaleas. Crude sulphur is about the most permanent material to use on large areas. Landscapers in the south have used the bautiful Pin Oak because of its grace and striking beauty. The top branches are straight, middle branches are horizontal, and the lower branches hang down like a beautiful skirt around the trunk. You can certainly spot a Pin Oak with no trouble at all because none other of the red oaks has this skirt effect.

If you wish to grow some of the other fine, fast growing trees in the red oak group, you may have to get little tree out of the woods because few of our nurseries stock them. The Red Oak of the south makes a fine shade tree that gets to be tremendous. It has bright red foliage in the autumn and is one of the most important of our timber trees. For a very quick growing shade tree, you can hardly beat our native Southern Red Oak, sometimes called Spanish Oak. The leaves do not turn red in the fall, but this tree, although a fast grower — perhaps the fastest of all our native oaks --seems to be strong and sturdy. The Black Oak is another member of the red oaks, as botanists classify them, but black oaks break up too badly to be recommended as shade trees.

Since there are so many common names for trees, the only way to be sure of the oak you are discussing is to use the Latin name. For this reason, we give, herewith, the Latin names and common names together. Scarlet Oak (Quercus coccinea), Pin Oak (Q. palustris), Northern or Mountain Red Oak (Q. borealis), Swamp Red Oak (Q. Shumardii) Black Oak (Q. velutina.

The following books will identify trees for you: Coker & Totten, Trees of the Southeastern United States, Chapel Hill, N. C. U. N. C. Press; Harrer & Harrer, Guide to Southern Trees, New York, N. Y., Whittlesey House. Both of these books are illustrated with black and white illustrations.

Congratulations to the Best Club of 1957 — McGuire Home Demonstration Club. McGuire Club is a group of young homemakers who, because of their small children felt they could not participate in home demonstration work with older women, organized a club of young homemakers. At the last meeting there were fifteen of these young women with thirteen children in attendance. Oh, yes, we had a lovely meeting because these young women are interested in the subject — The Well Dressed Window. The 1957 officers of this club are, President, Mrs. T. Taylor; vice president, Mrs. Leon Caldwell; secretary, Mrs. A. L. Sweeney; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Krone; reporter, Mrs. J. L. Maxwell. Officers for 1958 are, Mrs. Leon Caldwell, president; Mrs. J. L. Maxwell, president-elect; Mrs. Joe Rogers, secretary; Mrs. Robert Ingram, program director; and Mrs. Harold Spillers, reporter.

How Much Turkey

The right size turkey for the number of people to be served is a problem for many housewives. The LSU Exension Nutritionist suggest the following ready-to-cook weights to yield the number of servings indicated: 8-10 pound turkey will give from 16 to 18 servings; 10-14 pounds, 20 to 28 servings; 14-18 pounds, 28 to 36 servings; 18-20 pounds, 36 to 40 servings

Prepare Ahead

Yes, every home will have guests during either Thanksgiving or Christmas and housewives will be very busy as part of the pleasure of holidays are based on foods. With the home freezer in most homes today, it has become possible to preserve a wide variety of completely prepared or precooked foods. This is a decided advantage for women as most of the work can be done before guests arrive.

Since this is practically a new area of food preservation, it is important for homemakers to learn how to handle prepared and precooked foods that are to be frozen.

Fruit Pies

Fruit pies may be frozen before or after baking, but ready-to-bake pies gives a better quality pie. The bottom crust of pre-baked pies tend to become soggy after freezer storage; and the fresh fruit flavor is not retained, so well as when pies are frozen ready to bake. Both the baked and ready-to-bake pies should be thawed in oven. Cakes containing shortening may be satisfactorily frozen in batter state or after baking. Plain cake batters can be successfully stored up to four months in freezer cartons or in cake pan. When frozen in cake pans the batter may be baked unthawed, with a slight sacrifice in quality as unthawed batters tend to lump in the center. Research showed that batters which are frozen in cartons and thawed before baking are approximately equivalent to fresh'y baked cakes from the same type of batter.

It is important to have the freezer temperature low enough to freeze the batter "brick solid." Batters which contain a high ratio of sugar may require a temperature lower than 0 degrees F. if loss of leavening from baking powder is to be avoided.

Sponge cakes made primarily of egg yolks are not satisfactory when frozen in batter state because of their high egg yolk content, because the batter breaks during freezer storage and the flavor deteriorates rapidly. Baked sponge cakes, when properly wrapped to avoid moisture loss, remains in excellent condition for three or four months in the freezer.

Angel food cakes, which are sponge cakes leavened with whites of egg only, are satisfactorily frozen in the batter state as well as after baking. When properly hand led, both methods give excellent results. The batter should be frozen immediately after mixing, in the coldest part of the freezer, to prevent foam from breaking before the batter solidifies. Angel food batters should be frozen immediately after mixing in the baking pan and not allowed to thaw before baking. Bake at the same temperature as fresh batters, but bake 10 minutes longer.

All yeast breads should be baked before storing. Quick breads, meats and vegetables are best in quality when freshly cooked. Gravies and sauces have a tendency to curdle after freezing. Fat of cooked poultry develops off flavor.

WHY GROW OLD?

Here's A Helpful Check On Your Mental Health

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Did you know that mental illness hospitalizes more people than all other ills put together and that it often can be prevented? It is impossible for any human being to live without tensions and anxieties. To do so we would have to be devoid fo all interests and enthusiasms and involvements of the heart. Also many worries are protective to our health and happiness.

However, the way in which we manage our problems and the manner in which we react to our worries IS important. The average, healthy, well-adjusted individual can go through times of anxiety and crisis and then bounce back. He or she may feel the impact in fatigue or depression, but within a reasonable length of time natural resilience will return.

When to Correct

The time to begin adopting corrective measures is when you live in a constant state of unease when there is no reason for it. If you have had a prolonged time of strain and tension, you should be watchful for any harmful reactions in your personality as well as in your health. BUT, how do you recognize it when this is happening to you?

There is a very interesting book let which gives you a questionnaire to help you evaluate your own outlook, your own mental health. This booklet is called "How To Deal With Your Tensions." It was a joint project of the National Advertising Council and the National Association For Mental Health. It was written by Doctor George S. Stevenson, Consultant for The National Association for Mental Health, and psychologist Harry Milt.

Questionnaire

It certainly seems that we should investigate any symptoms of mental distress just as we would any physical symptoms and seek aid when we need it. I think this questionnaire will be helpful to everyone. Here it is.

1. Do minor problems and disappointments throw you into a dither?
2. Do you find it difficult to get along with people and are people having trouble getting along with you?
3. Do the small pleasures of life fail to satisfy you?
4. Are you unable to stop thinking of your anxieties?
5. Do you fear people or situations that never used to trouble you?
6. Are you suspicious of people, mistrustful of your friends?
7. Do you have the feeling of being trapped?
8. Do you feel inadequate, suffer the tortures of self-doubt?

Need Help

The authors do not indicate that disaster is ahead of you if you answer a number of these questions in the affirmative, but rather that you need help and that the situation should not continue. Do not allow it to become chronic! Overcome it because it puts the dampers on living and it also endangers your future mental welfare.

Perhaps you can help yourself or maybe you need expert aid. One way you can help yourself if you feel you need it is to read this booklet. It gives you direction for self help and also tells you where to find more expert help if you require it.

The booklet will be sent to you free if you send your request to Better Mental Health, Post Office Box 2500, New York City, New York.

When modernizing plans close off a door or a window, make the recess an ornamental and functional feature of the room by converting it into a large "shadow box." Money Easy To Get To Improve Homes

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE
AP Newsfeatures

Funds for home improvements, despite all the talk you might hear about a "tight money" market, a readily available through commercial banks and other financial institutions. We have the word of reliable banking sources for this statement.

Making loans is an important part of the business of any financial institution and, we're assured, they're just as eager to serve you as you are to obtain advice and financial help from them.

So, we're told, if you're thinking of installing a new heating system, putting in new plumbing, adding a room, or doing some papering, painting, or insulating, there's no need to put it off just because you can't pay for all the work from your cash reserves.

First, get estimates from reliable contractors on your home improvement project. Then determine how much money you'll need to borrow and how much you can conveniently repay out of your monthly budget. This done, you're ready to talk to a bank or other lender.

Home improvement projects can be financed through personal loans obtained from banks, from credit unions and from small loan companies. In some states, however, laws limit the size of these loans and repayment periods often are shorter than for special home improvement loans.

Aside from direct loans, it also is possible to pay for home improvements on the installment plan by special arrangement with an individual contractor, dealer or supplier.

It is important, however, in considering such installment contracts to determine whether the carrying charges would exceed the interest you would pay for a regular home improvement loan.

There are four principal types of loans which may be available for home improvements through financial institutions. They are (1) conventional bank installment loans, (2) government - insured Title One loans, (3) open - end mortgage advances, and (4) supplemental loans obtained through mortgage refinancing.

Conventional Bank Installment Loans — The bank's major concern here is that the improvement will substantially protect or improve the livability or use of your home and that you will receive certain value for the cost of the project.

The amount and terms of the loan depend primarily on the nature of the improvement and your ability to repay the loan without hardship. These loans are made individually by banks and are not subject to the government-insured Title One loan regulations. Hence, the banks are more flexible generally with regard to the purpose, the amount and the repayment terms of the loan.

While the interest rate usually is slightly higher, some loans not covered under the government-insured plan may be obtained through the bank's own home-improvement loan program.

Government - insured Title One Loans — This plan permits a bank or other qualified lender to advance the money under an insurance arrangement with the Federal Housing Administration. The maximum amount available under this plan is $3,500 and the maximum replayment term is five years for loans above $600.

The interest rate generally is a discount of $5 per $100 each year. Discount means simply that the full charges are deducted from the amount of the loan at the time the money is borrowed.

This financing plan can be used for most basic home improvements. However, it cannot be used for projects "not considered essential to a home such as swimming pools, greenhouses or outdoor fireplaces" or for "appliances and items that are not substantially built into the property."

Open - End Mortgage Loan — Should your home mortgage contain an "open-end" provision, additional funds on the same mortgage may be available to you for home improvement purposes.

A substantial equity usually is required, however. This means that before you can borrow money in this manner, it generally will be required that you have made earlier mortgage payments totaling at least as much as the amount of the new loan.

In this type of loan, your monthly payments may be increased slightly to pay off the additional debt, or the repayment period may be extended beyond the original expiration date.

Supplemental Loans Through Mortgage Refinancing — Should you have a conventional mortgage rather than an "open - end" mortgage, you may be able to obtain funds for home improvements projects by retiring the existing mortgage and obtaining another mortgage in a new amount.

This method of financing, however, usually involves a new title search and recording and other extra fees, but generally your interest rate would be lower than under government - insured loans or other short - term loans.

A Concluling Thought — Regardless of the project, be it a small improvement project or a multiple improvement project involving both products and services, it is generally true that it will be less complicated and more economical to borrow home improvement funds from a bank or financial institution rather than pay the carrying charges involved in installment plan contracts.

Church Lists Eighteenth In Ministry

It is not every church these days that can boast of having in a short period of time as many as 18 young men from its membership preparing to enter the ministry.

This is the experience of the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe. The eighteenth young man there to make this decision is James Kyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Kyle, of 2408 North Eighth Street, West Monroe.

This young man was licensed by his church in a ceremony that took place a few days ago at a Sunday night service of his church.

He has many friends and all expect that he will prove a highly successful minister.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: I believe fully in all that you say as I listen to the Hour of Decision. I do not know if I ever experienced conversion. How does one feel when he is converted? L. T.

ANSWER: The big mistake made by many is to expect a certain feeling tha' accompanies conversion. The decision to receive Jesus Christ is first one of the understanding and then of the will. Because we are so different emotionally, there is no standard kind of feeling. One's conversion must be judged in terms of the moral change and of one's present a titude toward Christ. The Bible says, "Wherefore if any man is in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away, behold all things have become new." Sometime and somewhere that change must come. Those converted in early life usually find the change a mild one whereas those converted late in life frequently find it to be revolutionary. The decisive thing is, are you right now trusting in Christ and Christ alone for salvation? Do you hate sin and love righteousness? If you can answer these in the affirmative, you are certainly one of His.

The visiting leaders are described as follows: Miss Iris Ferren is a special worker with youth on the staff of the department of religious education of the United Christian Missionary society.

Since graduating from Philips University in Oklahoma she has served as religious educational director in the First Chris ian Church, Little Rock; the First Christian Church in Lubbock, Tex.; and the First Christian Church in Omaha, Neb. For the past two years she has served Christian churches in Wyoming. In her capacity of special youth worker she has aided in imparting administrative leadership to approximately 300 Chi Rho Fellowship institutes in the U. S. and Canada.

D. Allison Holt is assistant executive secre ary of the department of religious education of the United Christian Missionary Society.

In 1950 he received the A. B. Degree at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth and in 1952 received the B. D. degree there. A native of New Castle, Ind. he is married and has two daughters.

Dr. Rivera, 27, Assigned For Malaya

The fifth missionary to be sent overseas by the Methodist church in the Philippines within three years was commissioned recently by Bishop Jose L. Valencia, Methodist bishop in the Philippines.

The newest Filipino "foreign" missionary is Dr. Raymundo Rivera, a 27-year-old physician who is being sent to Malaya. Like other Filipino missionaries overseas, Dr. Rivera will be supported by the missionary giving of Philippines Methodists — not by mission funds from the United States.

Dr. Rivera was commissioned in the Kamuning Methodist Church in Quezon City, a suburb of Manila. He will work among the Malayan Chinese who have been resettled in "New Villages" after being removed from jungle fringe areas to escape Communist guerilla raids.

An active churchman, Dr. Rivera has been vice-president of the Methodist Youth Fellowship of the Philippines Annual Conference, youth director of the Manila district and president of the district Young Adult Fellowship. He is a lay preacher and a graduate of the University of Santo Tomas.

The five Filipino overseas missionaries are another evidence of the desire of 'younger churches," those established as a result of American missionary efforts, to become missionary - sending as well as missionary - receiving churches. A similar trend is evident in South America, where Methodists are supporting with their own funds five foreign missionaries.

1st Baptists To Close Drive Today

"Loyalty Day" will be observed at the First Baptist Church today. This will give opportunity for all who failed to sign up pledges last Sunday can still do so today.

The response was excellent last Sunday and it is expected that the total budget of $153,000, will be easily reached, possibly exceeded today.

Following the church service a group of solicitors will go out on a residence canvass of membership who were unable to send in their pledges and in order that no one may be possibly missed.

Multiple Church Offerings Sought

NEW YORK (Special) — Thousands of Protestant churches will join next week in a special coast-to-coast chain of Services of Thanksgiving, launching the 1957-58 Share - Our - Surplus program through which foods from our national stocks of surplus are distributed free to needy people abroad.

Three major observances — one in Washington, D. C., one in Manhattan, Kansas, and one in San Francisco — held simultaneously on Sunday afternoon, November 24th, will spotlight the emphases of each region's churches, through which millions of Protestant Americans of all denominations wi'l give voice to their gratitude to God for the abundance with which America has been favored and for the privilege of sharing their blessings with those in need in other lands.

By the end of 1958, approximately one billion pounds of U. S. government surpluses are scheduled to have been distributed free to hungry people since the beginning of the SOS program in 1954.

The freedom of choice—free agency—was ours in the spirit world, in the life before we came to this earth. A marvelous plan, which we call the plan of salvation or the gospel, was presented by our Heavenly Father to his children. It was a plan to guide their mortal lives on the earth and to bring them back again into the presence of God after they should finish their work here. It contained many principles and many commandments, but it especially provided that they should be given their free agency to obey these commandments or reject them.

Yes, we are responsible for our own actions. Every day we have choices to make. Constantly we are asking ourselves which shall it be? Shall I do this or that? Go to this place or that? Associate with those friends or these? Read good books, especially the Holy Scriptures; attend your church meetings; seek the Lord in prayer and He will not fail you.

Bible Words for Today

ISAIAH 40:31—". . .They who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint." (RSV)

• • •

Even steel gets tired, declare the metallurgists. Bridges, railroad trestles, and supports for buildings are always made several times stronger than ever required against the threat of metal fatigue.

Men get tired too. The routine of the daily tasks, the wear and tear of heavy lifting, the ugliness of the operations of some of the jobs that men have to do, all contribute to the weariness of the flesh. All need the "sabbath rest by Galilee," the "day of rest and gladness," a regular release from work.

But we need more than physical rest from the grinding monotony of the week. We need the spiritual dynamic which releases purpose to our strivings. We need spiritual peace which conserves the energies for better results in spiritual living. We need the joy of divine guidance which, more than anything else, renews our strength.

If the time should come and we should say "Oh what a drudge it is" let's sit down, or lie down, or better still, kneel down, and ask God for divine direction in our lives.

Church Lists Eighteenth In Ministry

It is not every church these days that can boast of having in a short period of time as many as 18 young men from its membership preparing to enter the ministry.

This is the experience of the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in West Monroe. The eighteenth young man there to make this decision is James Kyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Kyle, of 2408 North Eighth Street, West Monroe.

This young man was licensed by his church in a ceremony that took place a few days ago at a Sunday night service of his church.

He has many friends and all expect that he will prove a highly successful minister.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: I believe fully in all that you say as I listen to the Hour of Decision. I do not know if I ever experienced conversion. How does one feel when he is converted? L. T.

ANSWER: The big mistake made by many is to expect a certain feeling tha' accompanies conversion. The decision to receive Jesus Christ is first one of the understanding and then of the will. Because we are so different emotionally, there is no standard kind of feeling. One's conversion must be judged in terms of the moral change and of one's present a titude toward Christ. The Bible says, "Wherefore if any man is in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away, behold all things have become new." Sometime and somewhere that change must come. Those converted in early life usually find the change a mild one whereas those converted late in life frequently find it to be revolutionary. The decisive thing is, are you right now trusting in Christ and Christ alone for salvation? Do you hate sin and love righteousness? If you can answer these in the affirmative, you are certainly one of His.

Thanksgiving Planned Here By Churches

Thanksgiving Day services are slated by a number of churches in Monroe Thursday November 28 a'l as usual held in the morning at 10 o'clock. The downtown churches will have their usual services in the First Baptist church when Dr. George W. Pomeroy, minister of the First Methodist church, will bring the message. Churches that will participate are those of the First Baptist, First Methodist, First Presbyterian and First Christian churches. The public is invited.

Another group of churches will hold a union Thanksgiving service at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Memorial Methodist church. The churches that are to participate are: Covenant Presbyterian, College Place Baptist, Memorial Methodis', St. John's Christian and St. Paul's Methodist churches.

The choir of the Memorial Methodist church will render spec'al music and the Rev. Carnie Burcham will deliever the sermon. The public is cordially invited.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Auburn and North Second street, Monroe, wil have a Thanksgiving service on that day at 11 a.m. The service wil' include the reading of the Thanksgiving Day proclamation by the Presideut of the United States. The sermon lesson will be on Thanksgiving in which the Bible and "Science and Health" will be quoted.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Southside Methodist church Thursday at 10 a.m. The Rev. T. A. Brown, pastor of Gordon Avenue Methodist church will serve as a participant and the Rev. Jamison, pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church will bring the message. Rev. Davis, Stone Avenue Methodist church pastor, wi'l read Scripture and lead in prayer. The chancel choir will participate.

Olla To Observe Thanksgiving

A Union Thanksgiving Service will be held at 7:30 a.m. Thanksgiving morning in the Olla Methodist C'urch with the people of all the churches of the community participating.

Among the ministers to have a part in 45-minute service will be Rev. B. B. Cox, pastor of Olla First Baptist Church who will bring the message, Rev. A. D. St. Amant, Jr, pastor of Olla Methodist Church, pastor host, Rev. T. T. Edwards, pastor of the Pine Hill Baptist Church and Rev. V. W. Hay'urst, pastor of the Church of Christ.

The music will be under the direction of the First Baptist Church Choir and all who would like to be a part of the Thanksgiving choir are invited to practice with the Baptist choir on Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving at 8:15 p.m.

Church Play Is Set On Sunday

"Farmer Brown's Conversion" will be the title of a play to be given today at 6:30 p.m. by the Training Union of Fait'i Baptist church, Jackson and Orange streets, Monroe. The play will be directed by Mrs. Elwin Williams.

The cast of characters will be as follows: Elwin Williams as Farmer Brown, wealthy but opposed to missions; Mrs. Willie Woodard as Mary Brown, Farmer Brown's wife; (mother with a real mother's heart); I. J. Williams, Jr., as Paul Brown, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Brown; Mrs. Percy Powell as Matilda, colored servant; Mrs. H. D. Houston as Esther Charity, (kindly person who becomes interested in an orphan girl; Jim Rainer as Deacon Do-Good, faithful in his church; Miss Gracie Stewart as Pearl Price; Miss Merle Simmons as Ruth Earnest, girl eager to enter mission work.

The pastor, Rev. Willie Woodard and Training Union Director Al Richardson, cordially invite the public to attend.

Dr. Rivera, 27, Assigned For Malaya

The fif'h missionary to be sent overseas by the Methodist church in the Philippines within three years was commissioned recently by Bishop Jose L. Valencia, Methodist bishop in the Philippines.

The newest Filipino "foreign" missionary is Dr. Raymundo Rivera, a 27-year-old physician who is being sent to Malaya. Like other Filipino missionaries overseas, Dr. Rivera will be supported by the missionary giving of Philippines Methodists — not by mission funds from the United States.

Dr. Rivera was commissioned in the Kamuning Methodist Church in Quezon City, a suburb of Manila. He will work among the Malayan Chinese who have been resettled in "New Villages" after being removed from jungle fringe areas to escape Communist guerilla raids.

An active churchman, Dr. Rivera has been vice-president of the Methodist Youth Fellowship of the Philippines Annual Conference, youth director of the Manila district and president of the district Young Adult Fellowship. He is a lay preacher and a graduate of the University of Santo Tomas.

The five Filipino overseas missionaries are another evidence of the desire of 'younger churches," those established as a result of American missionary efforts, to become missionary - sending as well as missionary - receiving churches. A similar trend is evident in South America, where Methodists are supporting with their own funds five foreign missionaries.

1st Baptists To Close Drive Today

"Loyalty Day" will be observed at the First Baptist Church today. This will give opportunity for all who failed to sign up pledges last Sunday can still do so today.

The response was excellent last Sunday and it is expected that the total budget of $153,000, will be easily reached, possibly exceeded today.

Following the church service a group of solicitors will go out on a residence canvass of membership who were unable to send in their pledges and in order that no one may be possibly missed.

Multiple Church Offerings Sought

NEW YORK (Special) — Thousands of Protestant churches will join next week in a special coast-to-coast chain of Services of Thanksgiving, launching the 1957-58 Share - Our - Surplus program through which foods from our national stocks of surplus are distributed free to needy people abroad.

Three major observances — one in Washington, D. C., one in Manhattan, Kansas, and one in San Francisco — held simultaneously on Sunday afternoon, November 24th, will spotlight the emphases of each region's churches, through which millions of Protestant Americans of all denominations wi'l give voice to their gratitude to God for the abundance with which America has been favored and for the privilege of sharing their blessings with those in need in other lands.

By the end of 1958, approximately one billion pounds of U. S. government surpluses are scheduled to have been distributed free to hungry people since the beginning of the SOS program in 1954.

The freedom of choice—free agency—was ours in the spirit world, in the life before we came to this earth. A marvelous plan, which we call the plan of salvation or the gospel, was presented by our Heavenly Father to his children. It was a plan to guide their mortal lives on the earth and to bring them back again into the presence of God after they should finish their work here. It contained many principles and many commandments, but it especially provided that they should be given their free agency to obey these commandments or reject them.

Yes, we are responsible for our own actions. Every day we have choices to make. Constantly we are asking ourselves which shall it be? Shall I do this, or that? Go to this place or that? Associate with those friends or these? Read good books, especially the Holy Scriptures; attend your church meetings; seek the Lord in prayer and He will not fail you.

FRIENDLY CROP — Perry Browning crouches among some of the 10,000 turkeys which make his farm the noisiest in Kentucky.

Turkey Raising Now A Noisy, Highly Mechanized Business

WINCHESTER, Ky. (AP) — As peaceful and quiet as a Blue Grass farm, did you say?

You'll find yourself another phrase if you ever visit Perry Browning. His Clark county acreage lies in the middle of the blue grass country. But quiet? Peaceful?

Not exactly. Perry Browning raises turkeys — 175,000 a year. Multiply that number by the gobbling of one proud bird happily unaware of the imminence of Thanksgiving and you'll get an idea of how scarce is serenity hereabouts.

No longer keyed solely to feasting on Thanksgiving and Christmas, the turkey has become a year - around dish. Of course, the holiday period is an exceptionally busy season on Browning's noisy acres — and it's a good time to pause and consider the progress of the turkey trade.

Browning, a leader in the industry, quit his chicken hatchery 20 years ago and turned to turkeys exclusively.

He now keeps a breeding flock of 25,000 hens which lay an average of 55 eggs each between January and May. New hatchings are started weekly.

In addition to raising 175,000 gobblers on hiw own grounds, he processes about the same number for other producers in the area. And he ships something like one million baby turkeys yearly to both domestic and foreign customers.

Breeding and raising the birds is just part of the operation, however. His modern plant, working something like a factory assembly line, can dress and freeze 90,000 pounds of turkey daily, or five million pounds during the busy fall - winter season. He has storage capacity for one million pounds.

Producers like Browning have invented economies which make the turkey treat a lure to buyers of all classes. The bird used to be a luxury.

Turkeys can be grown quickly now. They can be put on the market six to eight months after coming out of the hatchery.

Improved breeding and proper nutrition, helped along with scientific antibiotics, have shortened the length of production by two months during the 20 years Browning has been in the turkey business. The younger birds also offer greater tenderness and flavor.

Hatchet head - chopping and hand picking have been replaced on the Browning assembly line. If haste is the order, the turkey can be ready for packing and freezing 30 minutes after slaughter. Generally, however, the bird is packed overnight in ice to remove body heat before it is frozen.

Browning is recognized as the most extensive pedigree turkey breeder in this country, and the largest single - owner producer.

As president of the National Turkey Federation a year ago, it was his privilege to present President Eisenhower with his Thanksgiving turkey.

In terms of money, the turkey industry was a 1¾ million dollar enterprise in Kentucky last season, and Kentucky — outside Browning's operation — isn't recognized as a major producing state.

SAYS EASTLAND

Investors May Leak Secrets

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Sen. Eastland (D-Miss) said today it is conceivable that research secrets of U.S defense industries might fall into Soviet hands through hidden investors.

Eastland, chairman of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, made the statement in announcing publication of testimony taken at public hearings last April about the investment of foreign funds in American enterprises.

The witnesses were J. Sinclair Armstrong, then chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and other SEC officials.

Armstrong testified that in the administration of the disclousre provisions of the federal securities laws, "we can recall no case in which the possible infiltration of American industries by foreign interests adverse to the interests of the United States has raised a problem."

However, Eastland said, "Foreign capital of unknown origin is flowing into the United States in increasing amounts through Swiss banks who do not require depositors to identify themselves."

"Many large corporations," Eastland continued, "have research departments which are in the forefront of scientific achievement in this country. Hidden Soviet investment in such a corporation could conceivably make scientific information subject to theft by that subversive stockholder."

The subcommittee has expressed concern lest Soviet or other Communist sources acquire control of a U.S. defense corporation by anonymous purchase of stock through unidentified accounts in Swiss banks.

Armstrong and his aides, however, testified they did' not believe that the acquisition by foreign interests of a major or controlling interest in a domestic corporation could go undetected—partly because the American management would be very much aware of it.

The principal problem raised by unidentified foreign accounts, Armstrong said, is the enforcement of anti-fraud provisions of the securities laws.

Scientists Urge Firing At Moon

HANSCOM AIR FORCE BASE, Mass., Nov. 23 (UP) — Scientists today confidently discussed a rocket firing to the moon as a result of the U.S. penetration of interplanetary space with artificial meteors.

In Pasadena, Calif., Dr. Fritz Zwicky, California Institute of Technology Astrophysicist, said America should bombard the moon and other nearby planets with two-pound pellets.

Maurice Dubin of the geophysical research directorate of the Air Force Cambridge research nouncement of the breakthrough into interplanetary space "undoubtedly" prepared the way for a rocket to the moon.

Ride Piggy Back

Dr. John S. Rinehart, assistant director of the Smithsonian astrophysical observatory at Cambridge, said artificial meteorites could be hooked onto rockets to furnish information need to help pave the way for flights to the moon "and beyond."

Friday's announcement made here said the latest space experiment believed to be man's first penetration into interplanetary space, began Oct. 16 at Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo, N. M.

Shaped charges of tiny, ball-bearing-sized aluminum pellets were blasted into outer space and at least two of the tiny meteorites escaped the earth's gravity and possibly were drawn into the orbit of the sun, scientists said.

Break New Barrier

The Soviet Sputniks are still wi hin the earth's pull of gravity but the new "space pills", with speeds of 40,000 miles per hour, apparently have broken through that barrier.

Zwicky, who suggested the pellet experiment, said that firing a two-pound slug at the moon would be invaluable for research. He said it could be tracked until it hit the moon, causing a tremendous dust cloud that would be visible through telescopes.

"By using spectroscopes, we could learn much about the moon —composition, whether it had sand or stone or what on its surface", he said.

City Schools Hit High Note In Music Instruction

Orchestral Program Is Far-Reaching

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

After a "test" year, Monroe is now fully launched into an orchestra in the elementary and junior high school grades . . . and has the distinction of being the only community in Northeast Louisiana with a "string instrument" program on the elementary level.

An outgrowth of the bands in the city grade and high schools, the All City Orchestra is composed of members from all fourth through eighth grades.

"We hope to provide a balanced music program, with band, orchestra and chorus in the schools," explained Miss Jonnie Bankhead, instructor of bands and instrumental music in the six elementary schools, and main force behind the formation of the program.

A graduate of Northeast State College, where she majored in music instrument supervision, Miss Bankhead believes that the orchestra opens up a new field of music, aside from the marches taught for bands.

Classical Realm

The realm of classical music may now be entered, even by fourth - gradé youngsters, through the orchestra program.

The orchestra program was approved in the spring of 1956 by Superintendent Van Odom and the City School board after Miss Bankhead presented an outline of the funds which would be required for the string program for three years.

The test began in September, 1956, with the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of Georgia Tucker, Barkdull - Faulk and Sherrouse schools.

Segments of a 40 - piece orchestra were scattered throughout the schools, with seven cellos, 23 violins and 10 wind instruments.

With one teacher, the students progressed at the same rate and with the same type program procedure. Concentrated practice together, in addition to the lessons at individual schools, produced the nucleus of the All-City Orchestra.

Many Appearances

They also participated in the spring concert with the Little Symphony of the College, with Eloy Fominaya, concert master for the Twin City Symphony, conducting.

Success during the first year led to the establishment of the orchestra program in all elementary and junior high schools this fall. Plum Street and Lexington schools were added, and the total of string instruments in the grade schools is now 51, with 40 violins and 11 cellos.

The junior highs have a full string orchestra: 14 violins, six cellos, four basses and two violas.

Many people think that boys don't play violin — but that's not the case. Twenty - six boys and 25 girls are studying the string instruments in the grade schools, and "the boys are the real All-American type, interested in sports and on the football teams, besides studying music," revealed the instructor.

Class Lessons

Class lessons take place during school hours, for 30 minutes or one hour, twice a week. Lesson assignments include short exercises. Lessons began three weeks after the start of school, and the youngsters are now playing well-known melodies and simplified versions of hymns.

The main stress lies on teaching coordination between the fingers of the left hand, which go up and down on the strings, and the right hand, which moves back and forth using the bow.

With a standing request from city schools for an orchestra program at any time, the young musicians will begin practicing together one Saturday morning each month. An informal demonstration has already been given before the Monroe - West Monroe Teachers Association, as an example of what is being done through string instruction in public schools.

The group has also received an invitation to play before the state P. - T. A. convention at Baton Rouge next April, and the Fifth District Music Festival in Ruston in March.

The Christmas P.-T. A. program at Georgia Tucker School will include a small, but excellent, orchestra of seven violins and two cellos, in conjunction with the chorus. Miss Hermione Driskell, special vocal music teacher in the city's elementary grades, will conduct the chorus.

Opportunity Offered

The orchestra program offers an opportunity for youngsters who would not be interested in band instruments, and also forms the groundwork for complete instrumental groups. Students playing wind instruments in the bands now have the chance to play orchestral music with the string section. Where an overture requires string instruments, in addition to band instruments, proper sound may now be produced.

All violas are individually owned, but cellos, basses and violas are furnished by the schools.

"The size of the violin also appeals to small children, and the majority of instruments in the elementary schools are three-fourths of the usual adult instrument size," she added.

Full symphonies in Texas schools and violin lessons on half-size violins in Kansas kindergartens, are an inspiration to schools in Monroe.

Starting in the elementary schools, the orchestra program will eventually reach Neville High School, and those who then decide to continue in music at the college level will be "superior material," explained the instructor.

Minute as they may seem, the two lessons attended by youngsters in Monroe this week will be the basis of a fuller appreciation of life and a vital part of the lasting knowledge which comes from a complete education.

GREENVILLE, Miss., Nov. 23 (AP) — Six Negroes chiseled and sawed the hinges off a heavy steel door last night to escape from Washington County jail. One was recaptured today.

Officers said the escapees squeezed through a sewer pipe passageway to a skylight, scrambled onto the roof, climbed down a rope of blankets and fled in a stolen truck.

The big hinges were welded into the steel wall but prisoners in other second floor cells a few feet away told deputies they neither heard nor saw anything before the escape.

The escapees were listed as James Henry Harris, 18, Greenville, charged with stealing the vehicle police believe was used in the escape; Willy Mitchell, 34, Greenville, awaiting grand jury action on murder charges; Hezekiah Lewis, 29,Greenville, charged with receiving stolen property; Charley Winters, 20, Leland, charged with nine recent burglaries; Fred Myers, 20, Leland, charged with burglary, and Carl Hudson, 18, Greenville, charged with grand larceny.

Deputies captured Mitchell near Benoit in Bolivar County.

The others were being sought by officers in several states.

The escape was believed made in a truck owned by an air conditioning firm across the street from the two-story jail. Harris was being held in connection with an earlier theft of the same vehicle.

WRONG ROW

AUBURN, N. Y. —(UP)— Auburn Democrats, campaigning to elect their candidates in a municipal election, sent out cards to voters telling them to "Vote Row A All The Way." They sent out other cards the next day when they realized row A on the voting machines listed the entire Republican slate.

COWS ELECTROCUTED

SOUTH DAYTON, N. Y. —(UP) — Four valuable Holstein cows from one of western New York's largest herds were electrocuted by a short circuit in the motor of a milking machine. The owner said the cows apparently died when they attempted to drink from containers mounted at each stanchion.

Girl Explorer's Tour Interrupted By Romance

By JANE DOLINGER

BOGOTA, Colombia, Nov. 23 (AP) —One occupational hazard of being a girl explorer is that occasionally a romantic episode pops up, having nothing whatever to do with the current venture.

If you don't remain hard-headed (and hard-hearted), you clutter up your project, sometimes fatally.

If you do—there come times when you're swatting mosquitoes and dining alone on toasted worms deep in the jungle that you bitterly regret having such a strong, purposeful character.

But here in Bogota, a romantic interlude that interjected itself into my orderly plans was both inforgettable and completely painless, even in retrospect. The romance attached to the man and his situation. I was only a sympathetic confidante.

Before plunging into the Colombian jungles to search for emeralds I decided to visit the Zipaquira Salt Cathedral, an hour's drive from Bogota.

As my driver and I started off in a hotel car, the manager hailed us.

Taking Guest

Would I mind taking along an other guest who also wanted to see the underground church built entirely of salt?

Assured of my willingness to do him a favor, he disappeared into the hotel and returned in a moment accompanied by a tall, handsome Englishman.

This was Peter Townsend, the manager introduced him proudly. And to myself I identified him further: one of the world's best-known jilted suitors, the former boyfriend of Princess Margaret Rose of England.

As we drove along and he chatted about his around-the-world jeep trip, I covertly looked him over.

His brown hair was flecked with gray at the temples. His eyes were a somber blue, and bloodshot from the strain of almost constant driving. He looked tired —and very inconspicuous. Certainly no one would pick him out in a crowd as a celebrity.

He was, in short, a typical English gentleman — polite, tactful, at times slightly befuddled. And a jolly companion.

He said that in the last 10 months he had visited the Far East and now planned to drive around South America. From Rio de Janeiro eventually he would sail for Afghanistan before exploring Africa. He's sending back to a London newspaper every two weeks a column about his adventures.

Travel

For another year he will travel the world, then retire to write his first book. So far he has written more than 100,000 words—all in longhand because he can't type—and he hasn't reached the half-way mark in his travels.

He complained bitterly about being molested by photographers who picked up news of his arrival and often met him 50 miles outside a city. They would follow him so closely while he was in town that if he stopped suddenly, everybody fell into a scrambled heap.

We noticed no one following us on our drive to the Zipaquira salt mine, which covers an entire mountain. The solitude didn't last long however.

Our driver first had to secure permission for us to enter. Then we entered a long narrow tunnel cut into the heart of the mountain.

We Stopped

At last we stopped at the entrance to the cathedral. Within the church the ceilings are at least 50 feet high, with a dozen or more altars and religious statues carved out of pure salt.

The dimly lighted interior was so large that more than 10,000 people could attend religious services without being crowded.

By this time the photographers from Bogota, 25 miles away, caught up with Pete and insisted on taking dozens of pictures of him at the salt mine. He bore up with typical British stoicism.

He warned me about driving along Colombian highways after 6 p.m. Numerous bandits hiding in the mountains have held up many motorists and even killed several.

The famous Muzo Mine is only about six hours away by car, but the trail winds in and out of the desolate mountains and ambush can happen at a thousand different places.

At the mine there will be that deadly snake, the bushmaster, to contend with. Raids from the savage Muzo Indians are another danger. Many of them have been captured and forced to work in the mines which they consider should be rightly their own property.

Before the Spainards conquered the Incan empire, emeralds had a significant religious value and were used exclusively to decorate idols and temples.

My search for the fabulous stones could turn out to be my most exciting adventure. It was the last thing in my mind four years ago when I left my humdrum life in Miami as a secretary to explore the far places of the world.

But one adventure leads to another, and here I was in the progressive city of Bogota about to start on the hazardous trip.

Teachers Urged To Hike Quality

BATON ROUGE, Nov. 23 (AP) — State auditor William Dodd, a former president of the Louisiana Teachers Assn., said today the LTA should take the lead in improving quality in education as well as fighting for higher pay.

But he added:

"If America is losing the race for world supremacy in scientific fields, we, the public, can blame no one but ourselves. We have failed to provide adequately for our schools and we have not demanded of our educational system the quality of product that the system is capable of turning out."

The statement from the former teacher, who drafted key education legislation while a member of the Legislature, came as education leaders gathered in Shreveport for the opening Monday of the annual LTA convention.

Lists Program

Dodd suggested the LTA, representing major education groups:

1. "Give its legislative committee a mandate to request of the 1958 Legislature a system of priorities for state spending and insist that the appropriation for operating our public schools be the number one priority on the list.

2. "Set up an evaluation group of professional educators to study our present school system and make the results available to the 1958 Legislature and the public. Investigations by outsiders and noneducators are a waste of time and money."

The United School Committee, which works with the LTA, has endorsed renewed efforts to enact gahering tax to finance a teacher pay raise. A similar bid last summer failed.

The 1956 Legislature adopted the higher pay scale but failed to finance it. Teachers presently are getting about half the new schedule.

Leader In Education

Dodd, LTA president in the 1940-41 school year, as a House member wrote legislation dedicating oil severance taxes to education and lieutenant governor in 1948 pushed enactment of a minimum teachers salary schedule and other similar legislation.

"We have been much more anxious to construct new gymnasiums and athletic fields than provide adequate laboratory facilities for science," he continued. "Most of us have favored placing more emphasis on extra-curricular programs than on fundamental subjects such as english, mathematics and science.

"Dedicated classroom teachers have often gone unrewarded and their good work unnoticed," Dodd said.

"Good science teachers cannot be recruited unless we pay them as much as industry is offering them, and unless we get good teachers and provide first class facilities, our students will never approach, mush less reach, the limits of their capabilities.

"We need to provide more money for schools, but we also need to see that it is spent on improving the quality and not just the quantity of the end product."

He concluded, "The LTA can do a real service to its membership and the public by taking the initiative in a progressive and all-out effort dedicated to our getting a properly financed and adequately balanced public schools program."

Lloyd Denies Undercut Move Against France

BURY ST. EDMUNDS, Eng., Nov. 23 (UP) —British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd tonight denied that Britain sent arms to Tunisia to undercut French influence in North Africa.

"Our sole purpose was to prevent Communist infiltration of North Africa," he said in a conservative party speech here.

"There have been some reports that our action had behind it some economic purpose, that in some way we were trying to replace French influence in North Africa.

"I can give a flat and categorical denial to that allegation," he said.

The American and British shipments of arms to Tunisia caused great concern inthe French government last week with French legislators walking out of the NATO parliamentary meeting then in progress.

Informed sources said the dispute also almost wrecked plans for an Anglo - British summit conference, but Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and Lloyd will fly to Paris Monday for talks on the issue with French Premier Felix Gaillard.

Lloyd said he regretted the "difference of opinion" with France over the supply of British and American arms to Tunisia but that the differences "arose after much discussion and consultation with the French authorities."

"Our sole purpose was to prevent Communist infiltration of North Africa. We have not changed our views as to what we did and the prime minister and I are looking forward to discussing all aspects of the matter frankly with the French ministers on Monday."

Dallas Fires Fatal To Three

By UNITED PRESS

A man, woman and boy have burned to death in Dallas house fires in the last two days and an elderly woman was in critical condition after a gas heater set fire to her housecoat.

Henderson Warner, 43, and Terry Joe Edwards, 7, were burned to death in a house in south Dallas Saturday. The fire started in a sheet metal heater.

Mrs. Henrietta Regan, 84, was in critical condition from burns suffered Friday.

Mrs. Ella Mae Alexander was burned to death in a servants' cottage Friday.

Twenty persons have died in house and apartment fires this year in Dallas.

KILLIAN NOT ENOUGH

Stennis, Bridges Seek Missile Czar

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP) — Sens. Bridges (R-NH and Stennis (D-Miss.) said today the United States needs a missile czar and still lacks one despite President Eisenhower's appointment of James R. Killian Jr. as scientific coordinator.

Bridges said members of the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, on which he is senior Republican, have been informed that Killian's activities are being limited largely to those of adviser.

Bridges said William A. Holaday remains in operational charge of the missile production program but there is no clear sign that either Killian or Holaday has top command.

"That isn't the way I understood it when the Killian appointment was made, but that is the way it is," Bridges said. "We have got to have a top missile man with authority to make this program work at top speed.

"He can be called director, coordinator or czar. I don't care what his title is, so long as he has the authority to get the job done."

The Senate Preparedness subcommittee, headed by Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, begins public hearings Monday on what Johnson said is a missile program "not adequate to meet the needs of our nation."

Bridges and Stennis, another member of the subcommittee agreed in separate interviews that one of the prime objectives of the group will be to clear up what they regard as a division of authority between Killian and Holaday.

Killian is on leave from the presidency of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Holaday is a former director of research for the Socony-Mobil Oil Co. He has been called as a witness, but Killian has not been asked to testify in hearings opening Monday with Dr. Edward Teller, called the "father of the H-bomb" as first before the microphone. Public hearings will be televised.

"I want to make sure that someone is given the authority at the very top level to correlate all of the missile programs and to make the decisions and then put them into effect," Stennis said. "If anyone has been given that authority it certainly has not been made clear."

Stennis said he believes it is essential for a director with full presidential backing to move to overcome what he described as "a division of money, authority and talent" in the missile and satellite programs.

Bridges said the subcommittee also will go into the question whether any scientists have been "syphoned off" from the missile and satellite programs to work on the international "Atoms for Peace" setup brought into being as the result of Eisenhower's original suggestion.

"We want to make certain also," he said, "that some sort of clearing house of scientific information is set up so that every agency working on missiles and satellites can be kept abreast of discoveries that other agencies make.

"There has been too much interservice rivalry—too much of a tendency to keep these discoveries from the other fellow."

Both Bridges and Stennis said they believe the subcommittee's inquiry could be conducted on a non-partisan basis. Stennis said it is more important "to get ready for the future" than to try to fix blame for the lag exposed when the Russians fired two sputniks into space.

However, an outline of the groups' projected hearings as read to reporters by Johnson indicated testimony will be taken in several controversial fields.

The outline mentioned "consistent underestimates" of Russian scientific progress. It brought up the issue of whether there was a "late start" in this country on development of missiles.

Some Democrats have accused the Eisenhower administration of failing to estimate the Russian scientific ability accurately. Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn has contended that the administration of former President Truman skimped on missile development and let the Russians get ahead.

The hearing suggested the possibility there was an American "lack of the will to take proper risks" and that there was an "absence of a real integrated war plan." The outline also mentioned budget balancing as a possible reason for falling behind the Russians.

IN ONTARIO

Cecile Dionne Wed Before TV Cameras

CORBEIL, Ont., Nov. 23 (AP) — Cecile Dionne was married before TV cameras today in this remote parish where she and her famous quintuplet sisters grew to young womanhood.

In the old, familiar Sacre Coeur de Jesu Church, Cecile, 23, became the wife of Philippe Langlois, 26, a Montreal TV technician. The bride seemed a little on edge as she appeared in the little church, half filled with more than 100 guests, sightseers and newspaper, radio, and TV reporters.

The church was lighted by the glare of floodlights as cameras recorded the scene on film for televising.

Cecile closed her eyes and breathed heavily before her father Oliva Dionne, took her by the arm for the walk down the aisle. She wore a long, handmade gown of peau de soie. It was covered with Swiss lace, embroidered and covered in front and back with pearls. Her veil was elbow length. It was held by a pearl circlet brilliant with sequins. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and chrysanthemums, the same flowers that decked the church.

At the altar, Cecile appeared composed. She said "oui" clearly as she and Langlois exchanged vows. The Rev. Paul Sylvestre, the parish priest who taught the quints their catechism, pronounced them man and wife.

In the front pew sat Mrs. Dionne and two of the four living quintuplets, Marie and Annette, the latter married only a month. Yvonne, recovering from a severe attack of influenza, missed the wedding, just as she had to miss Annette's. The fifth quint, Emilie, lies buried in the parish churchyard. She died in 1954.

This was far from the simple wedding of Annette in Montreal. The first of the sisters to be married, Annette was wed to Germain Allard Oct. 11 before only a handful of friends and relatives.

As she left for the wedding reception, Cecile draped a $2,000 mink stole over her shoulders against the chill wind whistling about the little church high on a snow-capped hill.

Her attendants wore gowns of blue lace over tulle and taffeta. They were Mrs. Daniel Dionne, a sister-in-law from nearby North Bay, and Mrs. Gaston Genest of Quebec, sister of the groom. The best man was Laurent Langlois of Quebec, the groom's brother. Louise Roux, a Montreal friend of Cecile, was maid of honor.

Among those invited but missing was Mrs. Joseph Labelle, the midwife who ushered the quints into the world. She is ill.

The couple will return after a three-week honeymoon somewhere in California to their rented seven-room home on the lakefront of Lachine, a Montreal suburb. They spent their last few days in Montreal decorating and painting the home. They moved drapes, furniture, and silverware.

They were engaged in September after a three-year courtship. Langlois is an audio-technician with the Canadian Broadcasting Co.

Man 'Borrows' $6 For Trip In Orleans Theft

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (UP)— A gracious burglar broke into a French Quarter apartment today and "borrowed" $6. His purpose: "A trip to Mexico."

The victim, Carol Sharpe, said the early morning bandit put a pillow over her face and told her not to look at him as he rummaged through her purse.

He took $6, leaving $10 still in the purse. And he promised to return the $6.

"If he could make it to Mexico on $6, I'd like to take that tour myself," Miss Sharpe said of her intruder, who obviously isn't going to travel first-class.

Ike Amends Disaster Area Designations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (UP)— President Eisenhower amended a "Major Disaster" designation for Louisiana today to include damage by recent tornadoes.

The action, taken at the request of Gov. Earl K. Long, allows Louisiana to use some of the $3,750,000 federal funds allocated earlier after flood and hurricane disasters, to help repair tornado - damaged areas.

The White House said federal civil defense surveys show that federal tornado help is justified "in view of the heavy burden already being carried by state and local governments" because of flood and hurricane losses.

The report added, however, that the additional assistance "can be made with funds already allocated."

Dynamite Rips Roofing Firm; 11 Injured

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 23 (UP) — A dynamite explosion in a roofing company here early today injured 11 persons, eight of them children, but none seriously.

The blast, at about 2:15 a.m. MST, leveled the Duncan Roofing Co. in the industrial area of southeast Phoenix. It caused a fire which severely damaged the home of the company's owner — Coley Duncan.

The tremendous percussion of the blast also ripped open the walls of several nearby houses and shattered windows in a two-blocks area.

The explosion woke up most of Phoenix, but did not stir Duncan, who said: "I'm a sound sleeper." His children, stunned by the explosion, woke him up to help him get them free from rubble blown in on them.

Most seriously injured was Duncan's 17-year-old daughter, Betty Jean, who suffered a broken pelvis. Duncan, his wife, a grown daughter, along with five other smaller Duncan children and a grandchild, were treated for shock. A woman 20 blocks away was so shocked by the noise of the blast her husband had to take her to a hospital for emergency treatment.

Investigators and firemen worked most of today to find the cause of the explosion of dynamite blasting powder and dynamite caps stores at the company. The area remained roped off as the dynamite caps were being picked up by a cleanup detail over a three block area.

3 Persons Injured In Accidents

FERRIDAY (Special — Three persons were hospitalized in two separate highway accidents on Highway 65 near here yesterday.

W. K. HUNT, 60, of Baton Rouge and his wife, Jewel Hunt, 52, were in Ferriday hospital following an accident at the Louisiana and Arkansas railroad crossing south of the Ferriday city limits. Hunt suffered deep lacerations about the face and neck and his wife sustained a broken left leg, right arm and right index finger as well as cuts about the right eye.

The accident occurred about 9 a.m. when Hunt, hearing a train whistle for the crossing, applied his brakes and skidded off the rain-slick highway. The car turned over and skidded onto the tracks. Witnesses stated the train, proceeding slowly, was able to stop before striking the car.

In a second accident involving two cars Mrs. Leslie Dale, 24, of Gonzales, suffered back and leg injuries. She was reported in satisfactory condition today at Ferriday hospital.

The collision occurred when the driver of the car in which Mrs. Dale was a passenger turned across the highway toward a driveway about five miles south of Ferriday and into the path of another vehicle. No other injuries were reported in the accident.

TURNCOAT FREED—Dressed in civilian clothes, Edward Dickenson, 27-year-old Korean War turncoat from Cracker's Neck, Va., walks away from front gate of the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., after his release. The former Army corporal was sentenced to a 10-year term after his conviction by a court martial May 4, 1954, for collaborating with the enemy while a prisoner of war. This term later was reduced to five years and further reduced by credit for good behavior. His first words as he left the prison: "I'm sure glad to get out of here." (AP Wirephoto)

DICKINSON

Turncoat Released From U.S. Prison

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 23 (UP)—Ex-GI Edward Dickenson, former Korean War prisoner who dislikes being called a turncoat, was freed from the U S. disciplinary barracks today with the hope of becoming a Baptist minister.

There was little bitterness in the 27-year-old former backwoods corporal who said he has had 90 days of freedom in the past seven years.

"I guess those Army guys just did their duty in sending me to prison," he said with a smile. Those Army officers and the Chinese together—the Chinese took me prisoner—I guess they just did what they had to do."

Dickenson, of Big Stone Gap. Va., served 3 1-2 years of a five year sentence and was freed on good behavior. He originally was sentenced to 10 years at hard labor, but the sentence was reduced to five years last March 29.

Dickenson said he hopes to enter the Free Will Baptist Bible college at Nashville, Tenn., in January to begin his study for the ministry.

"Money will be the biggest problem," he told the United Press. 'I got the equivalent of a high school education at the D-P (disciplinary barracks) and think I can meet the entrance requirements."

Dickenson had a fifth grade education and was 20 years old when he enlisted in the Army in 1950 shortly before the Korean War began. In addition to getting his high school education at the D-P, he also attended a furniture repair and cabinet making school and said he hoped to operate a furniture repair shop in Nashville while going to Bible college.

"I'm going to do my best to teach people about the threat of communism—teach them what the Communists are trying to do," Dickenson said. He left the prison with the Rev. Lester Jones, Baptist organizer in Kansas City. Jones said he feared the Communists might take over this country within 10 years.

Teachers Urged To Hike Quality

BATON ROUGE, Nov. 23 (AP) — State auditor William Dodd, a former president of the Louisiana Teachers Assn., said today the LTA should take the lead in improving quality in education as well as fighting for higher pay.

But he added:

"If America is losing the race for world supremacy in scientific fields, we, the public, can blame no one but ourselves. We have failed to provide adequately for our schools and we have not demanded of our educational system the quality of product that the system is capable of turning out."

The statement from the former teacher, who drafted key education legislation while a member of the Legislature, came as education leaders gathered in Shreveport for the opening Monday of the annual LTA convention.

Lists Program

Dodd suggested the LTA, representing major education groups:

1. "Give its legislative committee a mandate to request of the 1958 Legislature a system of priorities for state spending and insist that the appropriation for operating our public schools be the number one priority on the list.

2. "Set up an evaluation group of professional educators to study our present school system and make the results available to the 1958 Legislature and the public. Investigations by outsiders and noneducators are a waste of time and money."

The United School Committee, which works with the LTA, has endorsed renewed efforts to enact gahering tax to finance a teacher pay raise. A similar bid last summer failed.

The 1956 Legislature adopted the higher pay scale but failed to finance it. Teachers presently are getting about half the new schedule.

Leader In Education

Dodd, LTA president in the 1940-41 school year, as a House member wrote legislation dedicating oil severance taxes to education and lieutenant governor in 1948 pushed enactment of a minimum teachers salary schedule and other similar legislation.

"We have been much more anxious to construct new gymnasiums and athletic fields than provide adequate laboratory facilities for science," he continued. "Most of us have favored placing more emphasis on extra-curricular programs than on fundamental subjects such as english, mathematics and science.

"Dedicated classroom teachers have often gone unrewarded and their good work unnoticed," Dodd said.

"Good science teachers cannot be recruited unless we pay them as much as industry is offering them, and unless we get good teachers and provide first class facilities, our students will never approach, mush less reach, the limits of their capabilities.

"We need to provide more money for schools, but we also need to see that it is spent on improving the quality and not just the quantity of the end product."

He concluded, "The LTA can do a real service to its membership and the public by taking the initiative in a progressive and all-out effort dedicated to our getting a properly financed and adequately balanced public schools program."

Lloyd Denies Undercut Move Against France

BURY ST. EDMUNDS, Eng., Nov. 23 (UP) —British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd tonight denied that Britain sent arms to Tunisia to undercut French influence in North Africa.

"Our sole purpose was to prevent Communist infiltration of North Africa," he said in a conservative party speech here.

"There have been some reports that our action had behind it some economic purpose, that in some way we were trying to replace French influence in North Africa.

'I can give a flat and categorical denial to that allegation," he said.

The American and British shipments of arms to Tunisia caused great concern inthe French government last week with French legislators walking out of the NATO parliamentary meeting then in progress.

Informed sources said the dispute also almost wrecked plans for an Anglo - British summit conference, but Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and Lloyd will fly to Paris Monday for talks on the issue with French Premier Felix Gaillard.

Lloyd said he regretted the "difference of opinion" with France over the supply of British and American arms to Tunisia but that the differences "arose after much discussion and consultation with the French authorities."

"Our sole purpose was to prevent Communist infiltration of North Africa. We have not changed our views as to what we did and the prime minister and I are looking forward to discussing all aspects of the matter frankly with the French ministers on Monday."

KILLIAN NOT ENOUGH

Stennis, Bridges Seek Missile Czar

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP) — Sens. Bridges (R-NH and Stennis (D-Miss.) said today the United States needs a missile czar and still lacks one despite President Eisenhower's appointment of James R. Killian Jr. as scientific coordinator.

Bridges said members of the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, on which he is senior Republican, have been informed that Killian's activities are being limited largely to those of adviser.

Bridges said William A. Holaday remains in operational charge of the missile production program but there is no clear sign that either Killian or Holaday has top command.

"That isn't the way I understood it when the Killian appointment was made, but that is the way it is," Bridges said. "We have got to have a top missile man with authority to make this program work at top speed.

"He can be called director, coordinator or czar. I don't care what his title is, so long as he has the authority to get the job done."

The Senate Preparedness subcommittee, headed by Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, begins public hearings Monday on what Johnson said is a missile program "not adequate to meet the needs of our nation."

Bridges and Stennis, another member of the subcommittee agreed in separate interviews that one of the prime objectives of the group will be to clear up what they regard as a division of authority between Killian and Holaday.

Killian is on leave from the presidency of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Holaday is a former director of research for the Socony-Mobil Oil Co. He has been called as a witness, but Killian has not been asked to testify in hearings opening Monday with Dr. Edward Teller, called the "father of the H-bomb" as first before the microphone. Public hearings will be televised.

"I want to make sure that someone is given the authority at the very top level to correlate all of the missile programs and to make the decisions and then put them into effect," Stennis said. "If anyone has been given that authority it certainly has not been made clear."

Stennis said he believes it is essential for a director with full presidential backing to move to overcome what he described as "a division of money, authority and talent" in the missile and satellite programs.

Bridges said the subcommittee also will go into the question whether any scientists have been "syphoned off" from the missile and satellite programs to work on the international "Atoms for Peace" setup brought into being as the result of Eisenhower's original suggestion.

"We want to make certain also," he said, "that some sort of clearing house of scientific information is set up so that every agency working on missiles and satellites can be kept abreast of discoveries that other agencies make.

"There has been too much interservice rivalry—too much of a tendency to keep these discoveries from the other fellow."

Both Bridges and Stennis said they believe the subcommittee's inquiry could be conducted on a non-partisan basis. Stennis said it is more important "to get ready for the future" than to try to fix blame for the lag exposed when the Russians fired two sputniks into space.

However, an outline of the groups' projected hearings as read to reporters by Johnson indicated testimony will be taken in several controversial fields.

The outline mentioned "consistent underestimates" of Russian scientific progress. It brought up the issue of whether there was a "late start" in this country on development of missiles.

Some Democrats have accused the Eisenhower administration of failing to estimate the Russian scientific ability accurately. Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn has contended that the administration of former President Truman skimped on missile development and let the Russians get ahead.

The hearing suggested the possibility there was an American "lack of the will to take proper risks" and that there was an "absence of a real integrated war plan." The outline also mentioned budget balancing as a possible reason for falling behind the Russians.

IN ONTARIO

Cecile Dionne Wed Before TV Cameras

CORBEIL, Ont., Nov. 23 (AP) — Cecile Dionne was married before TV cameras today in this remote parish where she and her famous quintuplet sisters grew to young womanhood.

In the old, familiar Sacre Coeur de Jesu Church, Cecile, 23, became the wife of Philippe Langlois, 26, a Montreal TV technician. The bride seemed a little on edge as she appeared in the little church, half filled with more than 100 guests, sightseers and newspaper, radio, and TV reporters.

The church was lighted by the glare of floodlights as cameras recorded the scene on film for televising.

Cecile closed her eyes and breathed heavily before her fatherl Oliva Dionne, took her by the arm for the walk down the aisle. She wore a long, handmade gown of peau de soie. It was covered with Swiss lace, embroidered and covered in front and back with pearls. Her veil was elbow length. It was held by a pearl circlet brilliant with sequins. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and chrysanthemums, the same flowers that decked the church.

At the altar, Cecile appeared composed. She said "oui" clearly as she and Langlois exchanged vows. The Rev. Paul Sylvestre, the parish priest who taught the quints their catechism, pronounced them man and wife.

In the front pew sat Mrs. Dionne and two of the four living quintuplets, Marie and Annette, the latter married only a month. Yvonne, recovering from a severe attack of influenza, missed the wedding, just as she had to miss Annette's. The fifth quint, Emilie, lies buried in the parish churchyard. She died in 1954.

This was far from the simple wedding of Annette in Montreal. The first of the sisters to be married, Annette was wed to Germain Allard Oct. 11 before only a handful of friends and relatives.

As she left for the wedding reception, Cecile draped a $2,000 mink stole over her shoulders against the chill wind whistling about the little church high on a snow-capped hill.

Her attendants wore gowns of blue lace over tulle and taffeta. They were Mrs. Daniel Dionne, a sister-in-law from nearby North Bay, and Mrs. Gaston Genest of Quebec, sister of the groom. The best man was Laurent Langlois of Quebec, the groom's brother. Louise Roux, a Montreal friend of Cecile, was maid of honor.

Among those invited but missing was Mrs. Joseph Labelle, the midwife who ushered the quints into the world. She is ill.

The couple will return after a three-week honeymoon somewhere in California to their rented seven-room home on the lakefront of Lachine, a Montreal suburb. They spent their last few days in Montreal decorating and painting the home. They moved drapes, furniture, and silverware.

They were engaged in September after a three-year courtship. Langlois is an audio-technician with the Canadian Broadcasting Co.

Man 'Borrows' $6 For Trip In Orleans Theft

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23 (UP)— A gracious burglar broke into a French Quarter apartment today and "borrowed" $6. His purpose: "A trip to Mexico."

The victim, Carol Sharpe, said the early morning bandit put a pillow over her face and told her not to look at him as he rummaged through her purse.

He took $6, leaving $10 still in the purse. And he promised to return the $6.

"If he could make it to Mexico on $6, I'd like to take that tour myself," Miss Sharpe said of her intruder, who obviously isn't going to travel first-class.

Ike Amends Disaster Area Designations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (UP)— President Eisenhower amended a "Major Disaster" designation for Louisiana today to include damage by recent tornadoes.

The action, taken at the request of Gov. Earl K. Long, allows Louisiana to use some of the $3,750,000 federal funds allocated earlier after flood and hurricane disasters, to help repair tornado - damaged areas.

The White House said federal civil defense surveys show that federal tornado help is justified "in view of the heavy burden already being carried by state and local governments" because of flood and hurricane losses.

The report added, however, that the additional assistance "can he made with funds already allocated."

Dynamite Rips Roofing Firm; 11 Injured

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 23 (UP) — A dynamite explosion in a roofing company here early today injured 11 persons, eight of them children, but none seriously.

The blast, at about 2:15 a.m. MST, leveled the Duncan Roofing Co. in the industrial area of southeast Phoenix. It caused a fire which severely damaged the home of the company's owner — Coley Duncan.

The tremendous percussion of the blast also ripped open the walls of several nearby houses and shattered windows in a two-blocks area.

The explosion woke up most of Phoenix, but did not stir Duncan, who said: "I'm a sound sleeper." His children, stunned by the explosion, woke him up to help him get them free from rubble blown in on them.

Most seriously injured was Duncan's 17-year-old daughter, Betty Jean, who suffered a broken pelvis. Duncan, his wife, a grown daughter, along with five other smaller Duncan children and a grandchild, were treated for shock. A woman 20 blocks away was so shocked by the noise of the blast her husband had to take her to a hospital for emergency treatment.

Investigators and firemen worked most of today to find the cause of the explosion of dynamite blasting powder and dynamite caps stores at the company. The area remained roped off as the dynamite caps were being picked up by a cleanup detail over a three block area.

3 Persons Injured In Accidents

FERRIDAY (Special — Three persons were hospitalized in two separate highway accidents on Highway 65 near here yesterday.

W. K. HUNT, 60, of Baton Rouge and his wife, Jewel Hunt, 52, were in Ferriday hospital following an accident at the Louisiana and Arkansas railroad crossing south of the Ferriday city limits. Hunt suffered deep lacerations about the face and neck and his wife sustained a broken left leg, right arm and right index finger as well as cuts about the right eye.

The accident occurred about 9 a.m. when Hunt, hearing a train whistle for the crossing, applied his brakes and skidded off the rain-slick highway. The car turned over and skidded onto the tracks. Witnesses stated the train, proceeding slowly, was able to stop before striking the car.

In a second accident involving two cars Mrs. Leslie Dale, 24, of Gonzales, suffered back and leg injuries. She was reported in satisfactory condition today at Ferriday hospital.

The collision occurred when the driver of the car in which Mrs. Dale was a passenger turned across the highway toward a driveway about five miles south of Ferriday and into the path of another vehicle. No other injuries were reported in the accident.

TURNCOAT FREED—Dressed in civilian clothes, Edward Dickenson, 27-year-old Korean War turncoat from Cracker's Neck, Va., walks away from front gate of the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., after his release. The former Army corporal was sentenced to a 10-year term after his conviction by a court martial May 4, 1954, for collaborating with the enemy while a prisoner of war. This term later was reduced to five years and further reduced by credit for good behavior. His first words as he left the prison: "I'm sure glad to get out of here." (AP Wirephoto)

DICKINSON

Turncoat Released From U.S. Prison

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 23 (UP)—Ex-GI Edward Dickenson, former Korean War prisoner who dislikes being called a turncoat, was freed from the U S. disciplinary barracks today with the hope of becoming a Baptist minister.

There was little bitterness in the 27-year-old former backwoods corporal who said he has had 90 days of freedom in the past seven years.

"I guess those Army guys just did their duty in sending me to prison," he said with a smile. Those Army officers and the Chinese together—the Chinese took me prisoner—I guess they just did what they had to do."

Dickenson, of Big Stone Gap. Va., served 3 1-2 years of a five year sentence and was freed on good behavior. He originally was sentenced to 10 years at hard labor, but the sentence was reduced to five years last March 29.

Dickenson said he hopes to enter the Free Will Baptist Bible college at Nashville, Tenn., in January to begin his study for the ministry.

"Money will be the biggest problem," he told the United Press. 'I got the equivalent of a high school education at the D-P (disciplinary barracks) and think I can meet the entrance requirements."

Dickenson had a fifth grade education and was 20 years old when he enlisted in the Army in 1950 shortly before the Korean War began. In addition to getting his high school education at the D-P, he also attended a furniture repair and cabinet making school and said he hoped to operate a furniture repair shop in Nashville while going to Bible college.

"I'm going to do my best to teach people about the threat of communism—teach them what the Communists are trying to do," Dickenson said. He left the prison with the Rev. Lester Jones, Baptist organizer in Kansas City. Jones said he feared the Communists might take over this country within 10 years.

PHYSICIST AND ROCKET—Maurice Dubin, physicist of the Air Force Cambridge Research Center, in Bedford, Mass., displays a piece of the nose section of the Aerobee rocket which launched the pellets that raced from the earth toward the sun. The two photos at right are of the explosion itself, 54 miles aloft. (AP Wirephoto)

FREE Appraisal of Your House

If you're thinking about selling your house, let us come out and appraise it. We can tell you how much you should expect to get for it.

We Can Handle Hard-To-Sell Houses

Through our financing connections, which provide unlimited mortgage money, we can sell houses others may not be able to sell because of location, two bedroom size, age, etc.

Since our financing requires less down payment, we make it easier for a prospect to buy your house. For example, a $10,000 house a buyer would need only $300 . . . plus a small closing cost to move in.

You'll Be Surprised How Thanksgiving Holiday Started

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Staff Writer

Housewives slaving over a hot oven will never believe it, but the idea for making Thanksgiving a national holiday came from a suffragette editor who campaigned all her life to set women free.

Had she envisioned the kitchen bondage that Thanksgiving brought about for her fellow females (a word she detested), militant feminist Sarah Josepha Hale, the high priestess of fashion in the mid-19th century, might have dropped the whole thing in favor of one of her many other causes.

Sarah collected causes the way some women treasure old china or souvenir salt sellers.

During her 40 years as editor of Godey's Lady's Magazine, a sort of early American Vogue, she strode the journalistic ramparts in behalf of women's colleges, old sailors homes, free public playgrounds, day nurseries and missionary funds for "Heathen lands."

Too Few

"We have too few holidays," she wrote in 1827. "Thanksgiving like the Fourth of July should be a national festival observed by all our people . . . as an exponent of our Republican institutions."

That was the opening gun. For the next 35 years, Sarah pestered presidents and governors and congressmen with all her editorial skill and the mounting prestige of Godey's Magazine. Both were considerable.

While firing off spirited, impassioned letters to Presidents Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan and Lincoln, she kept the cause alive on the home front with tempting Thanksgiving menus, like "ham soaked in cider for three weeks stuffed with sweet potatoes and baked in maple syrup," but always insisted that roast turkey and pumpkin pie were "an indispensable part of a good and true Yankee Thanksgiving."

Went To Bat

Before Sarah went to bat, Thanksgiving was celebrated in a haphazard and sporadic fashion

The Pilgrims, of course, got the ball rolling at Plymouth in 1621, the autumn after the Mayflower landed, when as colonist Edward Winslow reported: "Our harvest being gotten in, our governor sent four men on fowling so that we might in a more special manner rejoyce together."

Of the 101 passengers who arrived on the Mayflower, only 55 lived long enough to sit down to the first Thanksgiving dinner. The survivors had suffered cold, hunger and disease, had been terrified by Indians "skulking about" and frightened near out of their wits by the nightly "roar of lions" and occasional wolves who "sat on their tayles and grinned" at them.

Still, they had much to be thankful for. The Indians had proved friendly, two even spoke English, and the harvest had been bountiful.

Although there were only five adult women on hand to do the cooking, the first Thanksgiving feast actually lasted three days and included dishes that ranged from turkey, deer, lobster and clams to watercress salad, baked Indian pudding and two varieties of wine and Holland beer. Pumpkin pie didn't make the original menu because the Pilgrims had not yet learned what to do with this outsized vegetable.

French Sent To Fort Leavenworth

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 23 (UP)—Barksdale Air Force Base said today former Air Force Capt. George French, convicted by court martial for attempting to peddle atomic secrets to Russia, has been sent to Ft. Leavenworth prison.

He was sentenced to life in prison after a court martial board convicted him in October.

His conviction was approved when reviewed by the Second Air Force Command at Barksdale.

The judge advocate general in Washington must review the case before the sentence is final.

Child Injured Slightly In Mishap Here

An 8 - year - old Monroe girl escaped serious injury shortly after 5 p.m. yesterday when she dashed across the 100 block of Third Street into the path of a slow - moving car.

Margaret Sherry Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wright of 610 Benton street, was treated at St. Francis hospital for a cut on the face and lip, and a sknned knee, after she ran from behind a car in the south - bound lane of traffice into the opposite lane.

Mrs. Ida O. Henson, 311 N. Seventh Street, driving a 1950 sedan, said the youngster darted from behind the other car into her lane of traffic. Mrs. Henson slammed on the brake, and the child was merely bumped by the auto, although she fell to the street.

A Monroe police officer who witnessed the accident said that no charges would be pressed. The child was taken to the hospital by a Mulhearn ambulance.

The mishap occurred when the youngster, who had attended a movie with two of her brothers and a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hill, ran across the street to get into Mrs. Hill's waiting auto.

Weather Aids Firefighters In California

AZUSA, Calif., Nov. 23 (UP)—Some 1,500 firefighters battling a 25,000-acre fire in Angeles National Forest today were aided by "vastly improving" weather conditions, leading officials to hope for complete control of the blaze Sunday night.

For the first time since it broke out 20 miles northwest of Los Angeles Thursday, aerial tankers were able to drop water bombs on the fire today. Helicopters also took to the air for the first time to supervise firefighting operations and carry men into previously inaccessible areas.

Earlier, violent winds had sent the flames racing so quickly through brush and timber in the San Gabriel mountains that authorities dared not put firefighters in its path and aircraft were unable to make flights.

One of the worst Santa Anna windstorms in years, with gusts over 75 miles an hour, was sweeping Southern California when the flames broke out Thursday after a portable stove was overturned accidentally at a convict road camp. The winds had died down for the most part in the area today.

Today, U. S. Forest Service officials, who estimated the blaze caused 25 million dollars damage to the valuable watershed, said that if "the weather remains as good as it is and keeps improving as expected, we look for complete control about 6 p. m. tomorrow."

They said about 16 miles of the fire's estimated 40-mile perimeter were yet to be controlled.

SCARE

Possible tragedy - a car overturned in the deep water of LaFourche bayou - is the impression that an area law - enforcement officer got yesterday morning, when he saw a tire partly submerged in the bayou in Ouachita Parish. State Police and the American Legion rescue truck were summoned and officials rowed a boat out to the location. It was just a floating tire, and the case was closed.

FOR YOU NEW MEMBERS, LET ME OUTLINE THE PROGRAM OF THE CIVIL AIR PATROL...
CADET CANYON, ARE YOU LISTENING?
HUH? OH, YES'M! I SURE AM! I'M DOWNRIGHT FASCINATED!
YOU WILL LEARN THE MANY ASPECTS OF AVIATION RIGHT HERE AT HIGGS AIR FORCE BASE! WE WILL START WITH THE CONTROL TOWER
CADET CANYON, AM I BORING YOU?
OH, NO, MA'AM! -I--
HIGGS TOWER, THIS IS COL. CANYON IN AIR FORCE JET 86! DO YOU READ ME? OVER...
LOUD AND CLEAR, COL. CANYON! OVER
WH-WHY, THAT'S MY KISSIN' COUSIN — STEVIE B. CANYON!
CADET CANYON!
MISS, YOU CAN'T TOU---
COUSIN STEVIE, THIS IS POTEET! CAN'T YOU SHAKE OFF THAT OL' GENERAL YOU'RE HAULIN'— AN' COME TO SEE ME?
LAW ME, SCOOTER, I GOOFED! I RECKON YOU'RE ASHAMED OF ME SOMETHIN' AWFUL!
OH, NO, POTEET! WE ALL ENVY... YOU HAVIN' A...GUARDIAN LIKE COL... CANYON!
SCOOTER! THERE'S A POLICE CAR IN FRONT OF YOUR HOUSE!
N-NOPOTEETIT'S N-NEXTDOOR ATTHECOLONEL INDEXES!
THERE THEY ARE, OFFICER! — BOTH OF THEM!
MAYBE I SHOULDN'T HAVE CUT THE POWER IN MRS. INDEX'S RADIO SET SO WE COULD GET IN TO SEE HER!
THEY WERE WITH ME ALL THAT AFTERNOON -FIXING MY RADIO...
IS THAT TRUE? DID YOU REPAIR A SET FOR MRS. INDEX?
W-WHY, YES!..BUT IT WAS ALL A SORTA-- WELL, A---
THINK HARD ABOUT THIS, GIRLS! AN ENEMY OF MRS. INDEX'S WAS FOUND DEAD IN A MOTEL... MRS. INDEX CLAIMS YOU TWO WERE HERE WITH HER AT THE TIME OF THE KILLING!
OH, YES! YES!

BRINGING UP FATHER
DON'T FORGET WE'RE GOING OUT TO DINNER TONIGHT- SO BE SURE TO GET HOME EARLY!
DON'T WORRY, DARLIN'-
NOW, REMEMBER, I WANT NO EXCUSES --LIKE LAST WEEK WHEN YOU CLAIMED YOUR TIE GOT CAUGHT IN THE DOOR OF THE OFFICE SAFE!
BUT IT REALLY HAPPENED, MAGGIE-
HOW CAN YOU SAY THAT WITH A STRAIGHT FACE?!
I'M A LITTLE TIRED OF YOUR TALL TALES --JUST MAKE IT YOUR BUSINESS TO GET HOME EARLY!
IT'S ALMOST FIVE! I'D BETTER GIT STARTED! MAGGIE WARNED ME NOT TO BE LATE GITTIN' HOME!
I'LL HAVE TO BE CAREFUL NOT TO GIT MY NECKTIE CAUGHT IN THE DOOR! THE LAST TIME IT HAPPENED MAGGIE WOULDN'T BELIEVE ME!
OOPS! -- I DID IT AGAIN!! MAGGIE'LL BRAIN ME FOR THIS!!
CLANG
GOLLY, I'M IN LUCK-- THAT PHONE'S WITHIN REACH!!
GOOD-BYE, MOTHER!-- YOU LOOK LOVELY TONIGHT!
THANK YOU, DEAR! YOUR DADDY IS TAKING ME TO DINNER! I THINK I'LL WEAR MY PEARLS!
MAGGIE, I HATE TO CONFESS THIS---BUT MY NECKTIE GOT CAUGHT IN THE SAFE AGAIN!! Y-YOU'LL HAVE TO COME DOWN HERE AND BRING A SCISSORS.
IT'S THE ONLY WAY I KIN GIT FREE, I TELL YOU!! NOW DO AS I SAY AND STOP ARGUIN'--
I'M NOT ARGUING!--THERE'S A VERY GOOD REASON WHY I CAN'T LEAVE THE HOUSE!

Little Orphan Annie
"LET US PROBE THE SILENT PLACES, LET US SEEK WHAT LUCK BETIDE US." -ROBERT W. SERVICE-
··· SO FIVE HORSEMEN RIDE QUIETLY INTO THE NIGHT ·····
FASTEST SHOOTIN' I EVER SEEN!
NOBODY EVER COULD'A DRAWED FASTER ···
THEY SAY OLD SAM, HIS GREAT-GRAMPAW, OUT-DRAWED 'EM ALL ···
I KNOWED HIM ··· HE WARN'T NO QUICKER'N THIS FELLER ··· JEST DON'T COME NO QUICKER!
THE DAYS OF GUN-SLICKS AND BORDER RUFFIANS ARE OVER!
THIS IS A LAND OF LAW AND PEACE!
THAT MURDERER!
I KNOW, WOLF! SOME O' TH' FOLKS ARE AGIN HIM ··· BUT MOSTLY WIMMIN AND CHICKEN LIVERS!
YOU'RE AFRAID OF HIM, WOBBLER!
DANG TOOTIN', I AM! HE'S TH' SUDDENEST FELLER EVER HIT THIS TOWN ··· SINCE HIS GREAT-GRAMPAW, THAT IS ··· SOME SAY HE'S EVEN FASTER'N OLD SAM WAS ··· I'LL HAVE TO TAKE HIM MYSELF!
WAL, IF YOU DO, GIT READY TO BEAT A LYNCHIN' PARTY OUT O' TH' STATE ··· AFTER TH' WAY YOU'VE ROBBED 'MOST EVER'BODY O' THEIR HOMES AN' RANCHES ···
WAL, WOLF, THEY SORT O' HOPE THIS SAM IS GOIN' TO BE TH' FRIEND OLD SAM WAS, AND THEY'LL LIVE AGAIN ··· LOT O' REAL EARNEST FOLKS WOULDN'T TAKE KINDLY A-TALL TO SEEIN' SAM HURT ···
EH? WHAT IS IT, MARIA?
PEDRO IS OUTSIDE, SEÑOR ··· IF YOU WOULD COME, PLEASE ···
HELLO, PEDRO ··· WHY ALL THIS DARK OF NIGHT BUSINESS? WHO ARE THOSE WITH YOU?
SH-H, SEÑOR ··· WE HAVE A HORSE FOR YOU ··· YOUR HORSE STAYS, IN CASE THEY CHECK ···
WE GO SILENTLY OVER THE BACK TRAIL ··· BY DAYLIGHT WE WILL BE FAR UP THE VALLEY ··· YOU ARE ARMED?
I AM ALWAYS ARMED, PEDRO ···
11-24-57
BUT IT'S SO BLASTED DARK! WHO ARE THESE OTHER PEOPLE?
DR. PIP, WHO IS ALSO CORONER ··· ··· ONE F.B.I. MAN ··· AND THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF OUR STATE ···
WHAT? BUT WHERE ARE YOU TAKING US, PEDRO?
TO MEET AN OLD INDIAN ··· AN UNCLE OF MY WIFE, TO BE EXACT ···
